Your Worst Enemy Writing

With the rheumatism is one individual whom, if you have a Christian spirit, you would forgive. He is, no matter what his delinquencies, punishment enough. Nothing short of Pophet could enhance his misery. Moreover, he is in serious peril. The disease is always prone to attack his heart and kill him instantly.

As a means of curing this disease, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has the highest reputation and the most authoritative professional sanction. Its use in the preliminary stage of the complaint is the wisest precautionary measure rheumatic invalids can possibly adopt. The Bitters is also a remedy of the greatest utility in malarial and kidney trouble, dyspepsia and liver complaint, constipation and nervousness. It counteracts the effects of hardship and exposure in damp or inclement weather, and is a capital promoter of appetite and sleep. Give this fine remedy the persistent trial to which all medicines of standard reputation are entitled.

A Very Thirsty Dog.

A young Wisconsin man, so the tale goes, owned a dog of mongrel breed, which had added to its one great undesirable quality of low birth the more offensive one of the mange. The young man determined to sever his relations with the animal, and with that end in view he secured a large wash-tub and put staples in the inside of it, with ropes attached to them, to securely hold the dog and keep its head under water. He caught the dog just as it came in after a long tramp in the dusty road. The doomed animal was preparing to make its third at the hydrant, when its master grabbed it and tied it down in the tub. Then he turned the water on and let it run until the dog's head was totally submerged. He could not bear to see the poor brute suffer, so he went away for a quarter of an hour. He came back expecting to find the dog dead. Strange to say, however, the dog was very much alive. There was no water in the tub; neither was there any leak in it. The dog had simply quenched his thirst.—Philadelphia Record.
