friend, who advised Duncan to go to Tombstone a new town just starting up. Duncan proceeded Tombstone, reaching here in early part of October 1879. He drove up on the road, now Allen street, from Water vale, his last camping place, and as he reached the point where the Arlington hotel now stands he saw a man strike another fellow with a claw-hammer, the poor fellow was "deader than a toe nail" within a few minutes. This was Judge Duncan's first impression of Tombstone, there being then forty houses and about 100 people in the town. The town had been started in the early spring of 1879.

Vandal Destroying Petrified Forest

A Los Angeles dispatch states that G. W. Hill, chief of the field division of the United States office in that city, who just recently was in Tombstone, has proceeded to the petrified forest reserve in Northern Arizona to investigate the report that vandals, with dynamite, are destroying some of the finest specimens in the forest; that several large shipments of crystals have been made from different stations on the Santa Fe, near the reserve, to eastern points. The presence of the vandals was discovered by Emory R. Rowland of New Haven, Connecticut, who was traveling through the forest, and he notified President Taft.

Madero Sympathizer Murdered at Hereford

Deputy Sheriff A. W. Howe was called to Hereford yesterday to take into custody a Mexican named Refugio Encinas and last evening lodged his prisoner in the county jail. Encinas, it is alleged, got into a drunken row, during which a heated discussion was had in reference to the present revolution now in progress in Mexico. The defendant being a Diaz sympathizer took exception to the continued cheering of a fellow countryman, who insisted in using the phrase of "Viva Madero," and as a result of his hilarity he was shot at the ranch of the Greene Cattle company from a bullet wound. The prisoner will be given a preliminary hearing in this city on Thursday on a charge of murder.

April Term of Court To Be a Long One

That the April term of the district court of Cochise county will without a doubt be one of the largest ever held in this judicial district can only be evidenced by the size of the court calendar which consists of 222 pages and containing 425 cases, and if the proposed program of the court is carried out, that tribunal will be in session until late in July, and possibly run into the month of August. The following figures have been compiled from the records of the clerk

Democrats Held a Caucus in Harmony

At a caucus of the Democratic members of the house representatives held in harmony and good feeling on Saturday. Many matters were considered. The most interesting information coming from the caucus, however, is that outlining the program adopted for action during the special session which convened today. This consists of revision downward of the tariff, schedule by schedule, the number of schedules opened to be determined later. It will be decided by the action of the senate. The woolen, textile, cotton and steel schedules are named. Canadian reciprocity tariff agreement. Arizona and New Mexico constitution. Popular election of senators. Publicity of campaign contributions before as well as after election. This program is subject to changes in party caucus, but it is believed by the Democrats that if all goes well with them as they can reasonably hope, the program is lengthy enough to hold them in Washington until well into the summer.

Looks Like Early Extension of E.P. & S.W.

At Tucson the El Paso and Southern has purchased a tract of land east of the city limits at $100 per acre which will be used at interchange yards with the Southern Pacific traffic. The options for the right-of-way through Tucson have been secured by the citizens of Tucson patriotically subscribing $75,000 and everything looks like the early extension of the E. P. & S. W. to Tucson. The latest surveys of the route to Tucson start the road from a point between Fairbank and Land Station which skirts the hills and gives an easy grade over the rolling country beyond Benson thence to Tucson. Phoenixites are now getting interested and arranging to invite further extension of the road from Tucson to the Capital city.

A. L. Grow Elected Secretary T.C.M. Co.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Tombstone Consolidated Mines Company held in this city, A. L. Grow was elected secretary, vice H. C. Williams, resigned. Mr. Grow is one of Tombstone's oldest and most highly respected citizens and has been identified with the T. C. M. Company ever since its inception, some ten years ago, and election to the position of secretary is indeed quite a compliment to him. Mr. Grow has done a great deal in keeping Tombstone before the mining public and it is the sincere hope of all that he will be able to do so for many

"I violate no confidence in saying that so far as the house is concerned Arizona and New Mexico will be speedily admitted and be admitted together." Champ Clark.

Arizon, the Sun Kissed Land

"Arizon, the Sun Kissed Land" was the caption over a soldier's letter from Fort Bowie, Arizona, in 1877 in one of the Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, newspapers, which appealed to a then active and ambitious young man, in the prime of his manhood, so strongly that he invested his small savings into a span of young mules and a "huck-board" and began his travel towards "Arizon, the sun kissed land." This then young man was no other than Judge James F. Duncan, the white haired grand old man, pioneer Tombstone and much valued historian, who addressed the Boy Scouts at the Congregational church last evening and in an interesting and entertaining manner related the history of Tombstone from its first inception, and his own travel from Pittsburg to Tombstone. The Judge kept his audience interested for over an hour and then did not tell one-fourth of his knowledge of early pioneer life. He will relate the second chapter of his story on Tuesday evening, April 15.

Lady Maccabees Entertained

The Schieffelin Hive of the Ladies' of the Maccabees at the Masonic Hall last evening entertained a party of sixty friends, ladies and gentlemen. The ladies of this popular fraternity have a well known established standard as hospitable hostesses, and judging from the enjoyable time had at the last evening's affair, all the past high record marks were left to the rear and a new mark, several notches higher, established. Tombstone society women were there gowned in handsome attires, and an equal number of admiring men were there. A quartette of ladies sang several selections, and the High School Orchestra played a few numbers also a recitation by Miss Collins, after which many games were played. A lunch of salads, sandwiches, cake and coffee were served about 10 o'clock. The guests adjourned to their respective homes about 11:30.
