The Reckoning.

It's well we should feel that life's a reckoning we can't make twice over; there's no real making amends in this world, any more nor you can avoid a wrong subtraction by doing your addition right.—George Eliot.

SUIT WITH LIGHT WAISTCOAT

Suits pursue a happy middle course this spring in the matter of decoration. None of them are uncompromisingly plain and few of them are much trimmed. Small covered buttons make a quiet finishing touch for the example of faultless tailoring shown in the picture. The coat just escapes closing at the front and shows a slight cutaway below its buckle and strap fastening. It is worn over a light waistcoat and has an odd new sleeve that widens below the elbow.
