THIRTY-SEVEN DIE IN LEHIGH VALLEY TRAIN WRECK

Train Plunges From Trestle Near Manchester N. Y.

SOME INJURED WILL DIE

Two Coaches Plunged Down 40-Foot Embankment to Bed of Shallow Stream

Manchester, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Lehigh Valley passenger train No. 4, speeding eastward behind time, ran into a spread rail on a trestle near here yesterday, and two day coaches from the midsection of the train plunged downward 40 feet, striking the east embankment like a pair of projectiles.

In the awful plunge and crash at least 37 persons were last night believed to have been killed and more than 60 injured. The injuries of several are so serious that it is feared they will die.

The wreck was the worst in the history of the Lehigh Valley line in New York and one of the most disastrous ever recorded on the system. Crowded with passengers, many of whom were war veterans and ex-servicemen from the Grand Army encampment at Rochester, train No. 4, made up of 14 cars, drawn by two big Mogul engines, was 40 minutes late when it reached Rochester Junction, and from there sped eastward to make up time before reaching Genesee.

The engine and two day coaches had just passed the center of a 400-foot trestle over Canandaigua outlet, 150 yards east of the station at Manchester, at 12:35 o'clock, when the lead man car Austin, the third of a long train, left the rails. It dragged the dining car with it and two day coaches and two Pullmans, in this order, followed.

All bumped over the ties a short distance when the coupling between day coach No. 237 and the rear end of the diner broke. The forward end of the train dragged the derailed Pullman, Austin and the diner over safely, after which both plunged down the south embankment and over the trestle and plunged into the shallow river bed more than 40 feet below. The end of the first day coach that went over struck the east embankment of solid masonry and with the other 60-foot cars behind it, both shot against the wall with terrific force.

Both cars were filled with humanity as the plunge was made and in a few moments the cars lay a mass of crumpled wood, metal and glass, under which a hundred, men, women and children, many of whom were killed instantly, were buried. The most destruction occurred in the day coach No. 237 and a dozen persons were later taken dead from the second day coach, which, having followed the first over the trestle, snapped its rear coupling and thus saved the rest of the train from being dragged over. This second day coach struck on the bottom and stood end on the rear end projecting a few feet above the top of the trestle. All of the passengers in this car were piled in the bottom of broken seats at the bottom of the car.

As the groans of the injured and dying were heard below, all possible speed was made, but it was several minutes before anybody reached the cars at the bottom to effect rescues. The cars did not catch fire. Axes were secured and body after body was removed and carried by the rescuers knee deep in the river bed to the bank on the west side of the trestle. There the dead and injured were laid out on the damp ground while planks and timber, taken from buildings in course of construction, were requisitioned and a field hospital was established. It was more than an hour before many of the injured could be removed and special trains from both Geneva and Rochester brought physicians, nurses and medical supplies. Hundreds awaited treatment, and the railroad station at Manchester, a cider mill and an ice house were used to give temporary shelter and treatment to the refugees. It was necessary to chop through the sides and bottom of the day coach at the bottom and the work of removing the victims moved with painful slowness. Death had come swiftly to many, a large number of the dead having had their skulls crushed in when they were thrown with terrific velocity against the car seats and projections. The mortality was high among the older passengers most of whom were veterans of the Civil war and their wives.

VERMONT APPLE GROWERS

Interesting Meeting in Most Valuable Orchard in New England

Charlotte, Aug. 24.—The Vermont State Horticultural society held its 25th annual meeting today at the farm of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Holmes in Charlotte.

The forenoon was spent in looking over the orchard, where demonstrations in dynamite blasting of tree stumps, stones and compact soil were given by E. C. Nichols, representing the E. J. DuPont Powder company of New York City. Following this the 25th annual assembly on the lawn and enjoyed a basket lunch, which was supplemented by hot coffee generously furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Holmes.

After lunch G. W. Perry, president of the Horticultural society, introduced Prof. Wilfred Phelps of South Hero, who rendered "Champlain," a song of his own composition, in a manner that pleased all. This was followed by an address on "Apple Diseases" by Prof. H. F. Lutman of the University of Vermont.

The Commissioner of Agriculture O. L. Martin spoke briefly on "Agricultural Possibilities," emphasizing the opportunity for successful apple growing in the Champlain valley.

C. F. Smith, manager of the State Grange, compared the methods of apple culture in Vermont with those practiced in Michigan, Colorado and on the Pacific coast.

The principal address of the afternoon was given by Andrew Elliott of New York City, who emphasized the advantages to be gained from reciprocity with Canada, and laid special stress on the desirability and necessity of an agricultural education for all who intend to make farming or horticulture a successful operation.

The attendance, which was about 350, was not limited to horticulturists, there being many professional, business and newspaper men from Burlington and other nearby towns as well as campers from Cedar Beach and Thompson's Point, and several automobile parties, including cars from New York state and Massachusetts, which shows how widely known and beneficial the meetings of the Vermont State Horticultural society have become.

Many cameras were in evidence and several pictures taken of the orchard and the guests as they were assembled for lunch and the afternoon program. The good time enjoyed by all was due to the hospitality so generously extended by Mr. and Mrs. Holmes.

BIRDMAN ATWOOD ARRIVES SAFELY IN NEW YORK

Boston Aviator Breaks All Previous Long Distance Records.

FLIGHT OF 1265 MILES

Flying Time for the Entire Distance Was Twenty-eight Hours and Thirty-one Minutes

New York, Aug. 25.—Harry N. Atwood, the 27 year old Boston aviator, arrived in New York on his aeroplane yesterday, the first man in history to travel as far as from St. Louis to New York by way of Chicago, in a heavier than air machine. His safe landing on Governor's Island, after flying down from Nyack, N. Y., above the Hudson river through a fog was a notable incident in the annals of aeronautics.

The aviator not only broke the world's record, covering 1265 miles in an air line of perhaps 100 more miles with his detours, but he flew all the way in the same bi-plane and with no important mishaps.

Atwood covered the distance in an actual flying time of 28 hours and 31 minutes. His craft weighs with its passenger exactly 1192 pounds.

The final lap in the long journey was a glide through the low-lying clouds and haze veiling the Hudson 25 miles from Nyack, N. Y., where Atwood had stopped over night. He landed, dapper and smiling in the arms of a handful of United States army officers and men who hailed him as America's greatest aviator.

"Well, I'm glad it's ended," said Atwood, as he hopped from his machine. "I guess the long distance flight for me will be from San Francisco to the Atlantic coast."

Atwood's coming was unexpected on Governor's Island as it had been believed that he would land at Sheephead Bay, but a belated telegram from New York changed his plans at the last minute.

Atwood left Nyack at 1:53 o'clock in the afternoon. He followed the Hudson at a low altitude the entire distance.

New York heard of his coming and took to the housetops. As he sped down the Hudson the whirr of his engine was lost in the din that broke from the whistles of river craft and factories lining the shores.

Thousands clustered around Grant's Tomb and along Riverside Park shouted their enthusiasm when Atwood passed. The aviator was flying low and not very fast. As he approached Fifty-first street however, he rose to a height of about 200 feet swept in a complete circle from one side of river to the other and then started down stream once more.

At the Battery, as he circled Governor's Island for his landing the Harbor whistles shrieked and the crowds of thousands cheered. His landing was easy and graceful. An hour after he landed Atwood was on his way up town.

"I do not intend to do any more flying around New York until I return from my trip across the continent," he said. "I shall probably start from Los Angeles or San Francisco about October 1."

LIQUOR TRIAL AT NORTH ADAMS

Lawyer Niles and Police Chief Dineen in Lively Tilt

North Adams, Aug. 26.—Politics, the influence and prejudice of the police and of politicians, were injected into the opening day of the trial in the district court yesterday of J. A. Rosi, a liquor dealer charged by the commonwealth with violating the license laws. The case was heard by Judge W. F. Dineen, who was the principal witness, but several of the members of the jury were the firm of Niles, Lewis & Drysdale of North Adams and Pittsfield and Patrick J. Ashe appeared for the defendant, while City Solicitor Mark E. Couch represented the commonwealth. The commonwealth's case when court adjourned yesterday afternoon after an all-day session and the case was put over on continuance to Monday morning. Chief of Police W. F. Dineen, who was the principal witness, had the purpose of watching the saloon business of Rosi, the chief gave Mr. Niles the lie and said: "If any one does wrong I will punish him, whether it be Morrissey & Casey or any one else." Mr. Niles replied that he was not lying and continued his cross examination.

During the afternoon session several of the officers of the department were called to the stand and all admitted on cross examination that they had not been eye-witnesses to any illegal sales at the Rosi saloon. Several attempts of the attorney for the defense to inject references to other saloons and the attitude of the authorites toward them were ruled out by the court, who held that Rosi was on the stand and that his case alone should be heard. Officer Patrick Walsh upon whose testimony revolved the entire case, testified during the afternoon session that he knew nothing of the illegal sale originally until one O'Neill stopped him on Main street. Several saloons of liquor were being sold at Rosi's saloon. The officer said that he went there with O'Neill and saw O'Neill pass in a dollar and receive in exchange a bottle of whisky and the change. He said the bartender who made the deal was named Broderick and the officer testified that O'Neill made the remark as he received the bottle and the change in the presence of the officer: "I've got you, you devil. This is the best." The officer testified that the saloon was pointed stool pigeon claimed that he had been robbed of $40 in the saloon some time before.

BIBRES FOR DIEGEL

Ex-Ohio Official Gets Plenty of Chances

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 25.—The state attorneys believe that between now and the close of court on September 9 there will be plenty of opportunity for Rodney J. Diegel, Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, to change his mind concerning his part and the part of a number of state senators in the bribery scandal.

He is constantly surrounded by indicted legislators and their attorneys and it is believed that had he been away from their influence, his confession would be forthcoming. His talk and actions today give the impression that he wants to confess, but is held back by certain influences. There are strong hints that Diegel has been promised a large sum of money for his silence, and is wavering between the temptation and his freedom from the penitentiary.

The company carries three machinists, something that has never been done before, for the handling of this one effect and during its long run in New York, the "Three Twins" was endorsed by the entire New York press. Ashton Stevens of the New York Journal said the "Three Twins" was a credit to Broadway.
