Mexican Affairs

General Villa sprang his coup too soon. The American forces are still in Vera Cruz. St. Paul Dispatch.

That affair in Europe has at last aroused the professional jealousy of Mexico.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

And the worst of it all is that we will be compelled to contemplate the pictures of Carranza and Villa all over again.—Utica Observer.

Henry Watterson is so overjoyed at the success of the administration's watchful waiting policy that he could bite himself in the neck.—Los Angeles Express.

If the United States forces remain in Vera Cruz for another period of watchful waiting it may presently dawn upon Mr. Villa that he spoke too soon.—New Haven Register.

It is all pitiful and exasperating. But we must not despair. The fighting spirit of the Mexicans, which Porfirio Diaz held in check thirty years, must be satisfied some day. Meanwhile our troops remain at Vera Cruz as a formidable hint to both Obregon and Villa that Americans must be protected by both sides.—New York Times.

General Villa has proved that he is a fighter of merit. He has also proved he has a strong sense of patriotism. But in his present attitude of earnest hostility to Carranza and his declaration that he will not submit their differences to mediation he demonstrates that he is not exactly the kind of patriot his bleeding country is looking for.—Brooklyn Standard-Union.

VALUE OF COUNTY AGENTS.

It is estimated from reports received by the office of farm management of the United States department of agriculture from the 156 county agents who have been working the past year in co-operation with the federal government that their work has been worth in the aggregate millions of dollars to the farmers whom they have served the past year. During the year these county agents have been directly responsible for the erection of 1,804 silos, the improvement of 617 farm buildings, the installation of forty water supply systems and the improvement in the sanitary condition and general appearance of 397 farm home premises. Through their activities there were purchased 719 registered sires and 4,365 dairy cows and other cattle. They also have had 16,927 cows tested for milk and butter fat percentage and 1,144 for tuberculosis, while they also vaccinated 105,806 hogs for cholera. The reports also show that the agents advised in the management of 3,941 farms, analyzed in detail 2,329 farms, made working plans for 2,105 farms and made rotation plans for 2,293 farms, while drainage plans were worked out for 425 farms. The use of lime on 23,271 acres, home mixed fertilizers on 4,333 and commercial fertilizers on 462 acres was also directly traceable to the county agents. Although the value of much of the work cannot be estimated, that which can be so measured is estimated at $10,000 in increased returns to farmers for each county agent who was engaged in 1913. An interesting feature in connection with the work of the county agents in Illinois is the organization by them of a state association. It is believed that this will make possible a measure of co-operation and interchange of valuable ideas and suggestions growing out of their everyday work that will be of great value to those in whose interests they are working.

SOME VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS.

A reader of these notes living near Bloomington, Ind., Dr. J. G. L. Myers, in a letter to the writer commenting upon a paragraph in these notes in reference to the control of corn smut states that rather than attempting to control the smut by planting the seed on smut free ground, he has been entirely successful in controlling it by selecting seed free from smut and storing it where it will not become contaminated with smut germs. His contention is that in a winter of average severity the smut germs in the ground are killed by the frost. Some valuable original recipes which the doctor has found useful in his own experience are also contained in his letter and are reproduced here with his permission. For gapes in chickens, first, clean up; second, a teaspoonful of turpentine in a soft mass for a hen and her brood; third, in extreme cases use a dropper of feather and put two or more drops in a chick's throat. One dose is usually sufficient. For scratches and grease heel use a saturated solution of salicylic acid in sweet oil, first washing with gasoline. As a result of the first recipe Dr. Myers was able to raise chickens on a farm on which the neighbors said it was impossible. Both recipes are worth cutting out and saving.

SPRAYING POTATOES.

Potato growers will be interested in the results of some experiments conducted by the Iowa experiment station in the spraying of growing potatoes with bordeaux mixture to prevent damage by blight. Those in charge of the experiment found that when the crop was sprayed three times at a cost of $3 per acre the yield was increased 11.8 bushels. Spraying five times at a cost of $5 per acre gave an increase of 25.64 bushels, while spraying seven times increased the crop 43.22 bushels per acre. The net profits from spraying seven times were twice as great as from spraying five times and five times as great as from spraying three times. When bugs were present either arsenate of lead or paris green were added to the bordeaux mixture.

HOGS IN SUMMER.

With hogs at $9 per hundredweight it is hardly poor management to show one's tongue at the ownerless of the animals to get the best of him to the extent of running them and allowing them to become overheated while loading them for market. And it is also a good idea to keep an eye on those who are helping in the work. Enormous losses are sustained each year during the heated season due to such methods in driving and loading. It is well to keep in mind the fact that overheating is more than likely to prove fatal to hogs; hence the greatest care and patience should be exercised in handling them during the hot summer months.

TO TEST SAND.

A very simple yet satisfactory method of testing whether sand or gravel is fit to use in cement work is to throw a good sized handful of it into a pail of clear water. If the addition of the material causes the water so that a small object cannot be seen at the bottom of the pail the sand or gravel, as the case may be, is not fit to use. The muddy condition of the water is due to dirt or clay, the presence of which in the cement work will cause it to disintegrate as a result of the action of the moisture in the earth and air.

DARLING'S VIEWS

Candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Issues

Ludlow, Sept. 29.—2000. Hiale K. Darling of Chelsea, candidate for the lieutenant-governorship on the Republican ticket, writes the Ludlow Tribune a reply to certain interrogatories in that paper. He says:—I would say that so far as I am aware the present method for the taxation of corporations is probably as good as can be devised and I do not know as to whether there is any objection to the rates of taxation fixed by statute. I do not favor abolishing the office of attorney general, although I do think that there should be some safeguard as to the amount of expense which may be incurred for detective service.

As to your inquiry regarding the "peculiar division of authority and responsibility in any administrative department of the state," I will simply say this: I would like to see the experiment tried of consolidating the various state agencies of the public service commission, the commissioner of taxes, the insurance commissioner, and perhaps the bank commissioners, might well devolve upon a single administrative board, to be known, say, as a "corporation commission." The members of this board should be paid such salaries as the services of first class men ought to command, and provision should be made for a suitable number of deputies and assistants. I think the headquarters of this board should be at the capitol of the state.

I would also state that I am in favor of abolishing the present per diem system for the payment of the members of the legislature, and adopting in lieu thereof a definite salary for the session.

In my judgment, legislation relating to the following subjects will be among the most important work to be transacted at the session of 1915: (a) General corporation law. (b) Revision of the statutes to conform to the constitutional amendments.

No Side Door Mail Delivery

Instructions were sent from Washington this week to postmasters in many cities directing them to have all mail delivered at the front doors of homes.

A good reason lies behind the new order which becomes effective in two months.

Numerous housewives have been accustomed to receive their letters and packages "from obliging carriers at rear and side doors, and the carriers have lost much time in covering circuitous routes just to please their patrons.

Whoever has a private mail box not located at the front of the house next to the street should move the same and do it now.

Lowering the cost of delivery and expediting the service will benefit everybody.—Boston Globe.
