Marshal J. Haggood was in Bennington Monday, coming down from Peru to join William H. Nichols on the trip to the Progressives national convention in Chicago. The two left last evening.

James Cone, who was taken to the North Adams hospital ten days ago for treatment, was removed to his home in Old Bennington the first of the week. His condition is improving and his complete recovery is expected.

The baccalaureate sermon of the Bennington High school graduating class is to be preached this year by the Rev. George S. Mills in the Second Congregational church the coming Sunday evening. The public is invited.

The senior examinations are now in progress at the high school as this is the last week of study. Next week is to be given over largely to closing up school work and detail in connection with graduating exercises. Commencement comes a week from Friday evening and the graduating exercises this year are to be followed by a supper in the Cockeyed Hat Tea Room after which comes the senior dance from 8 to 12 o'clock.

Besides frightening a team of horses and causing them to run away on Morgan street, Monday afternoon's severe thunderstorm also shot a bolt of lightning into the village and split a large-size tree on North street before the house of Mrs. Helen Hawks. The entire inside of the tree was torn out, following which the bolt shot into the ground without causing any serious damage to property in the vicinity. The lightning also interfered with phone and lighting connections in the vicinity of Carpenter hill which was cut off from the village well into Tuesday morning.

AUSTRIA'S OFFENSIVE

Vicenza, Center of Italian Architectural Splendor, Now Battleground

If the present offensive of the Austrian forces on the Italian front develops in accordance with the predictions of military critics, the fertile plains of Vicenza, twenty miles south of Piazza, where the Tyrolean border has been crossed, will soon be harvesting its "grapes of wrath" instead of the product of the Italian vine for which this section is famous. The National Geographic society's war geography bulletin, issued from its Washington, D. C., headquarters, describes this area of hostilities.

"Closely massed on both banks of the small Bacchiglione river, Vicenza, with an urban population of 35,000, has been an important town of northern Italy since the early Roman days, when it was known as Vicetia," says the bulletin. "It has not played a

DOUBLY PROVEN

Bennington Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

This Bennington citizen testified long ago.

Told of quick relief—of undoubted benefit.

The facts are now confirmed. Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit. Henry Pulver, 172 Beach St., Bennington, says: "I worked hard and was on my feet constantly and as the result, my kidneys became disordered. My back was lame and sore and I had headache and dizzy spells. The kidney secretions caused me annoyance. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a supply at Cole's Drug Store. I noticed improvement from the first and after I had used two boxes, the backache left and my kidneys became normal."

OVER FIVE YEARS LATER, Mr. Pulver said: "Kidney complaint has never returned since I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills." Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Pulver has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn, Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

News of the Town and Village Told Briefly for Busy Readers

The high school faculty are much incensed over an article which appeared in the Banner a few nights ago clipped from another newspaper in which high school students are urged to buy their graduating togs and accessories "at home." Principal Mabrey wishes it known that ever since he has headed the school this has been the procedure to buy everything connected with graduation in town and has urged the pupils to do likewise, although this was formerly not altogether the practice.

thrilling role in Italian history, however, but is noted rather for its architectural splendor than for its achievement in arms.

"The surrounding plain, whose luxuriant mulberry trees, with their armies of silk worms, so soon may be supplanted by the cypress fronds of sorrow over countless soldiers' graves, extends to the north through Thiene and Schio, two manufacturing towns in the Leogra valley, and to the east as far as Venice, forty miles distant. Sixteen miles to the west, beyond the Berici mountains, lies Verona, with its many Shakespearian associations. Beautiful villas and blossoming fields are a feature of this landscape now overcast with the shadow of invading Austrians.

"Vicenza's share in the history-making of the early middle ages was as a capital of a Lombard duchy. It was one of the cities which formed the Lombard league in the twelfth century, opposing Frederick Barbarossa during the several campaigns whereby he attempted to re-establish the Western empire on a Charlemagne scale. In 1236 the city was stormed and pillaged by the Sicilian emperor, Frederick II, a catastrophe which the inhabitants were able to bear with more equanimity after this ruler's overwhelming defeat before the walls of Parma, when his imperial crown was placed in mockery on the head of a hunch-back beggar who was given a 'triumphal' entry into the victorious town. Early in the fourteenth century Vicenza asserted and secured its independence from Padua, but a hundred years later it came under the extensive sway of Venice.

"The most distinguished name in Vicenza's hall of fame is that of one of the greatest architects of the Italian renaissance, Andrea Palladio, who broke away from the excessively ornate style of his contemporaries and turned, perhaps, too reverently to the simple, stately standards of ancient Rome. His handiwork is pre-eminently dominant in his birthplace, so much so in fact that a famous American novelist has complained that "the cold hand of that friend of virtuous poverty in architecture lies heavy upon his native city." One of the most interesting structures designed by him is the immense Olympic theatre, modeled after the ancient theatres, and dedicated in 1584.

the precocious peasant boy Mantegna, who left his flock of sheep at the age of eleven in order to become a great painter under the patronage of the unique Squarcone, a tailor famous both as art connoisseur and teacher. The stiffness of Mantegna's draperies is said to be accounted for by his custom of drawing from models clad in paper or in gummed fabrics. As an engraver Mantegna's fame is assured by his plate entitled "Entombment," said to have had a greater influence on art than any other ever executed, for its composition was adopted by Raphael, Holbein and Durer."
