Learn something about the construction of a phonograph.

One of the first things you should learn is that the tone of a phonograph is most important quality—its dependent upon the throat through which the sound is sent.

The most wonderful violins in history were those made by Stradivari and Amati two centuries ago, now preserved as priceless treasures.

The throat of the Starr phonograph is also made of Silver Grain Spruce, the wonder wood. Its tones are so remarkable, compared with those of other phonographs, that it has been called, "the singing throat" of the Starr.

Come in and hear the Starr played, just to show yourself what the "singing throat" can actually do.

The new Gennett records of the same make are equally superior and will improve the tone of any phonograph.

Both are in the best of health at the ages of 70 and 75 respectively.

For the first time in seven years County Clerk Frank D. E. Stowe of Windham has summoned grand jurors to attend county court.

Court will convene in Newfane Tuesday, Sept. 2, Judge Stanley C. Wilson presiding.

The docket contains an unusually large number of cases, many of them involving several thousand dollars.

Samuel Thomas, a 13-year-old Burlington boy, was sentenced to the Vermont industrial school at Vergennes for the remainder of his minority by Justice J. P. Ladd in Burlington city court. Thomas went into the home of Edward Sumner and while the family was sleeping, stole an Eight 17 jeweled gold watch, the property of Mr. Sumner and sold it to a chum for 27 cents.

The watch was recovered. Thomas will remain in the school until Nov. 19, 1927.

Albert J. Boynton, manager of the Hotel Berwick in Rutland, has purchased the hotel, including the furniture, the Rutland annex and a lease on the Center street building for a number of years.

For 35 years Mr. Boynton has been connected with the hotel. The hotel was organized into a company on Jan. 1, 1916, as the Berwick Hotel, Inc. and proceeded as a stock company.

At the time of the purchase by Mr. Boynton, George Vail, proprietor of Rutland was president of the company. Mr. Vail's wife will continue his residence in Rutland.

1920. Where do they all go. Exercise toys that develop a child's body, or mechanical toys that train the mind are the American idea of what a child should play with.

The American toy industry should be perpetuated. The White factory is a good example. Good Americans are going to boost everlastingly the sale of things made here at home.
