Time to Do Something.

Four-year-old Bobby was stroking his cat before the fireplace in perfect content. The cat, almost happy, began to purr loudly. Bobby gazed at her as for a while, then suddenly seized her by the tail and dragged her roughly away from the hearth. His mother interposed; "You must not hurt your kitty, Bobby." "I'm not," said Bobby, protesting, "but I've got to get her from the fire. She's beginning to boil!"—The Argonaut.

After Effects of "Flu" Now Overcome and Middlebury Citizen Feels Like A New Person—Gives Tanlac Credit.

"If ever a medicine made a new man out of a fellow, Tanlac certainly has done it for me," said Ben Dupray of Middlebury, Vt. "Two years ago last Fall when we were living in New Haven, Vt. I had the 'flu' and it left me so weak I wasn't able to get back to work for months. My stomach, which had been suffering me for years, got worse and it seemed that I couldn't eat a thing but what caused indigestion. My back ached a lot and my nerves kept me restless and at a high pitch all the time. I was bothered a great deal with constipation and could not find a thing to relieve me. "I was getting worse every day when a friend advised me to take Tanlac. The way it fixed me up was remarkable. I have picked up ten pounds and feel fine in every way. Tanlac is simply grand." The New Pawnshop

By AUSTIN FLINT

"That snide Cohnbaum," said Larry the Blood to his pal Skinner, "makes me sick. Fifty berries for that diamond bracelet what's worth twelve hundred don't seem to make a bit wit' me. "The fence is getting rich out of our honest labor, Skinner. He's opened another pawnshop downtown. He's rolling in dough. Heard of it, Skinner?" "Sure I heard of it," answered Skinner moodily, "but old Cohnbaum ain't tellin' where that new joint of his is located. Says he's doin' a honest business there. Cohnbaum couldn't run straight if he was held in tape-measures." "Anyway," said Larry, "I got an idea, Skinner. Cohnbaum ain't played fair with us, and it'd be a charity to relieve him of some of his superfluous kale. Ya know Ellen Summers, what rooms above his shop?" "Sure," answered Skinner. "Why?" "Well, she's a friend of mine. She told me th' old guy's too mean to repair her floor, an' she c'n see straight down into the shop through a hole in it. Are you wise?" "Hold on, bo," answered Skinner. "Spose we do git in and lighten the old guy of some of that jack of his, what're we going to do wit' it?" "Jack? He don't keep no jack in that safe of his," answered Larry. "It's chock-full of diamond earrings and emerald sunbursts. And there's a new fence I know name of Willoughby. He'll pay better prices than Cohnbaum. Now here's the idea. It don't take two of us to do the trick. I'll bust open Cohnbaum's safe tonight from Ellen's room, and hand you the stuff, and you beat it down to Willoughby's. I'll tip him off there's some goods coming, and I'll give you his address." The plan was quickly made. At two o'clock in the morning Larry was to break open the safe in Cohnbaum's pawnshop and hand the goods to Skinner, who would be waiting outside to make a quick getaway. The two friends had worked long together, and could trust each other; and Skinner knew that, if necessary, Larry would not hesitate to cover his flight by putting up a vigorous fight with any cops who happened to be inconveniently prowling around. Willoughby's place was not far away. It was one of those fence's pawnshops where, under cover of a legitimate business, stolen goods were received and stored away until the time came for disposing of them, the thief receiving perhaps one-third of the value of the articles. Armed with this knowledge, Skinner shivered that night in the vicinity of Cohnbaum's place. He knew the lay of the land well. Old Cohnbaum lived alone, he was deaf, and there were two doors between the pawnshop and his

TO ALL RADIO ENTHUSIASTS

This company, while wholeheartedly desirous of stimulating and fostering radio enthusiasts, believes it owes the public the duty of sounding a note of warning to prevent a repetition of the tragedy that claimed two lives in Cleveland a few days ago.

Death is only recently entered the home of several Detroit boys, and it is the hope of the company that the warning we are now sounding will prevent any such occurrence here.

To that end it asks the public generally, and those interested in Radio activities particularly, to observe rigidly the following advice, in order to eliminate the danger of death or serious injury and fire hazard:

NEVER pick up a wire lying on the ground or dangling from a pole. The wire might be "alive," that is charged with electricity to a dangerous degree. Report fallen wires immediately to the police department.

NEVER climb a pole to which wires are attached. They might be in contact with high voltage wires and consequently extremely dangerous.

NEVER string wireless aerials over or under any other wires. Should these two sets of wires come into contact with one another the aerials might become dangerously charged.

NEVER attach radio aerials or anything else to poles carrying wires of any sort. Accidental contact with live wires may cause injury, or death or bring about fires.

ALWAYS attach aerials to substantial supports, so located that if either the support or aerial wires breaks it cannot come into contact with other wires.

REMEMBER that it is quite practical to operate a radio-receiving set with an indoor aerial.

The company seeks especially the co-operation of parents in carrying out these safety suggestions. Read them to your children.

Purely in interest of public safety, the company is forced to forbid the attaching of any radio aerial to its poles and to insist that no radio antennae be strung above its power distribution wires.
