The people woke up Tuesday morning to find the ground white with a heavy frost. Flowers were bitten, tomatoe and bean vines killed and corn on low ground looked like it was scalded.

The Tazewell Millinery Company presents a new and enlarged advertisement to the Readers of the REPUBLICAN. An inspection of the handsome new stock of the Company will be profitable to the ladies.

Miss Etta Hankins got back last week from Cincinnati, where she had been to purchase the Fall stock for the Tazewell Millinery Co. Miss Hankins tells us the styles for the season are beautiful, and she has bought to suit the most fastidious.

Miss Beardsley, the art teacher at Clinch Valley Seminary, gave an art display at the Seminary on Monday afternoon. A great many ladies and gentlemen attended it, and those who are capable judges pronounced Miss Beardsley's work excellent.

Miss Julia Landon, who had been absent for some months visiting friends at Salem and in Augusta county, got back home on last Saturday. Miss Landon who had been spending several weeks with friends at Glade Spring, Va., got back the same day.

Among the curiosities that will be shown at the fair will be the wonderful freak of nature, the steer with three horns and three nostrils, which is the property of P. P. Dillon, Esq., of Pocahontas. We have seen this curiosity and it will pay every body to see it during the fair.

Dr. Robt. C. Meade, Republican candidate for Senate from this district, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday mingling with the people. He made a fine impression. W. B. Spratt, was also on hand and the Republicans of Tazewell express the deepest satisfaction with him as their candidate for the House of Delegates.

Mrs. Julia C. Dunn, teacher of vocal and instrumental music in Clinch Valley Seminary, sang with the choir of the Methodist church on last Sunday morning. She sang a beautiful arrangement of "Just As I Am," by Danks, as an offertory. This was the first time Mrs. Dunn had been heard by a Tazewell audience. Her voice is sweet and finely cultivated and she sang with fine expression.

The Tazewell Fair.

On next Tuesday, the 28th inst., the Fifth annual Exhibition of the Clinch Valley Agricultural and Breeders' Association will begin at its grounds, one mile west of town, and continue for four days, Sept. 28th, 29th, 30th and 1st of October, inclusive.

The directors and officers of the Association have been working earnestly to make it the most successful meeting that has ever taken place in its history. More and better horses are promised than have ever been seen on the track.

The exhibit of fat cattle and all kinds of live stock should be better than any that has taken place on the grounds. The graziers of the county have been unusually successful in the quality of cattle they have grazed this year, while the prices realized were of such a character as to greatly stimulate not only that branch but all branches of agriculture in Tazewell.

The county fair is intended to serve two purposes, that of a social gathering for the pleasure of our own people and the entertainment of such strangers and friends as shall visit it from other places, and also to provoke among our farmers a commendable competition in raising live stock and the production of grain, fruit and all kinds of agricultural products.

The first object is attained by the people attending in large crowds and witnessing the attractions that have been secured by the Association for their amusement. The second is accomplished by the farmers making a cordial effort to support the management. This they can do by sending the best products of their farms to be exhibited in their proper classes and compete for the premiums offered.

Tazewell is the leading county of the great Southwest, and its people ought to see that it stands first in the way of a county fair. We urge upon all the people to give their hearty support to the Association. Go to the fair, take your family with you, meet your friends there, witness the different attractions, and you will not regret it.

Tennis Tournament. On Saturday, Sept. 18th, at Elkhor, West Va., a very interesting tennis tournament took place. The players were Gillespie and O'Keefe from Tazewell, Mann and Pollock from Bluefield, Perry and Mann, from Bramwell, and Wilton and Gerhart, from Elkhor. In addition to the above named Dr. Zimmerman, of Pocahontas, and Barrett, of Bluefield, played a game against Parker and Carlington, of Bramwell. The crowd was entertained by Messrs Lincoln, Wilson and Gerhart at Elkhor. The first game was between Tazewell and Bramwell. The first set was won by Bramwell by score of 6 to 1. The next two sets were won by Tazewell by 6 to 3 and 6 to 2, respectively.

The next was a contest between Bramwell and Elkhor resulting in a victory for Elkhor. A contest then came off between the victors in the two games, that is between Tazewell and Elkhor, resulting in a victory for Tazewell.

The playing was first-class all around, and the occasion a delightful one to those who participated and were present. The playing was upon a court belonging to the Elkhor team and was a beautiful court and in fine condition. The hospitality of Messrs Wilson, Gerhart and Lincoln was royal.

At 1 o'clock a. m. they served a delightful lunch and 2 o'clock p. m. served in formal, bachelor style an elegant dinner. We have been told by Dr. R. B. Gillespie, who was present, that the crowd ought to have enjoyed it, and if they did not they certainly cannot appreciate good things.

The Tazewell boys, on Friday night preceding the tournament, were nicely entertained at Bluefield by Messrs Needles and Barrett.

These people all know how to do things, and they do it right.

Odd Fellows at Episcopal Church. Bluegrass Lodge, No. 142, attended service at the Episcopal Church last Sunday night. Most of the members were present and they presented a striking appearance in their handsome regalia. The occasion brought a large congregation together, and the service was most hearty and impressive. Special music had been arranged for the service and was rendered in a manner most creditable to the choir, being highly spoken of by all who were present. The special feature was the solo of Mrs. Dunn, who kindly consented to sing on this occasion. This lady has a magnificent voice, and shows signs of much culture by the expressive manner in which she sang on this occasion. The Rev. W. D. Backer, who is an Odd Fellow himself, preached a suitable sermon on the three keynotes of Old Fellowship, "Fidelity, Love and Truth," giving a most practical and interesting discourse by way of showing how such organizations as that present should prove a great help to the church and to the religious life of the community generally. All through the occasion was a most interesting and enjoyable one.

The Sick. Miss Joie Brittain is on the sick list, but we hope is not seriously ill.

Mrs. J. E. Jackson is confined to her home with sickness, but we hear is not dangerously ill.

We will exhibit our Fall Styles of Pattern Hats next week, in our store on Main Street. The date of our Opening will be announced in the DAILY REPUBLICAN issued during the Fair. TAZEWEILL MILLINERY CO. England. Whatever the final consequences of the conditional action reached by the bank, and we desire neither to overestimate nor underestimate them, by their vote, yesterday, the governors of the first financial institution in the world frankly recognize these facts: First, that the low price of silver and its disappearance as a money-metal is an evil; second, that this evil can be lessened by the free use of silver, and, third, that any steps in this direction must be not national but international. Not even the Bank of England is willing to stand alone in dealing with silver, but insists on international concert before turning a fifth of the metallic reserve in its issue Department into silver. By the terms of the act of 1844, however, which "limits the amount of silver bullion on which it shall be lawful to issue Bank of England notes," the bank is required to purchase only bullion. The bank never paid the mint price for silver bullion and would not now. As Mr. Morris, the Governor, in his evidence on the subject said in 1848: "The practice of the bank has been to buy silver at 4 shillings 11 pence and dollars at 4 shillings 9 pence." In other words, the silver was bought at the bank now buys gold coin, at a price which is safe for the bank. This step is important, not for its direct but for its indirect effect—namely for what it does but for what it means. All the Bank of England proposes to do is to hold in silver a sum of from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 in silver bullion. At the present price of silver this would be about 90,000,000 ounces. At the familiar ratio of 16 to 1 it would be less than half of this. At the gold value of silver, if the Bank of England were to turn one-fifth of its present gold reserve into silver it would acquire nearly a half of a year's product of silver. If the purchase were made at the ratio of 16 to 1 it would be about a seventh of the world's annual product. The purchase of a sum no larger than this could not be expected alone seriously to affect the price of silver. The total purchase of silver by the bank would not be greater than the annual purchase made by the United States for several years together under the act of 1890, during whose existence silver steadily fell. But it is not the amount of silver purchased by the Bank of England which is important. The real importance of this step attaches to the change of opinion and policy it indicates in England, the English government and English banking circles. For years all these have absolutely refused to take any steps to raise the price of silver or increase its use. The subject has been treated as outside the range of discussion. The London Times, in its comments on this step, still holds this attitude. The governing forces of England, official and monetary, have abandoned it. As yet their substantive offer of action is limited, so limited as to be, though useful, inadequate, but the vote of the Bank of England yesterday distinctly recognizes the wisdom and necessity of some action; it opens the way to negotiation and discussion; it accepts the position taken in this country by the Republican party last year and acted on by President McKinley this year, that international action on silver is needed and that only by international action can a solution of this perplexing issue be gained. This change of attitude is vital. The step of the Bank of England is too short to count, but in order to take it the bank has had to turn around, and in its action the length of the step is of less importance than the fact that on this great issue the bank and the English government face in a new direction diametrically opposed to their old one and one which leads directly to opening the Indian mints. This change is not confined to England. At Paris and Berlin, as well as in London, there is plainly a deep apprehension of the strain which has been put on gold monometallism by the current situation. No one knows what may next happen. At London, Indian and other eastern exchanges; at Paris, vast issues of government bonds, French, Russian, Turkish, Spanish and Italian, and at Berlin a great manufacturing and commercial system, not yet firmly established, all rest on the maintenance untouched of existing gold reserves. These are about to be heavily drawn upon. At all three points there has been a sudden disposition to consider the subject and devise international means to meet an international catastrophe. The United States once sought action: The time is near when it can command it: About to add on a great scale to its gold by import, alone among nations able to export grain, manufactures and silver, it has only to keep to the position assumed by the Republican party of asking and accepting nothing but adequate international
