

A SPLENDID SPEECH.

Hon. Jacob Yost Speaks to Citizens of Tazewell.

A GOOD CROWD WAS PRESENT.

The Speech Was One of the Best Presentations of the Principles of the Republican Party Ever Made Here.

Hon. Jacob Yost, Congressman from the Tenth Virginia District arrived at Tazewell last Monday to fill his appointment Tuesday. A little after one o'clock court day the crowd began to assemble at the town hall and when the speaking began about three hundred Republicans were present and, perhaps, half a dozen Democrats. The services of the Ineger Concert Band had been secured and after it had played several selections Wm. C. Pendleton introduced Mr. Yost to the audience. Those who knew the gentleman expected him to make a fine speech and they were not disappointed, neither was any one present disappointed. From start to finish he held the close attention of the audience and at many points in his speech he won hearty applause from his listeners. Mr. Yost at the outset set forth the idea that it was the duty of every citizen to study and compare the records of political parties and in that way to determine which had been most capable in managing the affairs of our government. He urged that the prosperity of the country was dependent upon the constant and profitable employment of labor—all wealth being drawn from nature, the gift of God, by the application of human labor. Then he proceeded to show that labor had been employed and national wealth created in our land to a marvelous extent while the Republican party was in power and Republican legislation in force. He contrasted the condition of the country under Republican rule with the condition that prevailed while Mr. Cleveland was serving his second term as President with a Democratic tariff law in operation. From the Commercial Reports he showed that in the year 1892, the last of Harrison's administration, the trade conditions of the United States were better than at any time in our history; and from the same reports he showed that the next year under Democratic rule, was the most disastrous to the business interests that we had ever experienced as a nation. He defied the Democrats to point to a single act of legislation originated or passed by a Democratic Congress that had contributed to the general welfare of the country; and asserted, without fear of contradiction, that all the national legislation that had served to develop and enrich our country had come from the Republican party. Mr. Yost said that the Democrats never pointed to what their party had done, because they were ashamed to do so, but always talked about what they were going to do; that it was a party prolific in promises but barren of good results. His account of the condition of the national treasury under Republican administration, when there was always a surplus, and when the national debt was constantly being reduced, and its condition under a Democratic administration, when the surplus was dissipated, a deficiency created and the national debt increased two hundred and sixty-two millions of dollars, was very graphic. Then he pictured to his audience the glorious change that has come in business conditions since McKinley was inaugurated President; how millions of idle laborers had been put to work, how the tramp of Coxe's army was not heard any more in the land; how a splendid balance of trade amounting to over six hundred millions of dollars had been placed to the credit of the United States under the first year of McKinley—Republican rule, and the deficiency in the revenues of the government abated. Then Mr. Yost discussed briefly but forcibly the free silver issue which Rhea and the Polaski platform insist upon making an issue in this campaign. He then talked about our war with Spain and the record made by the Democratic members of Congress before and after a declaration of war. He spoke of the results of the war with great force and of the important questions that will have to be settled with reference to conquered territory, and the establishment of new and larger trade relations with the "Orient."

He next talked about the Virginia election law and told of the infamous frauds that had been practiced in different counties in his district to defraud him and other Republican candidates. He gave the names of the places where these frauds were enacted and in some instances the names of those who were responsible for them. His exposure of Democratic frauds in the Tenth and Fourth Districts and of the machine was very severe.

He closed his speech with a splendid tribute to Gen. Walker in his representative capacity, and said there was no member in the present Congress who was more popular and highly esteemed. The efforts of Rhea and his friends to criticize Walker's record he pronounced absurd and said the more they rubbed up that record the brighter it got.

It was an able speech, and we wish every voter in the county could have heard it. There was an earnestness and sincerity about it that must have carried conviction to all who heard it. There were about three hundred persons present and large numbers went to the stand and congratulated Mr. Yost at the conclusion of his speech. It was a good day for Republicanism in Tazewell county, in that it strengthened all who heard it in the faith.

RHEA AT TAZEWELL. He Makes His Great Oration and Distributes his Buttons.

The Democratic candidate for Congress spoke at the court house last Tuesday, to what is claimed to have been the largest and most enthusiastic audience that has greeted any speaker here for years. Those who make such a claim must not have been present when Gen. Walker spoke at August court, or they would not assert such a thing, unless they were lacking in judgement or blind partisans. The fact is that we are informed by reputable gentlemen, who made estimates of both crowds, that Yost had as large crowd at the hall as Rhea had at the court house; and that there were more people on the streets when the speaking was going on than were listeners to either of the speakers.

Of course we did not hear Rhea's speech as we were listening to the able address of Hon. Jacob Yost, who discussed the records of the parties and the issues of the day in a statesmanlike manner. We are informed by gentlemen who heard Rhea that he devoted most of his time to a discussion of Gen. Walker's record and in a foolish effort to show that the war revenue bill is oppressive to the poor men of the country. After showing his dense ignorance of the provisions of that bill, as he did at Lebanon, we are astonished at his recklessness in continuing to discuss it. He still remains incapable of comprehending its merits or he thinks he can fool people by perverting its meaning and operation.

We hoped he would make public the statement that Gen. Payne has recently sent him about the incident that occurred with Rhea at the time Martin defeated Fitz Lee for the Senate. We are told, however, that Rhea privately declared that the statement prepared by Gen. Payne had not yet reached him. A curious public will be anxious to see that statement in print. If Rhea succeeded in arousing any enthusiasm we failed to see any indications of it afterwards. He was applauded by the truly faithful when he uttered his clap trap about Walker, he got some additions to the wagon load of flowers that fair admirers had already heaped upon him; he distributed buttons with his strikingly distinguished phiz on them, but in November Tazewell will help to bury him in his political grave, that should be decorated with the faded flowers he is now receiving and a monument of brass in the shape of a button.

When Judge Rhea came to Tazewell a few weeks ago his party friends failed to meet him at the station. When he arrived last Monday he was met at the station by a committee composed of Messrs. T. A. Lynch and W. G. Doak, who escorted him to the Central Hotel.

Miss Nannie Tynes Passes Away.

One of the saddest deaths that has occurred in this community since our residence here was that of Miss Nannie Tynes, who died at the home of her father, Capt. A. J. Tynes, three miles east of town, on last Saturday afternoon. She had been sick for only about two weeks with the fever, but a few days before her death serious symptoms were shown in her case and her friends became very apprehensive as to the results. She had for several weeks prior to her illness been tenderly and constantly assisting in nursing her brother and sister who had the fever.

We have never met a lady whose fine womanly character more deeply impressed us than did Miss Tynes. She was esteemed by all who knew her and tenderly loved by those who were intimately associated with her. She was a dutiful daughter, affectionate sister and devoted Christian, and she will be greatly missed in the domestic, social and church circles. At the age of sixteen years she united with the Presbyterian church at this place and has been one of the most faithful among the church workers. In the Sunday school and in the choir she will be sadly missed, as she was a fine teacher and had a splendid soprano voice.

On Sunday afternoon at four o'clock funeral services were held in the Presbyterian church at this place, conducted by Rev. W. W. Ruff, the pastor, who was assisted by Rev. M. W. Doggett, former pastor of the church, and Rev. W. H. Kelly, who was a near neighbor of the deceased. The church was crowded with friends and acquaintances who had attended the solemn gathering to testify to the esteem and love which they held for the departed one. At the conclusion of the services the remains were taken to the new cemetery, followed by one of the largest funeral processions we have ever seen in Tazewell, and laid to rest.

Tazewell Boys Who Were at Santiago.

Messrs. Charles Moore and Buse Moore, who were born and raised near Tip Top, in this county, enlisted in the 6th U. S. Infantry in 1895, then stationed at Fort Thomas, Ky. These young men remained in the service until the 11th of last month, when they were discharged at sea, en route from Cuba to this country, their three years term of service having expired. Their regiment was with Shafter at Santiago and they were participants in the splendid campaign and glorious battles fought by our soldiers there. They arrived at Montauk Point on the 14th of August, and got back to Tazewell about the first of this month.

On Monday Mr. Charles Moore called at our office, and we found him a very intelligent young man and splendid looking soldier. He said the men in the ranks were cared for as well as it was possible, under the circumstances, at Santiago and that he could see no reason for the complaints that are being made about bad treatment—that there had been gross exaggerations. Both of the young men suffered with malaria while in Cuba but escaped the yellow fever. We are glad they got back home safe and well.

MISS DAVIS DEAD. PASSES AWAY AT NARAGANSETT SUNDAY AT NOON.

A Brief Sketch of Her Life—Her Last Appearance in Public Was in Atlanta in July. Narragansett Pier, R. I., Sept. 18.—Miss Winnie Davis, daughter of Mrs. Jefferson Davis, died at noon today at the Rockingham hotel, to which place she came as guest in the early part of the pier's social season. She had been ill for several weeks and a fortnight ago her ailment was diagnosed as malarial gastritis. Last night a relapse in Miss Davis' condition was noticed, and throughout the night she lost strength and the physicians said the end was not far off, and at noon death came to end the suffering which at times had been intense. Mrs. Davis had watched unremittently at her daughter's bedside and she is now bowed with sorrow.

SKETCH OF HER LIFE. Winnie Davis, the "Daughter of the Confederacy," was born in the confederate executive mansion at Richmond, Va., in 1863. She was educated principally at home, owing to the trouble surrounding her father and the publicity which attended all movements of the Davis family. She was engaged to Mr. Wilkerson, of Syracuse, N. Y., but shortly after her father's death, the engagement was broken off. While no public explanation of the rupture was given out, it is well known that it was for the purpose of maintaining her father's name.

LAST PUBLIC APPEARANCE. Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 18.—Miss Winnie Davis appeared in public for the last time it is believed, in this city, July 21st. The occasion was the parade of ex-confederates.

The Passing of a Beautiful Life. This is the tribute of a friend who feels deeply the influence of the noble Christian young woman whose remains were buried in the new cemetery last Sunday afternoon. Miss Nannie Tynes was greatly admired by all who casually knew her, but only to those who had known her long and intimately were revealed the superbly fine and heroic qualities of her character; and even these friends who felt that they appreciated fully the worth of her works and faith, who had watched her grow in intellectual and spiritual beauty until "every thought broke forth a rose," were unprepared for the super-glorious revelations of the last hours of her life. She was three days passing through the valley and shadow, her mind unclouded, conscious that the end was very near. Her physicians say that during this time she suffered unspeakable pain, but with marvelous self control she endured it without a murmur of complaint. For all who came to see her she had memorable words, and she left many messages of love and interest for those of her friends who could not again see her here. The watchers at the bedside have tried to tell of the heroism and triumph of this soul as it thus hovered between two worlds, "like a star on the horizon's edge." But others cannot understand. How much there was in her life to admire! How delightful and instructive to converse with her! She loved the bible above all books, but she had an extensive and ready knowledge of English poetry and history. She was a beautiful reader, an intelligent interpreter of all things good in verse and prose. In her home parlor four years ago she read some magazine stories for me and while she was reading her spirit breathed such rare graciousness and sweetness as to compel the devotion that love pays to Christian magnetism. Who if her friends can forget the indescribable smile that played in her eyes and about her lips when she was in conversation? Those who were with her at the last say that in the moment of death a smile of angelic radiance and sweetness, such a one as might light the face of an angel dreaming of a lost paradise, beamed on her countenance and lingered there lovingly after the spirit had flown. Whom did she see? Her words were, in a clear excited voice, "the Savior! Oh, the Savior!" Surely her faith, always so strong, so separate from fears, was miraculously rewarded, and, unseen by other eyes, the Pilot came to meet her face to face while she was crossing the bar. O, beautiful crowned spirit!

The great Intelligences fair, That range above our mortal state, In circle round the blessed gate, Received and gave these welcome there. Oologah, I. T. Sept. 17th, 1898.

Communicated. About ten days ago the writer, who is a Tazewell boy, and not ashamed to own it, boarded the train at Marion, Va., bound for the Indian Territory, via Bristol, Knoxville, Chattanooga, Memphis and Fort Smith, the border city. This country had saw many new and strange things on his way, for his traveling ticket had heretofore been almost limited to his native state. He realized that he was over more forcibly when he saw the Eighth New York Regiment returning home. A great many of the soldiers were sick, but the camp life is a gay one. The great Southern Railway traverses some of the poorest country in the South. The cotton fields of northern Miss., Ala., and Georgia are indeed a contrary to the blue grass region of Southwest Va. There is as much difference in the people as there is in the country. A lazy, stupid, swarthy look characterizes nine tenths of the people. The student of history cannot fail to appreciate the scenery round about Chattanooga. When one's vision falls on Look Out Mountain he feels that he is on historic ground, and unconsciously he is carried back to the stormy days of 61. Fort Smith, the border city, is a thriving young city of 25,000 inhabitants. This is another place of historic interest, for all the outlaws of the Territory have been hung (hanged) here. However much history the place may have there is beyond doubt a bright future for this city which is the southern gateway to the Territory. If the writer undertook to go into detail and give a minute description of what he has seen and heard he would be here writing when "possums, persimmons and jack frost" would be just over the hill. So all he has attempted is a few random shots which may possibly interest some of the readers of the REPUBLICAN. In the next letter the scribe will undertake to tell the readers something about the Indian Territory, the Curtis bill, its effect upon the conglomerate mass of humanity here.

A Rapturous Reverie. I have just returned from the opening of what is certainly the most beautiful and most satisfactory millinery department in Cincinnati. We must remark upon the pretty head pieces we saw there. The very latest and richest Paris hats and bonnets, the daintiest domestic hats and bonnets and lots of trimming there to attract. And they did attract. You should see the enthusiastic crowd of women in attendance! How they receive each article and eulogize its several points of beauty! My, it was as good as a matinee—better because one learned some real solid, useful information, which will be handy all of the season. We learned how to trim and make hats and bonnets just as nice as those we saw. We will announce our Fall Openin' in this space next week. Tazewell Millinery Co.
