"TO MY LADY LOVE."

(Written for the VIRGINIA CITIZEN.) When do I love Thee? When the Brooklets run Through dandelion meadows of the June; When, horns of buntings greet the harvest; And mellow autumn's vintaging is done; When spring's triumphant marches have begun; When winter winds through baggard branches croon; At solemn midnight and at silvery noon, At blast of morning and at grave in death, Thy youthful splendor unto me is dear, But I shall love Thee still when youth fills by; I love Thee when thine eyes know not a tear. And love Thee when disaster hovers nigh; My soul shall crave Thee when the dark draws near, And still be loyal through eternity.

How do I love Thee? As the slender lyre Turbills with emotion when the breezes draw near, And love Thee when the morning's golden glow; As dewy stars the dusky night desire; As angels to the heaven of heavens aspire; As doves in dream fondly, breathe sweet below; As arctic pines love everlasting snow, And tender palms love everlasting fire; I love Thee as the victor loves his wreath, The peasant loves his cottage, free from strife; I love Thee as mortality loves breath, The shepherd boy his harp and flute and sic; As disappointed hope loves welcoming death, As human souls love everlasting life. Why do I love Thee? Ask the artist there Why does he love fair faces that he paints; Ask of the poet why his spirit faints Before his heroines of the golden hair; Ask of the singer why his sweet despair, His glorious gladness, his melodious plaints, Ask the young priest before his hallowed altar; To lay the secret of his worship here, I love Thee as I love to soar from God, And tread in glory of celestial grace; I love Thee beyond the time given away, Proving a crown-pile of immortal race; To emulate beatitudes of God, To reach His Kingdom, and behold His face.

THE SOLDIER'S DUTY. Experience of Capt. Gresham, R. I. [The following extract from the Providence, (R. I.) Journal will be of interest to the many readers of the VIRGINIA CITIZEN, as Capt. Gresham is a native of Lancaster county and received the appointment to West Point from this Congressional District. He is the oldest West Pointer now in the army from this District; Capt. Richard Croxton and Capt. Willard D. Newbill following in the order named.] Occasionally a regular army officer comes to this city and stays on recruiting duty for a detail of two years, or the officers on "college" duty are met. But aside from this the civilian soldier comes in contact with the typical West Pointer, and even then learns but little how his years of service are passed. Capt. J. C. Gresham, 7th Cavalry, U. S. A., has just received orders relieving him from recruiting duty in this city. He has been here nearly a year. For over a score of years he has been in the regular establishment, having entered the Military Academy at West Point in '72, joining the 7th Cavalry as 2d Lieutenant in '76, becoming a 1st Lieutenant in '76 and attaining his commission as Captain in April, 1892. He is an honor to his profession in more ways than one. Several times his name has appeared in the official army register with commendations for bravery. In 1877 he was commended for gallantry in action with the Nez Percés Indians. This was in the engagement on Sept. 13 at Canon Creek, Montana. Again he was commended for gallantry in action with the Sioux Indians at White Clay Creek in the Pine Ridge troubles in 1890. Then Congress took note of his services and for the distinguished gallantry shown in voluntarily leading troops into a ravine to dislodge Indians in the action at Wounded Knee, he was presented a gold medal. This action took place Dec. 29, 1890. Fighting is considered the object of all soldiers. Yet, even by training of years and a high reputation, the officer is not sure of a post in a war. Take the case of the 7th Regiment of Cavalry, Capt. Gresham's own command. It was Custer's old regiment, noted for being one of the great fighting regiments all through the Indian wars, from its birth in 1865 up to 1893; yet it took no part in the Spanish War. When the Spanish War broke out Capt. Gresham was sent on special duty as major of the 4th North Carolina. He stayed there long enough to muster in the volunteer quota of that State, about 2,300 men. Then orders sent him to Fort Grant, Ariz., and he was placed in command of Troops C, L and M, 7th Cavalry. At that time the regiment was scattered all over the West. These two troops had been "koletonized" - reduced to three officers and several sergeants. These three troops, the non-commissioned staff and band were practically made anew. He practically had to do the ordinary work of 11 officers. This shows what hard and successful work many of the officers of the regular army accomplished on the breaking out of the war. Then the regiment was assembled from its stations from the Mexican boundary line to Utah, and brought to Huntsville, Ala. There these veteran Indian fighters lay in camp for a long time, finally getting to Savannah, but not being able to take part in the stirring events in Cuba. Finally it went to Cuba for garrison duty. As a result of overwork and the camp life at Huntsville Captain Gresham went to the hospital with malaria. When he came out on sick leave, instead of remaining inactive, even then he requested to be assigned to some post and was sent to Providence, where he has accomplished so much.

As soon as Capt. Gresham partially regained his health he tried in every way possible to get a share in the Spanish and then in the Philippine

War. He was not successful in getting an exchange and finally asked to be allowed to command a company in one of the volunteer regiments to serve in the Philippines, stating that he believed that he could be of more service in command of a company over there than in command of a troop in Cuba. It will not be without its hardships and dangers, as is shown by the Indian campaigns, when for months and months the troops have been following up roving bands, in season and out of season, keeping down uprisings and fighting battles. As late as 1890 there has been an Indian engagement where there was a greater list of casualties than at many of the battles near Manila, over which there has been so much excitement. Take the campaign which Capt. Gresham went through when it included up Big Foot band of the Sioux Nation, the Minneconjoes, the Worst of the lot. The orders given out were to either disarm them and send them to Florida, or to destroy if they resisted. The band was captured about half-past 4 in the afternoon, and marched into camp. The next morning the troops began the work of disarming. In a crescent formation 120 of the "braves" were equated for the powder," said Capt. Gresham. "They sat on their hams wrapped in blankets. There was not a gun in sight. The bucks all had Winchester and one or two belts of ammunition when they came in, even squaws wearing belts of ammunition then. "We sent pickets out and went through the camp, but no arms were to be found. Capt. Wallace then went through with a detail and made a thorough search. This took about an hour. He came back and reported he could not find any arms. Then the order came to search these men. "Wallace was the officer. He began with the man on the right of the crescent. As soon as he touched this man, all the 120 Indians jumped up, threw back their blankets and began firing. There were 42 left right there on that spot. The rest got away and troops followed. "This was the battle of Wounded Knee Creek, on December 29. All were killed or wounded, and we came back to camp with our wounded and the wounded Indians. When we got into Pine Ridge it was about 1 o'clock. The Indians at the Agency were terribly excited. They were held in check. "In this fight there were 37 men and one officer killed, and four officers and 41 men wounded. Anyone can see, by taking this as a sample of one Indian fight, how it will compare with any 15 battles in the Philippines, adding up the list of casualties. Capt. Gresham was wounded in this engagement. It was but one of many Indian fights in which he took part as his army record shows. In one campaign against the Sioux he was on the trail from April to New Year's day. In all that time the troops never slept under shelter, but followed, across prairie, desert, over mountains and hills, the Indians. In one fight in this campaign three troops lost two officers and about a third of their men in wounded or killed. Part of the time the command was without commissary wagons. They were left way behind, and rations of pork and hardtack soon gave out. But, ever onward the cavalrymen pressed. At times they had nothing at all to eat; at times they subsisted on pony meat. Finally the Indians gave up and were taken back to the reservation, what was left of the tribe. In this campaign Capt. Gresham covered a little over 4,000 miles in the saddle. Frequently in the 10 years he did frontier duty he went on the trail for months at a time, and again he would be stationed at some fort or post where the only routine was the five hours drill a day and regular tours of duty. From visits to Fort Adams many people have a fair idea of the routine life in the East. Another duty performed by the men fitted for the task is "college duty." This would be the same as Capt. Murray performed at Capt. Gresham's short while back. Capt. Gresham has done considerable of this. He was stationed at Blacksburg, Va., from 1884 to 1887, and at Raleigh, N. C., from 1887 to 1889. Few people know that he is an authority quoted by military writers. "Terrain in Military Operations." This was published in the United Service Institute, the magazine published at Governor's Island, N. Y., and reprinted in the Army and Navy Gazette, London, which devoted considerable space to discussing the same. With Gen. Forsyth, Capt. Gresham was one of the founders of Fort Riley Cavalry and Light Artillery School of Application. For a period of seven years he was stationed there as the instructor of strategy and minor tactics - practical maneuvers. On leaving this city he will probably be ordered to join his regiment in Cuba, with the chance of an extended stay there.

THE BEAUTIES OF FARMING AS THEY APPEAR TO A YOUNG MAN.

I have quit farming; my friends look upon me with a pitying self-satisfied smile and say "Poor fellow, he will never amount to shucks, he's so changeable;" while others say "Every other walk in life is so crowded that there is positively no room for you; stick to the farm life of peace and independence, surrounded by the beauties of nature and the comforts of rural life." Ah! few people realize the beauties and comforts of farm life, especially as it appears to the city folks, who, kindly fate has divested of all their worldly goods save a few acres of gently rolling hill side, of the white-livered variety of soil, abounding in the sweet-scented and vigorous sassafras and the persistent and luxuriant hen-grass, and surrounded by the enterprising pine bushes, which are forever sighing in the tick and chigger laden breeze - sighing, no doubt, for "other worlds to conquer."

Few are they who realize the perfect peace and independence of such a life; peace hardly expresses the calm and serene condition of affairs broken only by the cut-worms, potato bugs, minks, weasels, snakes, hail storms and late frosts; not to mention those cosmopolitan cattle that take such a kindly interest in your corn field on Sundays and at night, or that fiddle-faced slab-sided sow, whose snout is fully equal to the task of quietly laying aside your eight-rail fence and leading her family of 16 patent, back action, ring-tail rooters into your potato patch. But look at this picture of perfect tranquility and peace: the orb of day is sinking behind the distant pines, the cooling evening breeze is redolent with perfume of flowers and the scent of new mown hay. The voice of the whip-poor-will comes faintly across the distant fields while nearer at hand is heard the chirping cricket and the lullaby of the katy-did; old bob white is just beyond the fence calling loudly to his mate; all is perfect peace and rest; nature's song has become a lullaby, and a great calm possesses your soul as you take up the milk pail and go towards the cow-pen * * * Saw wench! just then a mosquito samples the quality of your spinal column in a very pointed manner and you vainly try to reach him by turning around which causes your elbow to come in contact with Mrs. Cow's flank, and which causes Mrs. Cow's foot to come in contact with the pail, and the pail to come in contact with the back of your neck and the milk to flow down your back, which is enjoyed very much by the mosquito who has not been at all disturbed by the performance; then you back to the fence and try to scratch the mosquito quit of and tear your shirt on a knot and a lizard runs across your hand. You grit your teeth and go to work again and just as the milk begins to rise like yeast in the pail; Zool ool and a great big beetle hits you between the eyes and falls gracefully into the pail; just then the supper bell is heard and you stop cursing the beetle and insulting the cow, in anticipation of supper and rest; but listen as you drag your weary feet along: there is a voice - not a still small one - but one from the kitchen as sharp as the kitchen knife and as hard and unrelenting as hickory stove wood - "Bring along an armful of stove wood and a bucket of water and shut the hen-house door and hurry up! I want the milk!" Now she wants milk and you want peace, and the best thing to do is to fill your arm full of stove wood, take the bucket of water in the other hand and hook the milk-pail on your finger and trot along, stumble over the dog in the door, upset the cargo on the floor, and then you'll get - a piece of her mind. Oh! yes, that's nice and you enjoy it so much.

CAPT. J. C. GRESHAM.

Then you sit down and think of the independence of this life, independent of all things save the weather in time of harvest and that tyrannical and heartless corporation known as the Afro-American farm hand. Oh! how he towers above you in his mighty might. How small and mean you feel as you beg, pay and thank him for his labor, yet, you grovel in the very dust at his gizzard feet, while your soul cries out within you "give me liberty or give me death." Then comes the king of harvest, crowned with his silk hat, and armed with his satchel full of notes and bonds. He is the fertilizer agent, and as we have failed in our crops, we fall upon our patched knees and pray for mercy. He kindly bids us rise and sign a mortgage on our home of independence. We send our grain to market where the commission merchant waxes fat but never kicks; the steamboat company and the bag men have a grab at it and if we come out with our independence we are lucky. Yes, we are independent of the machine agents, fruit tree agents and speculators. The Declaration of Independence was written for us and us alone: we are the people, not only rich, but well-to-do. "Young man, stay on the farm" is the advice of the preachers,

THE NEGRO RACE. Third Advancing, Third Non-Progressive, Rest Retrograding. WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—H. B. Frissel, (colored) principal of the Hampton, Va., Normal and Industrial Institute, appeared before the Industrial Commission yesterday. He spoke of the colored people and industrial conditions in the South. The small farms are rapidly increasing, he said, and in many sections the condition of the negro is better than in slavery days. The farmers are unable to break away from the lien system of crops, and wages are small. Although the South has spent $100,000,000 on public education for negroes, one-third of the race has actually retrograded, one-third is where it was at the beginning of the war, and the remainder have advanced. Negroes, he said, have been taught that their salvation will be found through political means rather than by hard work.

Uses Rubber Tongue. Science has enabled a man to go through life with an artificial nose and limbs that often defy detection, but one of the most novel inventions of modern surgery is a tongue made of rubber and resting on a pivot set between the teeth. There is a man in New York who can show this wonderful mechanism and who feels very happy because he has it. He lost his natural tongue from cancer.

Danger Signals! Do you take cold with every change in the weather? Does your throat feel raw? And do sharp pains dart through your chest? Don't you know these are danger signals which point to pneumonia, bronchitis, or consumption itself? If you are ailing and have lost flesh lately, they are certainly danger signals. The question for you to decide is, "Have I the vitality to throw off these diseases?" Don't wait to try SCOTT'S EMULSION "as a last resort." There is no remedy equal to it for fortifying the system. Prevention is easy.

Scott's Emulsion prevents consumption and checks the onset of other diseases which attack the weak and those with poor blood. SCOTT'S EMULSION is the one standard remedy for inflamed throats and lungs, for colds, bronchitis and consumption. It is a food medicine of remarkable power. A food, because it nourishes the body; and a medicine, because it corrects diseased conditions. See and buy all Druggists. SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York.
