Monterey, Va., Friday, Nov. 2, 1900.

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For President, WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, of Nebraska.

For Vice President, ADLAI E. STEVENSON, of Illinois.

FOR CONGRESS—TENTH DISTRICT H. D. FLOOD, of Appomattox.

Election day, Tuesday, Nov. 6, 1900.

While for vote-making purposes the republicans are talking about the early return of the volunteers from the Philippines, the War Department is arranging to forward 2,000 recruits to the Philippines from San Francisco, within the next two weeks.

The Board of Construction of the Navy Department evidently takes no stock in the fairy tales of Mr McKinley and other republicans, concerning the future reduction of the government's income by the repeal of the war taxes, as it is going ahead upon a project for building additions to our Navy that will make it imperialistic in size, as well as in the class of vessels.

Robbed the Grave. A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters, to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guaranteed, at S. J. Carson drug store.

Eastern Highland. Headwaters, Va., Oct. 22, 1900.

More On The Nineteenth Century

[Continued from issue of Oct. 19.] Another of the achievements of the nineteenth century has been the proclamation of liberty, and the rights of man. Whereas in other centuries despots have held sway and trampled on the rights of the masses, the said century has happily become known as the era of freedom.

The establishment of the United States as a republic with her marvelous growth in said century together with the rise of republics in South America, Central America, Mexico, and Europe, has established beyond reversal, the doctrine of human freedom.

Another happy fruitage of the century has been the granting of constitutional rights to the people, by the leading monarchies, of the Old World. But the most striking augury of good in this direction in the century has been the abolition of African slavery. The dawn of the nineteenth century found the course of slavery in almost every land. It was not only in old England but it was in New England as well.

According to old statistics, in the year 1800 there were eight slaves in the state of New Hampshire, 351 in Rhode Island, 1000 in Connecticut and over 20,000 in New York. The transition from these conditions is gratifying. The Century has closed with slavery abolished in every civilized land. And with the leading Nations banded together, to exterminate it in all lands. This emancipation of millions, who could not choose or act for themselves, is one of the crowning achievements of the Century and constitutes an open door for the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Turning to the progress made in mechanical and industrial devices we are confronted by an almost boundless field of research and inquiry. In the field of artificial lighting it is a surprising fact that no progress worthy of mention was made in thousands of years. The home on which said century dawned had no other light than the fire on the hearth, a tallow candle or possibly a whale oil lamp, these crude means of illumination which had been in use in Babylon and Egypt three thousand years ago, still remained the only light for the homes and the cities at the dawn of the aforesaid century. The change which a hundred years has wrought is amazing. The discovery of petroleum, and gas, and their uses for illumination, together with the more recent application of electricity marks, a revolution in this department sufficient alone to make a century famous. The present illumination of the homes, business places, churches, public buildings and cities of our country, contrasted with the tallow candle of a century ago shows a progress a thousand times greater than the combined progress of all other centuries since the creation.

A similar advancement and one wholly developed in the aforesaid century is the improved means for and the rapidity of modern traveling. At the dawn of the century people could not travel faster than could that noble animal, the horse. No progress had been made in thousands of years and the horse still remained the swiftest and principle means of travel and communication. In the year 1800 there was not a mile of steam railway in the World, and it was not until the middle of the Century's fourth decade that 1,000 miles could be reckoned in this country. The century closed with more than 237,000 miles of track in the United States, or more than enough to build nine lines of railway around the entire Globe.

The transition from the days of the horseback rider and the stage coach to this present gigantic extension of the railway system is a revolution in conveyance sufficient great, the way the world has been moving, to constitute the record of 4,000 years but instead it is the record of the last 70 years of the writer's life. It is a marvelous lesson of rapid and world wide development, and yet accomplished within a single life time. The nineteenth Century has closed the record of thousands of years when the horse was the swiftest means of conveyance the tallow candle, the means of artificial light, and the supple flail, the instrument for threshing grain.

With the development of facilities for increased travel, the century has also, solved the problem of the instantaneous conveyance of intelligence, which has brought the ends of the World in close proximity to each other. When it is remembered that in 1847 there was not a mile of telegraph wire in the World, it seems strange that 60 years should have made possible such a revolution. The Century closed with a vast telegraphic system covering the World with net work of wire 5,000,000 miles in extent and more than the half of which is in the United States.

AS I WAS GOING TO REMARK, in this matter of clothing—suits for boys and men—had you ever thought there is a vast difference in the way they are cut and made? Some suits fit in a way; you get your size in inches, that's about all. They haven't the proper set and don't hang right. They are cheaply made. In buying your winter suit have an eye to this. The firm from which I buy my clothing has a wide reputation as to the perfect fitting of its garments. They are beautifully made, set well and hang properly from the first. I simply ask that you look through my stock. No "away back" numbers to go over.

Look at his material. You can't tell whether they are or not. So, after all, it is the workman that has stood the test. It is the job that has been done that proves the quality of the materials used.
