MISSED HIS ICE CREAM.
 The Recent Order is Condemned on all Sides.

"Did you have ice cream for dinner today?" and "what do you think of it anyhow?" were the questions with which many people greeted each other on Sunday. As to what the general opinion is of the recent ruling of the chief of police upon the ice cream question we would hesitate to say in so many words, but its condemnation is universal and its absurdity recognized by every one. Of the teachings in the Bible bearing on Sabbath observance there is nothing to show that those things absolutely necessary for the gaining of one's livelihood were intended to be prohibited. If a man honestly and by means made legitimate by the wants of his fellow man finds sustenance for himself and family by supplying those wants, there is no reasonable, just or sensible ruling that can be devised by any one to prevent him from so earning his living. This from the standpoint of those who have engaged in the business of furnishing those who think that they know about as much and probably a little more of their own moral and religious responsibilities and obligations and their capacity for looking after them as any "stretchers of the point" can know. This is not intended as an approval of the disregard of a law, but as a criticism heard on every side of the law. Ice cream as a luxury. There is not a hotel of any standing in the country that does not look upon it as of as much a thing of course as coffee, or the soup, and as a necessity. There are but few housekeepers who in warm weather would not rather, if able, serve it on their table, than go out and prepare over a hot stove in a hot kitchen on a hot day something hot for a hot lot of people. The days of "come over next Sunday two weeks, we are going to have ice cream," are gone and we live in an age when we are far enough advanced to have the most desirable things for our comfort for the least amount of trouble. Is furnishing ice cream on Sunday worse than running a livery, operating street cars, using transfer wagons to move pianos, supplying water to the city and a hundred other things that are done here on Sunday? Is not a busy ride to thousands a luxury? Could we not walk on Sunday? Do pianos for religious meetings have to be moved on Sunday morning? Could we not fill up all our pots and pans and kettles and tubs with water on Saturday for use on Sunday? This latter could be done very easily, for the water could be kept so fresh and cool with that double allowance of ice that our housekeepers are furnished with so cheerfully on Saturdays. In some cases they not only do not get the double quantity, but not even as much as on other days. Another thing: which, if presented before the All-wise Being when He comes down to "slam us into Hades" for those things we are having impressed upon us as being wrong, would receive the more condemnation—furnishing ice cream on Sunday, or horse racing during the week? "Keep off the grass" is an excellent sign when there is grass to be kept off of—but it loses its entire usefulness if stuck up in the public road.
 The resignation of Mr. R. H. Soule as superintendent of motive power of the Norfolk and Western is spoken of on all sides with the deepest regret. As a man and as an official he has become liked and respected by every one. His loss to the city cannot be felt, although a railroad man's sphere of usefulness outside of his profession is necessarily limited. Mr. Soule occupies a high position in mechanical circles. He was president of the Master Car Builder's Association for 1896-7 and his address before that body at Old Point last week was spoken of in the highest terms. There are very few of the older officials of the Norfolk and Western now left. In the last year the names of Mr. A. C. Hippey, General Superintendent; Mr. S. O. Mallin, General Manager; Col. Huger, Superintendent of Transportation; Mr. S. O. Mallin, and Mr. John G. Osborne, division superintendents, have all passed out of the management of the road's affairs, and now comes the news of Mr. Soule's resignation. It is said that he will be succeeded by Mr. W. H. Lewis, of La Crosse, Wis., master mechanic of the Chicago, Burlington and Northern.

Are not some of our sidewalks a little disagreeable for pedestrians, especially ladies, on account of the high weeds growing along them? Is it possible that poke berries are going to be allowed to ripen and rub off against ladies' dresses while men jump up in the air and yell snakes when in reality they walk into a thistle? Between the weeds and swaying sidewalks, and sidewalks with holes in them, and sidewalks with nails standing up above the surface, and sidewalks where "there ain't no sidewalks," walking is getting to be a little precarious. But to return to the weeds—ain't it nice to have them flopping about your feet in wet weather? It is so conducive to health.

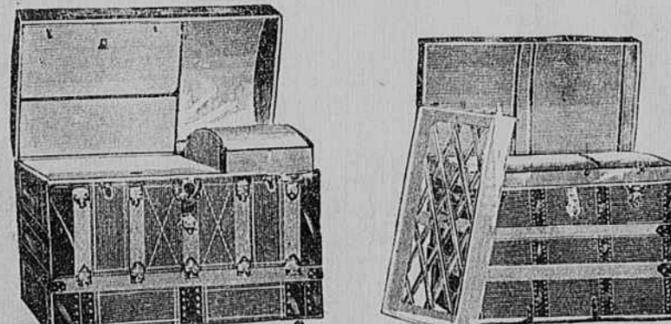

Congratulations are in order. That sewer opening at Seventh avenue and Jefferson street seems to be all right.
