WANT A PIANO. As an aid to their school work some of the ladies of Commerce street school are trying to raise funds with which to purchase a piano. No one thing, perhaps, that could be done would yield better results for the school than this. Children are by nature fond of music, and besides fostering this innate love of music, a piano for their singing in opening exercises, marches, drills, etc., would be of real, practical value, in that it will inculcate discipline and orderliness in their daily assemblings. The ladies who have this in charge, Misses Boswell, Henry, Stone and Kindred, will give the patrons and friends of the school an opportunity to contribute to this fund, and if each one will give but a small sum the necessary amount can be easily raised, and the school materially benefited in its work.

ROANOKE INJURED. A telegram was received yesterday by Chief of Police Dyer stating that W. E. Fritz, son of J. W. Fritz, of this city, was found at Asbury, N. J., at an early hour in the morning on a railroad track with his skull crushed. The family of the unfortunate man have been notified, but the extent of his injuries were not known, so that it cannot be definitely stated as to whether he will be brought home. He was taken to a nearby hospital for treatment.

WAS A SUCCESS. The social entertainment given Friday night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Hatzel, No. 10 Third avenue, n. e., for the benefit of Christ Church was a success both from a social and financial standpoint. The residence was tastefully and artistically decorated with ferns, palms, begonias and other choice plants and flowers. Mrs. Hatzel and Miss Edna Booth, under whose special management the entertainment was given, deserve great praise for the manner in which the social was conducted. Those ladies wish to return their thanks to those who so kindly patronized the entertainment and assisted them in making the affair a grand success.

WAS IT A FAKE?

R. M. Franklin, of East Roanoke, Alleges That He Was Assaulted and Robbed. The night the Roanoke Machine Works paid off the thousand employees of the concern, something that resembled a robbery occurred in the vicinity of the shops. It was between the hours of 8 and 9 when cries of murder were heard along the tracks of the Shenandoah Valley just to the left of the shops. R. L. Cheatham, who claims to have been standing on the overhead walk bridge just west of the works, says that he heard the cries and at once ran to notify the police. One thing is sure he notified Sergeant Manuel and accompanied him back to where he claims the cries came from. Cheatham went direct to where the man was sitting, which was about half way between the Randolph street bridge and walk bridge above mentioned.

The man proved to be R. M. Franklin, an employe of the shops, who resides on East avenue. Upon being questioned by the sergeant he stated that after being paid off he had given to his wife $5 and had gone to the Wayside Inn. After being there a short time he concluded to come up town and pay his bills, but when he reached a point just east of the overhead bridge two negroes had stopped him and demanded his money. One he described as being a tall yellow negro, who struck him in the face a fearful blow, which stunned him. Both men then seized him, throwing him across the track rail, nearly breaking his back. He said they had taken $10 away from him. He still had two or three dollars on his person and his pay slip which showed that he had been paid $15 and a fraction. These figures did not tally with the disposition he had made of the money and when questioned regarding it told the officer that a man had paid him the money he had on his person and which the robbers did not get.

He also stated that R. L. Cheatham had brought him from the place of the robbery to the place where he was found, but this Cheatham denied. Franklin afterward stated a second time that Cheatham brought him away from the place at which he had been assaulted. The above facts taken with the location of the alleged robbery were too much for Sergeant Manuel. He at once set Franklin down as a fakir. He stated that he had left the Wayside Inn for the purpose of coming to town and pay up his bills. The sergeant could not realize how he could get on the north side of the Machine Works while en route from the Wayside Inn. All these circumstances put together made it appear that there was but little in Franklin's pretensions. Every step taken in the matter indicated that the whole story was a fake and Franklin's indisposition to push it caused every officer who investigated the case to share Sergeant Manuel's opinion. The story is now being circulated that his brother-in-law got possession of the money and gave it to his wife. Mr. Franklin's back was slightly injured by his fall, outside of which no other injury was visible.

He is again at work, and the general impression is that if he lost any money at all it was in some other way than robbery.

A FEUILLADE OF SHOTS. Last night about ten o'clock, as Jefferson street was lined with people, a continuous cry of murder was heard, together with the sharp reports of five pistol shots, and simultaneous with the cries and reports, five flashes were plainly visible in front of Saul's grocery store. The cries came from a young negro about 18 years of age, and the shots were fired by one of three young men who were evidently out for "a time." It seems that the boy was on his way home and was carrying a bucket on his arm when he was met by the three desperadoes, who made such a wanton and unwarranted attack on him. One of them knocked the boy's bucket from his arm over into an excavation for a foundation and he was jerked into the street by one of them. In order to protect himself he clutched the boy who jerked him into the street, when the third began shooting at him. It is thought by bystanders that the only thing that saved the negro's life was the fear of the white man who used the gun so recklessly that he might shoot his companion. All the shots flew wide of their mark. As soon as the pistol was emptied the three men ran, each going in a different direction. "Bus" Crawford was implicated by a number of bystanders as being one of the three men.

Society

The week has been rather quiet and we were not altogether sorry for it, after the anything but quiet week that preceded it. However there was excitement in a small way almost every evening and sleep was not indulged in to any too great extent. Next week they say there will be all sorts of things. Why should there not be? The weather is cool and there is no mud. Apples are plentiful. A little float with a few ginger cakes and a caramel or two is almost a whole party in itself, to say nothing of the lots and lots of girls that are positively languishing for something to do. We are all ready.

The largest event of the week was the euchre party given by Miss Dorney to her guest, Miss Meguire, of Louisville, on Wednesday evening. The first prizes were won by Miss Lula Terry and Mr. Edward Lyle and the consolation prize by Miss Meguire and Mr. Dayton Miller. The guests were Miss Meguire, in white organdie, blue ribbon; Mrs. Goodwin, green taffeta and lace; Miss Terry, white organdie over yellow; Mrs. A. Len, white dotted swiss, yellow ribbon; Miss Rorer, white lawn; Miss B. B. Rorer, green lawn; Miss Cooke, of Staunton, white figured organdie; Miss Burwell, of Richmond, yellow organdie; Miss Alfrieda, of Richmond, white taffeta and chiffon; Miss Massie, white organdie, pink ribbon; Miss Saunders, white organdie, red ribbon; Miss Dean, of Richmond, pink Dresden silk; Miss Dorney in black lace, and Messrs. Goodwin, Reid, Lyle, Fitzgerald, W. W. Davis, Denison, Kent, Wood, Penn, Miller, Saunders, Handy, Ellet, Pritchard and Hauner.

Mrs. Jos. W. Coxie entertained a few friends at cards Wednesday evening in honor of her niece, Miss Baush, of Hagerstown, and Miss Brooks, of Baltimore. The game was hearts. Those present were Miss Baush, Miss Brooks, Misses Rogers, Miss Old, of Norfolk, Miss Read, Miss Hippey, Miss Sanderson, Mrs. Welford, of Richmond, and Messrs. Hawkins, A. Friend, Thomas, Dr. Harrison, Robertson, Williamson and Freeman.

Miss Nonie Reed again entertained with a dance on Friday evening. Her guests were Miss Mary Rogers, Miss Margaret Old, Miss Mamie Johnston, Miss Mary Johnson and Messrs. Will Hippey, Wingfield, Miller, Pritchard, Horner, Pike Meade, Clarence Williams and Sydney Johnson.

The choral society is getting down to work. Owing to the heat the meeting on Thursday was a small one, but it is expected that the cold weather will enable the members to take a greater interest. The first concert will be given in November and Mr. Scatchard has already engaged Mr. Giannini and Miss McGuckin, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Wally Davis to take part. The programme will be an attractive one.

Mr. Campbell will give a german at Hotel Roanoke on Tuesday evening. No cards have been sent out to the men. They can be had of Dayton Miller or John Wood. A number of invitations have been issued irrespective of the above. Cards must be presented at the door.

Miss Ethel Neely, of Norfolk, will sing at St. John's Church this morning.

Miss Mary Moomaw has accepted the position of associate principal of the Woman's College of Richmond, and leaves Monday to assume her duties there. She will be accompanied by Miss Laura Moomaw.

Mr. W. Wally Davis is spending his vacation at Elmwood, N. J.

Miss Annie Henry, of Norfolk, who was expected to visit the Misses Kilby and Miss Massie, will not be able to come to Roanoke.

Miss Helen Beckenbaugh, of Hagerstown, is the guest of Mrs. T. W. Goodwin on South Henry street.

Miss Adele Brooks, of Baltimore, who has been visiting Mrs. Jos. W. Coxie, left yesterday for Maple Shade Inn, Pa. Laaki.

General Thomas L. Rosser, of Charlottesville, will address the William Watts Camp of Confederate Veterans at the Old Opera House on Friday evening, the 24th inst.

The following bit of conversation took place between two of our men. We all know them. The first funny man while brushing his inherited dress coat fell into a reflective mood and remarked: "Ah, what things this coat must have seen. I tell you thereby hangs a 'tail.'" The second funny man replied: "Somebody must have owned a dog—mine has two." The coroner pronounced it cholera infantum. We thought it was a little childish.

It has been suggested that we attach to our column each Sunday, a small space for answers to queries our readers may wish to make of us. Subject matter is to include anything from what to say and when to say it, to what our opinion and that of unquestionable authority is upon how to cure corns or remove bones. It is a good idea and we have secured an almanac and are prepared to tell when preserving time comes and when it goes and in fact have converted the Sunday Times into an encyclopedia of interesting and useful knowledge. Don't bother about the two cent stamp. All questions must be addressed to "Q," save "Times," and must be sent in as early in the week as possible.

"Q" wishes to welcome the "Wanderer" into the world of literature as embodied in the society columns of our two great dailies. His debut has met with our hearty congratulations, and whenever he can do so we will take pleasure in showing our appreciation by clipping his best thoughts.

ALLEGHANY A WINNER.

The Game Yesterday Was Anything But a Brilliant One.

The first game of the series to be played for the "Green Cup" was played yesterday between the Alleghany Institute and Roanoke teams and resulted in a victory for the former. Alleghany went to the bat first and were easy outs in one, two, three order, then Roanoke's turn came and they fell against Withers with Wood in their eye. Two singles and a fielders choice gave them two runs and the bases full. Then it was that Withers' looked around and staided himself and sent the sphere whizzing over the plate as if nothing had happened and two men fanned the air in desperate attempts to connect with the ball. The next was an easy out with a grounder to first and the rooters for Alleghany heaved a sigh of relief.

In the second and third innings Stinson was knocked all over the lot for eleven hits and twelve runs and retired in favor of "Brownie" Ballantyne, who was very effective.

The game as a whole was very slow and uninteresting, but there were several very pretty and even brilliant plays made. A one-handed stop and throw of Ballantyne of an apparently safe hit was the only cool piece of fielding done by the Roanokes, whose work was decidedly yellow, much more so than the error column shows.

Glass, Meade, Handy and Marsh gave an exhibition of what nice ball playing is and not an error was made by any of them though they all had difficult chances, especially Glass. Crockett led the Roanokes with the stick, while Handy, Engley and Glass were very effective with their bats for Alleghany.

Batteries—Roanoke, Stinnett, Ballantyne and Smith. Alleghany Institute, Withers and Accorsini. Score: Alleghany, 15 runs, 18 hits, 9 errors. Roanoke, 9 runs, 12 hits, 9 errors.

Summary: Earned runs, Alleghany Institute, 5; Roanoke, 3. Two-base hits, Crockett, Hartigan and Glass. Three-base hits, Meade. Stolen bases, Alleghany, 3; Roanoke, 4. Double plays, Bentley and Glass. Bases on balls, by Ballantyne, 1; by Withers, 2. Hit by pitched ball, Marsh, Bentley and Smith. Struck out, by Stinnett, 1; Ballantyne, 1; Withers, 6. Passed balls, Smith, 1; Accorsini, 1. Wild pitches, Stinnett, 1; Ballantyne, 1; Withers, 1. Time of game, two hours and thirty minutes. Umpire Mr. Moss.
