WASHINGTON LETTER.

Captain Bassett's Incomplete Notes—Fitz-Hugh Lee's Odd French—Amusing Story of a Great Dinner.

[Special Correspondence.] I understand that the literary exco-tors of the late Captain Bassett, who was for 60 years connected with the United States senate, have about given up the idea of publishing the often referred to book which the captain had in his mind for over 25 years.

Fox Hunting, Not Miss Nancyism.

There has always been in the north, and more particularly throughout the New England states, a class who deprecated fox hunting, wondering what the world was coming to when an able-bodied man could waste such valuable time while there was so much to do, but the south is almost if not quite free from men who think thus, although there are many worthy people who know nothing of the sport and who think that fox hunting, tea drinking and Miss Nancyism go hand in hand and consider it their bounden duty to hold the red jacket gentry up to ridicule.

Torpedoes For Use on Land.

"This is a mere suggestion," said Mr. Glimby, "but I think there may be something in it. We have torpedoes whose course can be directed from the shore against ships. Why should we not have torpedoes which could be sent against an army on land? Instead of charging the enemy send out torpedoes on electric carriages, each with its wire trailing behind. Some of them would be disabled or blown up, maybe, by the enemy's fire before they reached them, but some would get there, and when they did, why, you'd press the button and the torpedo would do the rest."

keep at it much longer, it would surely break down my constitution. You don't know what it means to me to get that $2,500 without tears. Between $2,500 with tears as a practicing member of the bar and $2,500 without tears in the employ of the government I choose the latter every time."

Bicycles In Hawaii. In answer to an inquiry from a New York house Consul General Hayward of Honolulu writes: "The roads around Honolulu, where all the wheeling is done, are very good. The climatic conditions are favorable to wheeling. It is not as warm here as it is in the summer in the United States. The same temperature practically prevails all the year around. The American bicycle is the only one sold here. It is estimated that 1,500 bicycles are owned here, the population of possible riders being placed at 5,000. The duty on bicycles is 10 per cent." CARL SCHOFIELD.

CURRENT MISCELLANY.

Before the cutting of the Suez canal shortened the route to China the bulk of the tea crop consumed in Great Britain was carried to London in sailing ships by way of the cape of Good Hope. The choicest teas were transported overland by caravan and found a ready market in Russia, the home of the tea connoisseur. To the fastidious taste of a Muscovite noble a sea voyage ruins the delicate flavor of the leaves and renders them unfit for a samovar. The British consumer is by no means so dainty. The business of the London tea merchant is to grab hold of the new crop as soon as possible and to dump it by the shipload on an eager and waiting market.

The keen competition of the importers produced the famous tea clippers—full rigged ships of 700 or 800 tons register, with fine yachlike lines, heavily sparred and rigged and capable of 15 knots an hour under especially favorable conditions. Every voyage was a race and thrillingly exciting. A premium was paid to the ship that arrived first, and heavy wagers were staked on the speed of the rivals. There was nothing to compare with this emulous contest for sea supremacy except that which used to exist between the ships of our own California fleet before the days of cheap transcontinental railroad freights.—Harper's Round Table.

There has always been in the north, and more particularly throughout the New England states, a class who deprecated fox hunting, wondering what the world was coming to when an able-bodied man could waste such valuable time while there was so much to do, but the south is almost if not quite free from men who think thus, although there are many worthy people who know nothing of the sport and who think that fox hunting, tea drinking and Miss Nancyism go hand in hand and consider it their bounden duty to hold the red jacket gentry up to ridicule. However, those who know aught of cross country riding where the jumps are stiff and the country hard to navigate will tell you that in order to excel in the field, or indeed to stay there at all, your fox hunter must be in capital trim or come to an inglorious and oft time serious end. He must steer clear of that physical condition so abhorrent to all athletes and termed by them "soft."—Hanson Hiss in Outing.

Two Souled William.

A writer in The Pesther Lloyd says that there are two souls animating the German emperor, which are struggling for the ascendancy. "One is the soul of his ancestor Frederick II, and is influenced by the entire history of his house. This soul, had it alone inspired the emperor, would have made him a conservative, self centered, religious and, on the whole, one sided prince, regarding himself as summus episcopus of his country's church, as the absolute chief of so many legions and also as the despotic master of men, like all Prussian kings before him." The other is the soul of a modern absolutist.

Holding the Tongue.

No organ of the human anatomy is more often falsely accused of wrongdoing than the innocent tongue. Even in sacred writ it is called "that unruly member," and we are adjured to hold it, as though it were possessed of an evil spirit that would lead it and us to do what we ought not to do. But in truth the faithful, obedient tongue has nothing to do with our wicked and hasty words, our false witnessings and our mockings. Our proneness to lay the blame upon it is only another manifestation of that natural tendency to shift responsibility which Father Adam first manifested in the garden of Eden. The tongue indeed! When did it utter naughty words unprompted by a perverse and wayward mind? The trouble lies much deeper than with the tongue. It is imbedded in our very natures.

So "holding the tongue" of itself is not sufficient. The gossip must not be content with maintaining a martyrlike silence. He must eradicate his love of trivial things and substitute for it a broad and healthily interest in great things. The man of hasty words must not be satisfied with choking back the hot invectives; he must cultivate a spirit of tolerance and gentle charity for all mankind. "Holding the tongue" is only a virtue as it helps us to conquer the desire to use it wrongly.—Philadelphia Times.

Boston's Subways.

Speaking of the subways, the Boston Transcript says: "It is hard to realize that the street is overhead and that the light and air that one enjoys are not the open air. Its peculiar diffusion and the feeling that the light comes from all around one, as it does out of doors, is certainly a triumph of lighting or engineering or something, and its fine uniformity suggests a wish that the air and light up in Tremont street could always be as good. One almost envies the ticket takers, starters and other unenviable west end functionaries who live down there. The pleasing effect recalls Duver's underground country in the 'Coming Race,' where the world without a sun was bright and warm as an Italian landscape at noon, but the air was less oppressive, the heat softer."

A Grain of Comfort.

Photographer—I have made a speaking likeness of your wife, sir. Husband—Speaking! Um! Well, I suppose there's some consolation in the fact that it's a half tone.—Philadelphia North American.

Beauty needs no patching. Some people are dead before they die. No one climbs high enough to get above suspicion. Many churchgoers, like little fish, only nibble at the bait. Cowards are ever dying, but the brave man never dies till his time comes. "The devil doesn't care how loud a man prays on Sunday if he can use him the remaining six days of the week."—Ram's Horn.
