

A POPULAR MINISTER.

Argentine's Contribution to The Diplomatic Corps.

Special Correspondence of The Florida Star.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Dr. Eduardo Wilde, the new minister plenipotentiary from the South American republic of Argentina, is the latest and a valuable addition to the diplomatic corps in this city. The new envoy has the distinction of being one of the most noted statesmen and eminent men of letters in his country, and he will be not only a decided acquisition to the diplomatic corps, but to the scientific and literary circles of the city as well.

Dr. Wilde was born in Buenos Ayres, the capital of Argentina, and was educated in that city's famous school, the National college. He received his degree in 1867 and shortly after was appointed physician in charge of the cholera lazaretto of Buenos Ayres. At this time Argentina was at war with Paraguay, and the hospitals were overrun with sick and wounded from the battlefields. Dr. Wilde, though a young man and new practitioner, showed such skill and marked executive ability that he was soon made the ranking physician of the hospital. The record he made in the hospitals and at the college where he was still studying won for him from his alma mater the first prize of 2,500 pesos. The young doctor took the money and went to Europe, where he attended lectures at Paris, Leipzig, Berlin and London, thus fitting himself for the high positions he subsequently held under his government.

While Dr. Wilde will be remembered for many reforms in sanitation and in the hospital service, the one thing which probably made him more popular with his countrymen was his fearless conduct during the yellow fever epidemics. This scourge is not infrequent in the coast districts of Argentina, and Dr. Wilde has received two gold medals for service where the fever was at its worst and also for instituting such sanitary reforms as to stay the tide of the disease and at the same time giving his unremitting personal care to the sick.

The politics of his country first enlisted the active attention of Dr. Wilde in 1875, when he was elected to the provincial legislature from the province of Buenos Ayres. In 1876 he was elected to the national congress from the same province and was re-elected for a term of four years. He was made chairman of the committee on public waterways, aqueducts, etc., and showed such marked ability in dealing with public questions that his reputation was firmly established, and he was in 1882 appointed minister of justice, culture and public instruction, greatly to the satisfaction of a vast majority of his countrymen. In 1886 he was made minister of the interior. To the improvements and reforms instituted by Dr. Wilde while holding these positions is due in great measure the advanced and enviable position held by Argentina among the South American republics. While he was minister of public instruction he followed the precedent established by ex-President Sarmiento and introduced a score of women teachers from the colleges of the United States and placed them in charge of the native schools.

Dr. Wilde is not a stranger in this country. He has been here twice before, coming in an official capacity, each time making careful and extended investigations of the country and its institutions. His book about us, written a few years ago, is very popular in Argentina, where the people are very much interested in everything that concerns the United States. The new minister expresses surprise and regret that we in this country know so little about our small sister in South America. He hopes to improve matters in this line and will try to broaden the trade relations between the two countries. Under this head Dr. Wilde said the other day: "There arrive in the harbor of Buenos Ayres something like 30 steamers and sailing craft every day, but very few of these come from the United States. When I came here, I was obliged to take ship at Buenos Ayres and go to Europe and then take another ship and recross the Atlantic. This took 21 days and shows how much a direct line of passenger steamers is needed."

The new minister is accompanied by his wife, a very beautiful woman of the Spanish type. She is an accomplished linguist and musician and, like her husband, is cordial in manner. They will undoubtedly be popular in the diplomatic social set.

SAMUEL HUBBARD.

Cured When Others Failed.

S. A. Ingalls, Crown Point, N. Y., writes: "My wife suffered from kidney trouble for years. She consulted several physicians and tried a number of kidney cures without getting relief. She was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure and in less than a week after she began using it, she was greatly improved and three bottles cured her." B. R. Wilson & Son.

Advantages of the Farm.

There is no place where men and women can be raised so cheaply as on a country farm, and a large proportion of the men and women who are of the most value to the world have been among the direct products of the country home, says A. W. Cheever in The New England Farmer. It is here that the child may be most easily taught to be self supporting and to take pride in many independence. There is no large field of industry where children can begin so early to help earn their own living and realize that they are doing so as on the farm. I sincerely pity parents living in cities where they can find nothing for their children to do by which they can feel that they are doing something for the family, something for the common good. With water supplied by turning a faucet, the house heated by steam, a janitor tending the fire, the lights started by pressing a button, the mail brought by a postman, much of the food and other family supplies ordered by telephone and the bills paid by "papa when he goes down town," what chance is there for the city child to learn to be useful as a member of the family?

I am not surprised that a great many city families feel they have no use for children. On the farm there are numberless ways in which the child, whether boy or girl, can at a very early age be put in the way of being useful and of realizing the fact. Every farm bred boy knows what it is to fill the wood box, bring water, take up ashes and put them in a safe place, feed the poultry and other farm animals, plant seeds, pull out weeds that would injure the desired crop, set traps to catch hawks, woodchucks and other pests, snares for wild game and, better yet, have the fun of picking berries in the pastures and woods and fishing in the ponds and valley streams. And all this the farm child realizes is useful employment and that the proceeds are a contribution of his to the common fund from which the whole family draws support.

What wonder, then, that when a farm boy finds that he is earning as much as the hired man he should feel that his father should show it in some other way than by telling him that when he dies the farm will go to the heirs, and they can do as they please with it. Children are not unlike other folks in wanting some things of their own and having them now.

The Chinese ask "how is your liver?" instead of "how do you do?" for when the liver is active the health is good. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are famous little pills for the liver and bowels. B. R. Wilson & Son.

Murderous Milk.

Experiments made in Chicago prove that milk "preserved" with formalin will kill kittens, says The Rural New Yorker. The milk inspector says: "Take two kittens, for instance—two healthy cats of the same age and size. We would feed one kitten on pure milk and the other on milk which had been doctored with preparations of formalin. The result was invariably the same. The kitten which was fed on pure milk grew fat and hearty; the other kitten began to droop, languish and lost strength. Soon it would fall sick; in two or three weeks it would die."

An ordinary cat has seven lives, and we may safely credit a Chicago cat with two extra chances. The average baby has not more than half a life. When fed on milk that would kill a cat, its chance for living is whittled down to a fine point. It is a murderous practice to put these cursed "preservatives" into milk!

Unless food is digested quickly it will ferment and irritate the stomach. After each meal take a teaspoonful of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It digests what you eat and will allow you to eat all you need of what you like. It never fails to cure the worst cases of dyspepsia. It is pleasant to take. B. R. Wilson & Son.

A Shifting Population.

It is generally true in New York that neither families nor business establishments remain long in one place. Especially does this seem to be the fact each year as May 1 approaches and the streets are filled with moving vans and hurrying household goods hither and thither. It seems then as though all New York was observing "moving day," and it is true that a large proportion of the city's inhabitants change their residence every year. —New York World.

Lady Sarah Wilson seems to have had a far more serious escape from death at Mafeking than indicated in her dispatches and letters to the London Daily Mail. It seems that she was talking with her husband and another man in her house when suddenly a bomb passed right between them. The whole room was thrown into darkness, and for a few seconds no one knew the full extent of the damage that was done. In fact, there was some alarm on account of Captain Wilson's silence, but it was afterward found that when he was hurled into a corner of the room by the shock he got his mouth so full of dirt and dust that he was deprived for the nonce of all powers of speech.
