But he is now in misery, for the burro has eaten all the trees in his back yard, also a vegetable patch, and has now commenced on Pat's lodging house. Mr. Lynch now appeals to the public and asks that they present him with all the old clothes, barrel staves, bottles, wizzard oil, etc., that they are not in need of, to see whether he can appease the appetite of his favorite burro.

The Tombstone "Epitaph" comes to us with a patch on its right, or in other words, with a part of its title cut off. The cause, an injunction granted by the court commissioner, restraining that journal from using the name of the "Epitaph," but the little fellow comes dancing up to the match, and although slightly disfigured, it shows game and will issue for the time as the "Tombstone," we suppose, of the "Epitaph," which appears to be kicking even in death. It is just that kind of business which will make the little gamester prosper.—Star.

Fresh Flowers.

A song book for the infant classes of Sunday schools, by Mrs. Emma Pitt, published by Oliver Ditson & Co. So the little Sunday scholars have their own book, at last, and provided for them by a lady who well understands their wants, being herself a teacher of just such classes. Mrs. Pitt is a prominent and highly accomplished writer of Sunday school hymns and Sunday school music, and is perhaps the best fitted of any one for her pleasing task. Fresh Flowers is a very nice little book of 64 pages, and with its pretty picture cover and the pictures inside, has very much the appearance of a picture book. It has more than 50 sweet little songs, not too childish, but simple. A few titles are: "Little Lums," "Little Samuel," "Little Stars," "Shine on," "Beautiful Bells," "Children's Sheaves," "Easter-Tide," "Christmas Tree," "Little Hands," "By-and-by," and "Tell the story over." About 20 composers are represented in the music.

opinion among these societies that the players are workmen kept out of employment by a body of capitalists. The only offense brought against the men is that they left one employer to go to another, because the latter offered them higher wages than they were getting. The unions consider the players should be protected by the knights of labor.

The typographical union of St. Louis, at its meeting on Sunday, denounced the American association for its action. After promising Mr. Lucas that they would offer no objection to the reinstating of his blacklisted men if he would jump the union association and join the league, the American association, at the last moment, passed a resolution at its Baltimore meeting declaring the men must not be reinstated. The St. Louis consider this bad faith on the part of the American association, as it leaves their city with a weak team which cannot compete successfully with the other league team, and it is predicted that unless justice is done to the men, who are very popular in that city, the American club will play ball to empty seats while it is that city.—Mail and Express.

To Prevent Men From Being Buried Alive.

The prize of 40,000 francs offered by the French academy for some certain test of death, to prevent people being buried alive, was given to a physician who announced that on holding the hand of the supposed dead person to a strong light, if living a scarlet tinge is seen where the fingers touch, showing a continuous circulation of the blood—no scarlet being seen if dead. Dr. Max Busch announces that on contracting a muscle by electricity its temperature will rise and be shown by any small surface thermometer; if the person is living; if it does not rise life is extinct.
