TESTING FEDERAL GAME LAW.

In a case planned to test the validity of the federal statute forbidding the killing of migratory birds in Arizona during certain seasons of the year, Homer Harrison, a Tucson sporting goods dealer, had himself arrested last Tuesday, on a charge of killing birds.

The case will be tried before the United States Commissioner. Harrison contends that the state law creating the office of game warden specifically defined the duties of the warden and fixed the open season for game.

Game Warden Willard, Harrison says, is overstepping the duties of his office in attempting to arrogate to himself the powers that are vested in federal officials alone.

Local sporting men are interested in the outcome of the test case.

I. E. Bowers Ranch Not Looted

The Mexican bandits, between forty and fifty of them, who last Tuesday night raided the little hamlet of Querobabi, on the Sonora railway, and killed five of Governor Maytorena's soldiers, did not loot the I. E. Bowers ranch near Noria, as was announced last Wednesday.

A force of soldiers was sent from Hermosillo to round up the bandits, who burnt three small bridges between Noria and Poza, before they made their escape to the mountains.

On Wednesday, Mr. Bowers who was in Nogales, received a telegram from Mrs. Bowers that everything at the ranch was O. K.

Late Wednesday afternoon Mr. Bowers left by auto for his ranch. The machine broke down at Agua Zarca but broken parts were sent from Nogales, and Thursday he reached the ranch. Officers of the La Cobriza Mining Company, whose copper camp is near Noria, say the Americans were not molested by the bandits, notwithstanding reports to the contrary.

WILSON'S LAST WORD.

Text of Warning to Mexican Leaders by the United States.

The following is the full text of President Wilson's warning to the Mexican leaders:

"For more than two years revolutionary conditions have existed in Mexico. The purpose of the revolution was to rid Mexico of the men who ignored the constitutions of the republic and with these purposes of the people of the United States instinctively and generously sympathized.

"But the leaders of the revolution in the very hour of their success have disagreed and turned their arms against one another, all professing the same objects. They are nevertheless unable or unwilling to cooperate. A central authority at Mexico City is no sooner set than it is undermined and its authority denied by those who were expected to support it.

"Mexico is apparently no nearer a solution of her tragical troubles than she was when the revolution was first kindled, and she has been swept by civil war as if by fire. Her crops are destroyed, her fields lie unseeded, her people flee to the mountains to escape being drawn into unavailing bloodshed, and no man seems to see or lead the way to settled peace and order.

"There is no proper protection either for her own citizens or for the citizens of other nations resident and at work within her territory, Mexico is starving and without a government.

"In these circumstances the people and government of the United States cannot stand indifferently by and do nothing to serve their neighbor.

"They want nothing for themselves in Mexico; least of all do they desire to settle her differences or claim any right to do so.

"But neither do they wish to see utter ruin come upon her, and they deem it their duty as friends and neighbors to lend any aid they properly can to any instrumentality which promises to be effective in bringing about a settlement which will embody the real objects of the revolution—constitutional government and the rights of the people.

"Patriotic Mexicans are sick at heart and cry out for peace and for every self-sacrifice that may be necessary to procure it. Their people, cry out for food and will presently hate as much as they fear every man in their country or out of it who stands between them and their daily bread.

"It is time, therefore, that the government of the United States should frankly state the policy which in these extraordinary circumstances it becomes its duty to adopt.

"It must presently do what it has not hitherto done or felt at liberty to do—lend its active moral support to some man or group of men, if such may be found, who can rally the suffering people of Mexico to their support in an effort to ignore, if they cannot unite, the warring factions of the country, return to the constitution of the country, so long in abeyance and set up a government at Mexico City which the great powers of the world can recognize and deal with—a government with whom the program of the revolution will be a business and not merely a platform.

"I, therefore, publicly and very solemnly, call upon the leaders of the factions in Mexico to act, to act together, and to act promptly for the relief and redemption of their prostrate country.

"I feel it my duty to tell them that, if they cannot accommodate their differences and unite for this great purpose within a very short time, this government will be constrained to decide what means should be employed by the United States in order to help Mexico save herself and serve her people. (Signed,) WOODROW WILSON, President of the United States of America.
