Several of Clatsop's best citizens from the interior visited the city and attended the Handel and Haydn societies concert night before last. Among those present we noticed Mr. and Mrs. Knapp and daughter from Knappa, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Taylor from Clatsop, Messrs. H. F. Carnahan, Wm. Morrison, and others.

As the steamer Gen. Canby passed up last evening from cape Hancock they saw a boat high and dry on Sand Island, with a signal of distress hoisted, and men patrolling the beach as if in search of bodies. This incident may have some connection with that other incident yesterday of hailing the steamer. Capt. Whitcomb could not get near enough to render any assistance.

A Musical Feast.

Want of time prevented any more than mere mention yesterday morning of the first concert given at Metropolitan hall by the Handel and Haydn society. A wet drizzling rain, the annual meeting of Odd Fellows, and an interesting event over at Knappton, prevented many from attending who would have been there under other circumstances, and still the hall was nicely filled. The programme, which appeared in THE ASTORIAN in full on Thursday morning, was one of richness, set with gems from the most popular writers, and the execution of it filled the heart of each hearer with joy to know, and to realize, that it was the work of our own friends, all ladies and gentlemen of Astoria. Part first opened with a glee in full chorus "When the Summer Rain is Over," by Donizetti, and from first to last it appeared that "the best" was reserved until the last, as each succeeding piece seemed to be more thrilling than the first. Several beautiful pieces were roundly encored, "The Herdsman Song," duet, sung by Mrs. G. W. Wood and Miss Belle Welch; "Blow, Bugles Blow," solo, by Miss Ida Brown, chorus by the class; "Jolly Jonathan," comic quartet by Messrs. F. J. Taylor, Geo. Taylor, W. B. Adair and J. Miller. In this piece bursts of enthusiasm and a shower of bouquets from the ladies attested the appreciation of the audience. The two Taylors got their bouquets mixed, and they were not "sorted out" until after the close of the concert, when Mr. George Taylor got his, and Frank J. his. A beautiful solo "Beware," one of Perrings best, was most happily rendered in part first by Miss Kate Taylor, also, "A Very Bad Cold," a comic quartet, by Miss Orpha Beard, Miss Beard, and Messrs. Miller and Shuster; also, one of Millards solos, "Grand Old Ocean," by Capt. Wood, concluded with a gem "O'er Forest, O'er Mountain and Meadow," solo by Miss Ester Holden, with full chorus by the class.

"The Marvelous Work," from Haydn's Creation, solo by Mrs. C. H. Page, chorus by class, opened the second part, and was sweetly rendered. "Yearning," a solo by Mr. W. H. Barker followed, Mr. Barker has an excellent voice, and sings with spirit. The next piece, "Fly tender Birdling," duet by Mrs. Page and Miss Ida Brown was beautiful, and perfectly rendered. Miss Cara Van Dusen next appeared, and sang that Heaven inspiring solo by Abt, "Where is Heaven," which was roundly encored, and the lady was the recipient of a handsome bouquet. Then came the glee "Hail hail Fairy Queen," in full chorus, and a selection not on the bill by Miss Belle Welch, followed by one of Abt's solos "Tell me O' Bird of the Merry Greenwood," by Miss Ester Holden, encored. Miss Holden's is a sweet, strong voice, and she has a composure which shows that she commands it. "The Professor at home," a comic quartet, personated by Mrs. Page as Prima Donna, Miss Ida Brown as the servant girl Annie, Prof. Cook as The Professor, and Mr. Barker as The tax Collector, was happily rendered, and encored a second time. The concert closed with "The Star Spangle Banner," Capt. Wood singing the solo, and the class in full chorus. Mrs. Schmeer presided at the piano with grace, showing ability of a high order, and the execution of the entire programme told of the ability of Prof. Cook. We are pleased to hear that he regards the class at Astoria the best class in Oregon. There are as many in the class as could comfortably stand on the stage at Metropolitan hall, and we should be happy to make special mention of each individual performer, in his or her capacity, as all are deserving of praise, but this is not possible at this time. The society will continue its instruction under the leadership of Mr. Cook, and give another concert in about three months.

Another Body Found.

Mr. W. H. Clough, of the steamer Canby, informs us that another body supposed to be a fisherman, was found on the 5th, close under the rocks at the lighthouse. He had on rubber boots and oilskin shirt, pants and overalls. He was found by Mr. Allen's seining party. Deceased appears to be a man about forty-five years of age, was partly bald, supposed to be a German. The body could not be identified. A scalp wound was found on the right side of his head and three fingers of the right hand jammed. The body was taken charge of by the military authorities and buried.

Case and other leading citizens of Astoria, Col. Gillespie, Major of U. S. Engineers from Portland; Lieut. H. G. Otis, U. S. A., Capt. A. Morris, U. S. A., Dr. D. Weisel, U. S. A., and others from the forts.
