

DON'T RISK NEGLECT

Don't neglect a constant headache, sharp, darting pains or urinary disorders. The danger of dropsy or Bright's disease is too serious to ignore. Use Doan's Kidney Pills as have your friends and neighbors. Ask your neighbor! An East Jordan case.

Albert Turk says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results. Mornings my back felt lame and at times I found it hard to get up. Those jerky pains pulled me back more than once. I was hanging lumber at that time and my back got so weak and sore that I couldn't stoop over. It seemed as though I couldn't get rested and always felt tired and worn out. When dizzy spells came over me I couldn't see anything. My kidneys were often weak and irregular and I had to get up during the night. The secretions were often badly colored and painful in passage. Through a friend's advice I got a few boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me in great shape."

DAVY CROCKETT, THE HERO OF THE ALAMO

"Be sure you're right, then go ahead," was Davy Crockett's motto. He fought for the right, then went ahead to a glorious death in the Alamo. Crockett was born in Tennessee in 1786. He came of fighting stock for his father, a tavern keeper, had been a soldier in the Revolution. Young Crockett's early years were spent in roaming the Tennessee woods, hunting. He became a renowned bear hunter, a fame which he shared with his favorite rifle, "Old Betsy."

When the Creek Indians went on the war path in 1813 Crockett tossed "Old Betsy" on his shoulder and marched away to fight the Indians. He served as a scout under Gen. Andrew Jackson and was in the great Battle of Tohopeka when "Old Hickory" defeated Weatherford's warriors.

After the Creek war was over Davy returned to Tennessee and entered politics. From magistrate he rose to state legislator and next the renowned bear hunter and scout was sent to congress where he served two terms. In February, 1836, Davy with 12 of his Tennessee friends arrived at the Mission del Alamo where Col. William Travis with a little army of less than 200 men was defying the Mexican dictator, Santa Anna.

Santa Anna had a force of 5,000 men, and although the Texans had a chance to escape before this overwhelming army cut off their retreat, they refused to do so. The Mexican general surrounded the rude little adobe fort. His demand for its surrender was met with scorn. Then he raised the red flag which meant, "No quarter," and attacked.

The long rifles of the Texans mowed down the Mexican soldiers driven to the attack. On March 6 Santa Anna prepared for a grand assault. Twenty-five hundred picked men were detailed to be hurled against the fort. The first assault was beaten back with heavy loss. A second failed, but in the third desperate attempt the Mexicans broke into the fort.

After the fighting was hand to hand, Travis went down and Crockett took command. Outnumbered a hundred to one, Crockett with a few comrades stood with their backs to the wall of the church. One by one his men went down. At last only Davy was left. "Old Betsy" fired her last shot. Then Crockett seized her by the barrel and swung her about his head.

There was a short struggle. "Old Betsy" was knocked from his hand. Bayonet thrust and sword cut were rained upon him. A mass of Mexicans struck him. He went down fighting to the last. The Alamo was history.

LEWIS WETZEL, "DEATH WIND OF THE DELAWARES"

Many of the great scouts did not become Indian fighters until they were men, but Lewis Wetzel started early. He killed his first Indian when he was only thirteen years old. Wetzel was born in Virginia in 1752. His father moved to the present site of Wheeling, W. Va., and was killed there by the Indians before the eyes of his sons. Lewis swore eternal enmity against all Redskins.

One day while he and his brother were roaming in the woods they were attacked by Indians. Lewis killed one of the savages and the next instant was hit by a bullet which carried away a piece of his breast bone. Both boys were taken captive. That night while the Indians slept, Wetzel worked loose the thongs which bound him and then unfasted his brother.

After the boys had fled for about a mile they discovered that their moccasins were torn to shreds. Leaving his brother in hiding, Lewis returned to the Indian camp and, undetected by the sleeping savages, robbed them of two pairs of moccasins as well as a gun and some powder and lead. The next morning the Indians were hot on their trail and soon were close upon them. As the Indians approached, the boys stepped out of the trail into a clump of bushes, allowing their pursuers to speed past, and then they followed. Soon they heard the Indians coming back and again they stepped into the bushes and hid. The Wetzel boys played this dangerous game of hide-and-seek several times before they finally eluded the savages and returned in safety to their home. When Lewis Wetzel grew older he crossed over into Ohio and soon became one of the best-known scouts in the country.

Wetzel was called "The Death Wind" by the Delawares whom he hated particularly. More than once a Delaware warrior trembled with fear as he heard a shrill, moaning cry echoing through the forest, for it usually was followed soon afterward by a shot from the scout's deadly weapon which ended the redskin's life.

In his later years Wetzel lost the respect of many people because he began killing all Indians he met, whether hostile or friendly, and several times he was imprisoned for shooting members of peaceable tribes. In his last days he became a lonely, bitter old man until death came to him in 1808.

SACAGAWEA, "THE BIRD WOMAN" SCOUT

In the Portland (Ore.) city park stands the statue of an Indian woman. A little baby is strapped on her back and her hand is outstretched to the west, toward the Pacific ocean. The statue is that of Sacagawea, "The Bird Woman," the sixteen-year-old girl scout and guide who led Lewis and Clark over the "Shining Mountains" to the "Everywhere-Salt-Water" toward which her hand points.

When Lewis and Clark visited the Hidatsa Indians in North Dakota on their great exploring trip west, they found a Shoshone girl living with that tribe. At the age of five she had been captured from her people by a Hidatsa war party. When she was fourteen years old, Toussaint Charbonneau, a French-Canadian trapper, won her from her captor in a game of "hide-the-bone" and married her the next year.

The Bird Woman wished to return to her people and Lewis and Clark engaged Charbonneau and his wife as interpreters to the Indians they would meet. During the winter of 1805 Sacagawea gave birth to a son, whom she called Baptiste, and this tiny papoose went with his dauntless mother through all the hardships which the explorers afterward endured. He was strapped on Sacagawea's back one day when the clumsy Charbonneau upset one of the boats containing the precious instruments and records of the party. The Bird Woman at once sprang overboard into the muddy stream and rescued them.

More than once Sacagawea proved her value to the explorers. Far up the river when the forest and snow baffled her companions and they were lost, the homing instinct of the Indian girl led her on and she guided them safely to her people. The chief who welcomed them proved to be Sacagawea's brother, who was overjoyed to see his lost sister again. He sold the white men much-needed horses—and would have stolen them back, had not the Bird Woman betrayed the plot to Captain Lewis.

Sacagawea remained with Lewis and Clark until they reached the Pacific. On their return journey she stopped with her people, the Shoshones, and there she spent the remainder of her days. She died on the Wind River reservation in Wyoming April 9, 1894, almost a hundred years of age.

GRIEF IS CAUSE OF GIRL'S SUICIDE

UNABLE TO WED COUSIN, AND MOURNING LOSS OF MOTHER, FATAL SHOT FIRED.

HAPPINESS IS ENDED FOR HER

"There Was Nothing More for Which I Might Live," She Tells Sister After Shot.

Detroit.—Separated by fate from two whom she "loved more than anyone else in the world"—her mother and her sweetheart—Miss Burr Roberts, 18 years old, of River Rouge, committed suicide by shooting herself above the heart.

Only a few hours before she had pressed the barrel of her brother-in-law's army revolver to her breast, she and Roy Fortner, her sweetheart, had agreed they must not love. They were first cousins.

Through the night Miss Roberts studied over this decision, and at 7:30 o'clock in the morning, as she sat in her nightclothing on her bed, she shot herself.

"There was nothing more for which I might live," she told her sister, Mrs. Jesse Baker, when the latter hurried to the room. Mrs. Baker had been in the basement of their home when she heard the shot. She believed she said, that intruders had fired.

The girl was conscious when they found her. Stretched across her bed, she begged to be allowed to die. "With mother and Roy taken from me, I cannot bear to live," she is quoted as saying.

She died in Delray Industrial hospital two hours later. Before her death she gave a statement to Walter Hancock, of the River Rouge police department.

She told how she had come here two years ago, from North Carolina, she and her mother, and of the happiness they had known in their little home in River Rouge. She sobbed heart-brokenly when she told of her mother's death.

Then she told of the romance shattered by the kinship of her sweetheart. For two years, she said, she had loved Roy Fortner, and he had loved her.

Then came a day when Fortner believed he must look facts squarely in the face. He told her they must not be sweethearts longer; that they could not marry, because of their relationship. Fortner was grief-stricken when he learned of the act of Burr. He told police he had done only what he thought was right, that he had tried to explain to her, to tell her of the bright future ahead of her.

Miss Roberts made her home, after the death of her mother, with her sister, Mrs. Jesse Baker, of 135 South Dearborn street, River Rouge.

QUIT MEAT IF YOUR KIDNEYS ACT BADLY

Take tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Drink lots of water.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.
