A WINNING COMBINATION.

The reports coming from the sugar factory are that the Rogue valley beets are exceptionally high in sugar content. This is not the evidence only of isolated tests of a few sample beets, but is the real test of the factory run, carloads of beets being turned into a warehouse full of sugar. The sugar is pronounced of the highest grade. The factory people are expressing their satisfaction with the quality, and samples distributed around town have brought the greatest praise. Grocers state that the grain of the sugar is much finer than usual, while its color is as white as driven snow. The factory across the river is as good as money and skill can make it. No better beet grows than the product of the Rogue. The combination could not be other than the best sugar upon the market.

LABELS FROM HIGH SOURCES.

In his cabinet of advisers which President Wilson has inflicted upon the American people is found one of the chief evidences of his weakness. There is not a man in the bunch who would command the attention of the world except through the favor of an appointment by the head of the American nation, and not one has proven big enough for his job. William Jennings Bryan was undoubtedly the best thinker of them all, but he quit rather than jeopardize his self-respect further.

The unardonable indiscretion of Wilson's secretary of war, Baker, in likening the heroes of the revolutionary war to the bandits of Mexico of the present time rankles in the hearts of the millions who revere the memory of the patriots. But no doubt it was the real sentiment of Mr. Baker, just as Wilson's real sentiment in regard to the American laboring man was expressed a few years ago when he likened him to a Chinaman. They say that children and fools speak what is upon their minds—and both Wilson and Baker had passed the years of childhood when they libeled the workingman and the American patriots. Youth could excuse neither of them.

THE UNDERWOOD TARIFF LAW.

The Underwood tariff law went into effect October 4, 1913, ten months before the European war began.

What happened?

Business bankrupt, enterprise paralyzed, capital hiding, labor seeking employment, soup houses and bread lines established. Four million workers were out of employment or on short time. Imports from Europe increased enormously and our exports decreased. Gold left the country to settle our debts to Europe. A democratic stamp tax had to be levied to meet ordinary expenses of the government. Gross earnings of railroads decreased forty-four million dollars. Nearly two hundred and fifty thousand men were laid off by the railroads up to July, nine months after the Underwood bill became law. The Claffin failure for $34,000,000 occurred. Bankruptcies were frequent.

On May 29, 1914, a deputation of business men representing nearly a billion dollars of manufacturing interests, employing hundreds of thousands of workmen, told the president at the White House that the country must speedily have relief. Mr. Wilson replied that the situation was "merely psychological."

The European war began. European exporters ceased to send their products to the United States and became our greatest customers, principally in munitions and war supplies. A period of ephemeral prosperity ensued. Democratic leaders seized on this temporary prosperity as an explanation of the disasters brought on by the Underwood low tariff law and have ever since been shouting "Prosperity!"

What will happen after the European war ends? Unless there is a protective tariff European producers will again dump their surplus goods into the United States and exactly the same conditions will prevail as under the first ten months of the Underwood low tariff law. Labor will be out of employment. Business will suffer.

Unless a republican president and a republican house and senate are elected next Tuesday, pledged to a tariff system for protection of American labor and industries, a financial catastrophe will occur.

The remedy for this approaching disaster is plain.

Vote the republican ticket next Tuesday.

FRENCH ADVANCING ALONG THE SOMME

With the French Army on the Somme, Oct. 16 (By Mail).—French artillerymen, fighting on the Somme, have developed their barrage and curtain fire to a wonderful degree of perfection. French soldiers now dash to the assault of German positions under protection of a solid sheet of artillery fire that often precedes them by not more than 200 feet.

The curtain of exploding shells moves steadily forward, not only screening them completely from the fire of the enemy, but wiping out every remaining obstacle and every remaining German that may still be in its path. When finally they reach and capture a position, the curtain fire keeps just in front of them, offering protection from counter-attacks until the new position can be organized.

Early in the war when the French first began the development of curtain fire, a distance of 600 to 700 feet in front of the advancing infantry was considered absolutely necessary to make certain that the troops might not, by a sudden dash forward, run into their own fire. But French aeroplane observers have so improved their methods and artillerymen have become so skillful that the distance has been reduced by two-thirds.

Every time French infantry now moves to the attack, a score of observation aeroplanes hover constantly over them and with their wireless apparatus tell the artillerymen where to place the curtain of bursting shells.

TEN-YEAR-OLD PORTLAND GIRL LOST FOR 3 DAYS

Portland, Nov. 2.—While every patrolman in Portland was looking for her today, and detectives hunted clues of kidnapers, Katherine Elizabeth Doyle, aged 10, missing since Monday, was found cuddled asleep on the steps of a local synagogue. Fear of a scolding if she returned home caused her to wander the streets for three days, she told the police. The little girl had eaten nothing except an apple and a piece of pumpkin pie since her disappearance. "I came out of school Monday and walked and walked and walked," she said at the police station. She was taken, weary and bedraggled, to her home and parents, where a joyous welcome was given her.
