Sixth Annual Reunion

Of the Black Hills Soldiers and Sailors.

In this City June 29th and 30th.

A Grand Good time for the Honored Veterans.

Certainly the time and place for holding the sixth annual reunion of the Black Hills soldiers and sailors could not have been better, for this is the season of the year when all nature is at its loveliest, and last Wednesday and Thursday the weather was such as would fill even the most unhappy and hateful soul with joy in love for the Omnipotent power that favored this occasion with such charming days.

The veterans began to arrive by Tuesday morning, and continued to come on each train until Thursday morning, while a great many came with their own conveyances, prepared to camp out, and enjoy themselves for several days. At each train the K. of P. band of this city met the arriving guests and rendered sweet music.

WEDNESDAY FORENOON

at 10 o'clock the veterans, their wives and families, together with a good representation of civilians, were called to order at the beautiful bovery on college hill by President A. S. Stewart, who announced that the program would be proceeded with by music from the Sturgis band. This is one of the finest bands in the Hills, as their choice selection and charming rendition of it satisfied all present. After the audience sang the good old inspiring song of patriotism, "America," Col. E. E. Clough, of Deadwood, delivered a very impressive and appropriate prayer.

Mayor J. B. Dickover then delivered the address of welcome in his pleasing, clear style; said he was glad of the honor and privilege of heartily welcoming the noble defenders of our union to the city of hot water, and in behalf of the hospitable residents of our delightful resort he extended the warm hand of friendship and cordial greeting. The freedom of the city was theirs to enjoy. He paid an eloquent tribute to the brave heroes who died that our union might live, and rejoiced that some of those who lived might be with us upon this occasion. He took occasion to point with much pride at the rapid advancement of the city he rejoiced to call his home, and beamed to a future, prosperous and growing city.

Col. Lucas then welcomed the old soldiers and their families to the city, and invited them all to visit the Soldiers' Home. He said that in anticipation of their coming and their reputation having preceded them, the citizens of Hot Springs had taken occasion to instruct their chickens to roost high, and had put double padlocks on their doors, and therefore on behalf of the people of this beautiful city he was now prepared to give his comrades a wholehearted welcome. The latch string was on the outside and he hoped the visitors would all pull it. The Colonel gave his comrades and their families a royal welcome, in a very witty and entertaining manner.

The response to the welcoming addresses was given by Gen. A. R. Z. Dawson, of Deadwood, in an eloquent style. The general lost none of the laurels he had previously gained as an orator, and in a neat address he complimented this magic young city of thermal waters—the fountains of perennial youth—upon its grand progress during the past few years, with its excellent institutions of learning, its home for the decrepit and aged veterans, its massive and handsome business blocks, and the evidences of advancement and prosperity upon every side, and in behalf of the comrades for whom he was speaking he felt very grateful for the open hearted and royal manner in which the dignitaries and people of the city had welcomed them. An eloquent tribute was paid to the veterans who have been called to surrender to a higher power, and also to the widows and orphans who remain. The address was attentively listened to and greatly enjoyed.

With martial music by the Whitney, Neb. band the gathering was adjourned until 2:30 o'clock in the AFTERNOON.

Reassembling after dinner the exercises were opened with some excellent music by the K. of P. band, after which Major Eaton, the well known vocalist, lead the audience in singing that soul stirring national anthem, "The Red, White and Blue."

Col. E. E. Clough, president of the board of trustees of the Soldiers' Home, then followed by an address on the Woman's Relief Corps. The Star wishes it had space to publish the Colonel's remarks in full, for an abstract even would not do him justice. He must be heard to be fully appreciated. Suffice it to say the address abounded in sparkling gems of wit, humor and pathos. A glowing and well merited tribute was paid to the loyal women of the land for the patriotic service they performed during the war. As long as gratitude shall constitute the memory of the human heart, the love, the helpful sympathy and encouragement so willingly and loyally given to our country and its defenders by the mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts of the land. The Colonel sustained his well known reputation as a narrator of rare and peculiar events.

The inspiring song, "The Battle Cry of Freedom," was then sung. It is impossible to estimate the priceless value of this song during the civil war; for it aroused many a man to arms to defend the cause of human freedom. For the national songs of our country never lose their marvelous power to summon the patriotic people of the nation in defense of freedom and the right.

In the absence of Capt. P. E. O'Connor, of Rapid City, Col. H. E. Johnson of this city, delivered a ringing and eloquent address in which he recognized the distinguished services the veterans performed in saving the nation and keeping our flag floating in the free air of heaven. The Colonel's remarks were clothed in choice and judicial language and well received. The Star is constrained to remark right here that the Black Hills can produce more orators to the square mile than can any portion of the Northwest.

at sunset was a very pretty sight, and the way the old fellows marched to martial music would make some of the West Point graduates jealous. J. E. Baker, of Hermosa, commanded the parade, and did it as though it wasn't his first experience.

AT THE EVENING CAMP FIRE.

Just after dusk the big camp fire was lighted and the old soldiers were in their glory—in fact it was such a beautiful evening and the day had been so happily spent that the twelve or fifteen hundred present seemed much more enthused than were possible after the fire was lighted. Col. Lucas was chairman of the meeting, and first introduced the Orphean Quartet, a male quartet of this city, which has gained an enviable reputation as one of the finest quartets in the northwest. They sang "Soldiers Chorus" in fine style and were heartily applauded.

Professor and Commander Reed, of Crawford, Neb., was then introduced for a speech. He said it had been customary upon such occasions to tell a good many army stories, but he wasn't much of a story teller, yet had heard of the pop corn story, when one hot summer afternoon the pop corn in the field got to popping and covered the field all over; it continued to pop, and an old donkey down in the pasture near by thought it was snowing and froze to death. Prof. Reed's reputation as a story teller was then made; he was loudly cheered. He paid an eloquent tribute to the dear women, who braved so many hardships during the dark days of the rebellion; he believed God and the flag—the stars and stripes—were each to be adored by all patriots, and continuing said "palsied be the hand that ever attempts to trail that flag in the dust or to cast aside the flag." Prof Reed is a very eloquent, interesting speaker, and his remarks were greatly enjoyed.

Some difficulty was experienced in getting lights for the singers, and while the lights were being procured Colonel Clough was called on for an address, and the way he related army incidents one after another, some funny and some serious, kept the audience between smiles and tears for a long time.

After the audience sang "Marching Through Georgia," Major Bowers related several army incidents which were appreciated by the old soldiers.

"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," was then sung and Judge Bennett was called upon for a speech, but begged to be excused as the night air seriously affected his voice.

Gen. Dawson then very eloquently entertained the audience for a few minutes, commenting upon the narratives that had been related, and said it reminded him of a young speaker who became eloquent before a meeting of Sons of Veterans and said that "while our fathers have performed a grand and noble duty in battling for the Union, we have a still greater duty to perform—we must perpetuate every the last address of the evening, and, though short, was a fitting close for a day happily enjoyed by all participants.

THURSDAY FORENOON.

Upon the dawn of the morning the weather seemed somewhat threatening, but it soon cleared up, and the day was but a repetition of the one previous, clear and beautiful.

Promptly at 10:30 a. m. the Sturgis band opened proceedings on the ground with a lovely national air.

Then the audience was led by Major Eaton in singing "When Johnny comes Marching Home."

Judge Bennett was the first speaker and his appearance created applause. He is regarded as one of the most polished of the many very fine speakers in the Hills, and he fully sustained his enviable reputation. He substantiated the many tributes that had been paid the departed comrades, and closed with a most eloquent apostrophe to the living comrades. He said, "comrades, we are on the shady side of life, with the shadow to the eastward; looking only to the past, the sad and joyous past—there are no pleasant hopes of the future, there is no future for us, not in this life; we are only living in dreamland—wonderful and beautiful dreamland—looking backward and dreaming of the life that we've passed," and with that pathetic poem "John Anderson, My Joe John" the Judge closed amid great applause.

The K. of P. band rendered a sweet selection, and Major Anderson then entertained the audience upon the subject "The Old Soldiers' place in history." He said he believed they would take first place as warriors and benefactors; he was proud of the fact that while many of the Union boys were thrust into prison pens like Andersonville and Libby, our country did not resort to retaliation; the very enemies who then struggled with are now your friends. Touching upon the subject of pensions he said, "boys you saved this union, and the country is yours, and these croakers are merely liars; but yet we will permit them to live—they are quite largely living, although upon your bounty. These people who are waiting around for the old soldiers to die, will find that they have the longest job on their hands that they ever tackled."

Gen. Dilworth, commander of department of Nebraska, was then called upon, and said that as it was about the dinner hour, and the old soldiers were a class that never missed a meal he shouldn't say much—yet he managed to say a great deal, but it was very interesting and greatly enjoyed. He wrung in a very good stab at the chronic grumblers of our country, alluded to our country's prosperity, and of his own state; said it was a perfect garden of fables from one end to the other, and that he thought it would be a sensible thing for those grumblers who weren't satisfied with this country to move to some other.

Mr. Russell was next called and in an intensely witty and bright speech captivated the audience, and for a time caused them to forget that it was considerably after meal time. He received great applause upon the close of his interesting remarks. The band played and the exercises were closed.

They Played Ball.

Deadwood and Hot Springs Play Two Interesting Games.

FIRST GAME.

Hot Springs people have not taken very much interest in their base ball team this season. Most of our people went out to the park Wednesday afternoon fully expecting to see Billy Traffley's aggregation from Deadwood fairly wallop the life out of our boys. But they didn't do it. For a time it looked as if the said aggregation of reds were not in it. But they braced up and by dint of hard playing, assisted by several old gold decisions on the part of the umpire, they succeeded in pulling out the game. There is a gentleman from Deadwood, Mr. Peters by name, who labors under the painful hallucination that he can umpire in a ball game. Perhaps he can but before he makes so many raw decisions again as he did Wednesday, it might be a good plan for him to secure a full coat of armor. He called strikes when everybody knew they were only foul tips, he couldn't tell a fair ball from a foul if it struck anywhere within a block of the foul line; his vision was much impaired when the fleet footed players were circling around stealing bases and more than half of the strike outs credited to the pitchers should be marked down to Mr. Peters' credit. It is only just, to say that sometimes the Deadwoods suffered from the rank decisions but Hot Springs fared worse. The Deadwood boys are as nice and gentlemanly a lot of ball players as one could wish to find. Williams and Bittinger was the battery for the home team and did very effective work. Mr. Williams was pretty wild at times and seems to have too much speed for his control of the ball, but a little more practice will no doubt overcome this. The following is the result of Wednesday's game by innings:

Hot Springs 2 2 1 0 0 0 0 2-7
Deadwood 1 0 1 0 3 2 0 2*-9

SECOND GAME.

Thursday afternoon the Deadwood Mets realized that they had undertaken a pretty good sized job and so, they started in for blood right from the beginning. Hurley was in the box for the visitors and did some pretty effective work, striking out eleven men. But in the ninth the Hot Springs boys dropped onto his curves and batted out three runs and the game. Aigen pitched a good, steady game for the home team and was credited with seven strike-outs. Traffley caught for the Mets and Bittinger did a like service for the home team. Both filled their places very effectively. A three base hit was scored by Austin in the first inning, and later on Bittinger lined out to deep center a clean two bag drive. In the fifth Hot Springs had the bases full and only one man out. It looked as if they were going to win the game right there. But young Hurley then and there started in to redeem himself. The next two men to come to bat were struck out, and the three men died on their bases. In the ninth inning Hot Springs scored a run, and once more filled the bases, and only one man was out. Then Moore came to bat. This gentleman had already covered himself with glory by making two phenomenal catches in center field. But he was reserved for a greater feat. So he waited patiently until Mr. Hurley sent one of his drop curves right over the plate. With this curve Mr. Moore's bat collided, making a sharp smack like a young fellow meeting his best girl after an absence of a few weeks, and the game was won. The grand stand trembled and the bleachers went wild. Hot Springs scored three runs in the ninth and Deadwood succeeded in getting but one. The umpire—well he was a little off at times, but on the whole Mr. O'Lynn knows immensely more about ball playing than did the gentleman who lent such material assistance to Deadwood in Wednesday's game. The score by innings:

Hot Springs, 0 2 0 1 0 2 0 3-8
Deadwood, 1 1 1 0 0 1 0 2-7

Making Them Squirm.

Grace Frawley and her coterie of immoral doves were again arraigned before Judge Kanable Monday, upon complaint of J. W. Martin. Grace was promptly fined $100 and costs. She has appealed this case, and given bonds therefor.

AT THE BANQUET HALL.

On Thursday evening between five and six hundred, upon invitation, assembled at the Soldiers' Home to enjoy the feast that had been spread there principally through the efforts of the W. R. C. of the city. The ladies were of course aided materially in providing this elegant banquet by a few of the sterner sex, but to them, the Soldiers' Home management, and to the committee we are to the credit belongs. It was indeed a most delicious repast and never was a spread more heartily enjoyed than by those old veterans who gathered at that festal board last evening. Mirth and good cheer reigned supreme, and as the full liberties of the Home were freely extended, the occasion was one full of complete pleasure. After the supper all who delight in dancing engaged in that pleasant amusement for a few hours, and a most delightful time indulged in.

On Monday Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cavanaugh attempted to drive up the steep incline on Chicago avenue, north of Eighth street, and when about half way up, the horses stopped and commenced backing. The buggy was turned over the embankment, and rolled down the side, splashing Mr. and Mrs. C. out and they rolled to the bottom into the big nasty puddle of water that disgraces the city in that locality. But for the prompt assistance of men who were working in that locality the lady would have been drowned, as she was pinioned under the buggy in the water. Mr. Cavanaugh was considerably bruised up.
