WILSON CAMPAIGN MONEY

Henry Morgenthau, who has resigned the embassy at Constantinople in order to help the Wilson campaign for re-election, says there will be plenty of money for the canvass. Mr. Morgenthau was himself one of the most generous contributors to the Wilson fund of four years ago—as were many others who have since been transplanted to the diplomatic service—and the money which he gave in 1912 for a prospect he will doubtless duplicate this year for having had his honors. Likewise the gentleman who will succeed Mr. Morgenthau. Likewise the gentlemen who have not resigned their embassies. Likewise the gentlemen who will hope to have embassies in case Wilson should happen to get by once more. In addition there are all the enterprises which have come under the beneficent purview of the Federal Trade Commission, the importers who have profited so largely by the constantly increasing volume of goods brought into this country despite the war and because of the low rates of duty laid by the Underwood tariff, the federal officeholders who will come across with a considerable percentage of their salaries, the men who have ships to sell to the government at exorbitant prices in case the shipping bill should become a law, and many other classes who will be held up under one pretext or another.

In short, money will be the last thing which the Wilson campaign managers will lack. They will have a war-chest such as no campaign has ever seen.

But this election will not be won with money. There are issues pending this year which cannot be screened by gold. For example, though the democratic campaign treasurer may be able to boast a handsome surplus, the treasurer may be able to boast a handsome surplus, the treasurer of the United States will be in no such happy situation. What will it profit the democrats to stuff their campaign barrel with boodle while the federal treasury continues to give forth only a hollow, rattling sound?

The Raleigh, North Carolina, News and Observer, owned by Secretary of War Josephus Daniels, says that the democratic party bases its strength upon the people composing that party. The figures show that in 1912 there were 6,293,000 democratic votes cast, while there were 7,600,000 votes cast for the progressive and republican candidates. Mr. Bryan says that it is evident that the progressives have gone back into the republican party. Just what Josephus expects to make out of his statement, it is difficult to understand. Elections in 1914 showed large decreases in democratic votes. Nobody claims that the democrats have made any gain anywhere, not even in the solid south. There will be more than 8,000,000 republican votes cast in 1916, and less than 6,000,000 democratic votes.

Colonel Roosevelt says that if the next political campaign is waged on the tariff issue such an appeal would be an appeal to the belly and not to the soul of this nation. But a man with an empty belly is mighty likely to smash one of the ten commandments and thereby imperil his soul. The Lord employed the miracle of the loaves and fishes to feed the multitude. After they had been fed he gave them spiritual advice.

Successive republican primaries furnish conclusive evidence that there is no overwhelming spirit of stampede at work among the rank and file of the party, who are going on carefully to select good men to represent them at Chicago with the confident expectation that wise counsels will prevail in the national convention and that the nominee will be a man upon whom all the anti-democratic voters can unite.

Bowel Complaints in India

In a lecture at one of the Des Moines, Iowa, churches a missionary from India told of going into the interior of India, where he was taken sick, that he had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with him and believed that it saved his life. This remedy is used successfully in India both as a preventative and cure for cholera. You may know from this that it can be depended upon for the milder forms of bowel complaint that occur in this country. Obtainable everywhere.
