Boy Wanted

Somewhere in this town is one boy who is a "go-getter" spirit, full of grit and ambition, and absolutely honest. We want that boy. He will be the only boy agent in this town for the famous MOVIE WEEKLY MAGAZINE. He will work after school and other spare time. His pay will be what he makes it; besides fine prizes and FREE MOVIE TICKETS. When he makes good he will be promoted. If you are between 14 and 19 years old, determined to "make good" and truly think you are the boy for this job, then apply by letter to Mr. E. L. Gilbert, "Personal" 3rd, floor, 119 West 40th Street, New York City. Give full details of any past selling experience; your age; parents full name and business; your school grade and at least two references.

LUTHER

The farmers of this community are getting about through harvesting their wheat, and most all are over their corn crops the second time.

Quite a number from around Luther are attending the Billy Sunday revival at Morristown.

Mr. John J. Greene and daughter Ella of Athens Tenn., are visiting friends and relatives at Luther this week. Mr. Greene is a former citizen of Hancock County.

Saturday and Sunday was the regular meeting time at War Creek. The Sunday school is progressing nicely under the supervision of Walter Lamb.

Rev. John Wilburn, an old veteran of the cross preached at Union Saturday night and Sun.,

We enjoyed reading the song in the last issue written by Robt. and Clay. The warning given to other boys through the medium of these boys unfortunate experience, is worthy of consideration.

Revs. R. D. and Clinton Green were among the number of ministers from our place to hear Mr. Sunday give sin and the devil a scathing wallop.

Mr. Henry Drinnon of Mooresburg was visiting home folks at Luther the latter part of the week.

COOL BRANCH

Dear Editor:- I will give you the news from this place.

Wet weather is hindering farm work here some, but corn crops and gardens look good.

The Sunday school at Cool Branch is progressing nicely and we have a good attendance.

W. A. Yount was visiting his Uncle Geo. A. Williams at Treadway Sunday.

Jesse Wilder and little son who has been visiting friends and relatives at Treadway, returned to their home at Edison today.

Lewis and Geo. Williams were on the road today looking very blue, guess their girls went back on them.

Mr. C. C. Gordon and Wife passed our burg today riding two deep on the same horse.

Lee, Hence, and Grant Williams. W. A. Yount, Covey Helton and Leona Williams were out car riding Sunday evening.

Mr. J. R. Greene our Rural Mail Carrier went to Hawkins County to look after his farm work this week.

Grant Williams works on his car eight days in the week now, and says he has got it in good shape.

Wish some one in every community would write to the News it would make the paper much more interesting.

Betsy.

HOW CODY GOT NICKNAME OF "BUFFALO BILL"

When the Kansas Pacific railroad was being built through Kansas in 1867-68 it was necessary to provide food for an army of more than 1,500 truck-layers. A source of supply was near at hand—vast herds of buffalo—and men were hired to do nothing else but kill these animals for food. One of the best-known of the hunters was William Frederick Cody, a young frontiersman who had been a pony express rider and guide for General Custer.

The work was dangerous, for the Indians did all they could to stop progress on the railroad. They especially hated these hunters who killed more buffalo in one day than they destroyed in a week, and Cody took his life in his hands every time he went out. He soon became such an expert hunter that the railroad men gave him the nickname of "Buffalo Bill."

During Cody's career as a buffalo hunter, a period of 18 months, he killed a total of 4,280 bison. His greatest exploit was his victory over Billy Comstock, a scout and rival hunter. The match was arranged by officers of Fort Wallace to decide which of the two men was the greatest slayer of bison. They were to hunt one day of eight hours, and the man who killed the greatest number of the animals was to be declared the champion buffalo hunter.

A herd was found and separated into two bunches. Cody immediately began riding at the head of his bunch, shooting the leaders and crowding the followers in toward the center of an ever-narrowing circle. In a short time he had killed 38, all of whom lay dead over a small area. Comstock had begun shooting at the rear of his herd, and although he killed 23, they were scattered over a distance of three miles. Two more herds were found, and when the final count was made, Cody had 69 and Comstock 46.

Later Cody became a famous scout and guide. He served with General Custer in Kansas and General Carr in Colorado. Cody was known as "Pahaska—Long Hair" by the Sioux, who had great respect for his prowess. After the Indian wars ended Buffalo Bill organized his Wild West show, which added to his fame not only in America, but in Europe as well. After seventy-two years of life crowded with adventure, he died January 10, 1917. He is buried on Lookout Mountain, near Denver Colorado.

BEN CLARK, WHOM THE INDIANS CALLED "MIE-NO-TO-WAH."

When General Custer's fighting seventh charged down upon Chief Black Kettle's Cheyennes on the Washita to the tune of "Garryowen" that cold November morning in 1868, at his side rode a man whom the Indians recognized, and they shouted to each other "Look out for Red Neck! He's a dead shot!"

Clark played an important part in Custer's campaigns that year, but his most valuable services were performed as a scout for Gen. Nelson Miles in the war with the Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Comanches and Kiowas in 1874. His greatest feat was his part in the rescue of the Germaine sisters, two little white girls who had been captured when their parents were murdered by raiding Cheyennes in their Kansas home.

Two of the girls, Adelaide and Julia Germaine, were recaptured from the Cheyennes when Lieut. Frank Baldwin struck the camp of Chief Cray near so suddenly that the Indians had no chance to kill their prisoners, as they usually did. The girls informed General Miles that two of their sisters, Catherine and Sophia Germaine, still were held by another band of the Cheyennes.

Ben Clark immediately set out to discover where they were. After a long search he found that they were in the camp of Chief Stone Calf. General Miles secured a photograph of Julia and Adelaide and on the back of it he wrote a message to the other sisters telling them that every effort was being made to rescue them. He gave this message to a friendly Indian who visited Stone Calf's camp and, unobserved by the Indians, slipped it into the hand of one of the girls.

The general next sent a message to Stone Calf, demanding his surrender and telling him that no mercy would be shown his warriors unless the Germaine girls were brought to the nearest army post alive and unharmed. In a short time Stone Calf came in to the Cheyenne agency, surrendered his white captives and all four sisters were reunited. Ben Clark's scouting had not been in vain.

When the Cheyennes were finally subdued, Clark settled down at Fort Reno, Okla., with them. He became their interpreter in all their dealings with the white men, and the Cheyennes came to honor "Red Neck" as much as they had feared him when he was fighting against them. Later he was custodian of old Fort Reno, and when he died a few years ago, after more than 50 years in the government service, his passing was mourned by white and red men alike.

FORSYTH'S SCOUTS, THE ORIGINAL "ROUGH RIDERS"

This is the story of 51 scouts, instead of just one, for together they won undying fame in one of the fiercest battles ever fought with the Indians on the frontier. They were Forsyth's Scouts, the "Rough Riders of 1868." Gen. George A. Forsyth was their leader—"Sandy" Forsyth, he had been called in Civil war days.

The scouts left Fort Wallace, Kan., in pursuit of a band of Dog Soldier Cheyennes who had been raiding in western Kansas. Early one September morning while they were camped on the Arickaree river in eastern Colorado the Indians appeared and tried to stampede their horses. As the scouts prepared to mount and give battle, Sharpe Grover, their guide, touched Forsyth on the arm. "Oh, heavens, general!" he cried, "look at the Indians!"

In the next instant the surrounding hills and valleys were alive with savages, who charged down upon the scouts, but were driven off by a few volleys. Surrounded and hopelessly outnumbered, there was but one thing for Forsyth to do. In the center of the stream was a little island on which grew a few small trees. "Make for the island, men!" shouted Forsyth. "It's our only chance."

They reached the island just in time. While Indian riflemen along the banks of the stream poured in a hot fire, a picked body of 500 warriors led by the Cheyenne chief, Roman Nose, charged down upon them, intending to ride over Forsyth's head in one red wave of destruction. The Indians were benten back, they settled down to besiege the scouts.

Twenty-three of the 51 scouts had been killed or wounded when evening came. Forsyth was suffering from three wounds and Lieut. Fred Beecher, the second in command, had been killed, as had the only surgeon in the command.

For nine days, in spite of hunger and wounds, the little band of scouts beat off the Cheyennes, until two of the scouts managed to slip through the Indian lines at night and guide a force of cavalry to their rescue. One Forsyth gave the unwounded scouts a chance to try to escape, leaving him and the other wounded to their fate, but they refused. "We've fought together, and we'll die together, if we must!" was their heroic answer.

The island was named Beecher's Island, in honor of their lieutenant, and today a monument stands on it to mark forever the place where Forsyth's Scouts fought so bravely.
