NO GRUMBLING AT PRIVATION

Britishers Willing to Subsist on Short Rations if That Will Help Win the War for Liberty.

It really isn't necessary to tell the British people not to waste food. There is nothing eatable left on the average plate when the meal is finished. Meals are one interminable round of fish and eggs, fish and eggs. Eggs are found disguised under all manner of names, but always there are eggs, not seven times a week, but almost 21 times a week, writes Chester M. Wright, member of the American Federation of Labor mission to England.

Meat is rationed by a card system. So is sugar, of which you may have six ounces a week and no more. One of the best hotels in London is serving butter or margarine only once daily. Many hotels have none for days at a time.

Desserts are a thing of the past, recorded in history but not among the things extant. Milk is rationed. Tea soon will be. Bread is rationed. Hotels will serve you with one brown roll per meal. The average man would be amazed at the British menu today, but the British do not grumble. They go on short rations knowing that it must be done, and accept it as part of the war that must be carried victoriously.

Even if it were possible to break the food restrictions the average Britisher has not the slightest desire to get more to eat than his neighbors. Especially among the British workers is there an obvious grim satisfaction when members of the American labor mission and speakers tell how ships are being pushed to completion in 23 states, and how self-denial by the British people in matters of food and luxuries make each ton of maximum value and effect in prosecuting the war to a finish.

The British workers realize that more than half their food comes from the United States.

"The less food the more troops," is the slogan which appeals especially to the Clyde ship builders, one of whom said: "If ships from the United States are laden as far as possible with soldiers and ammunition, then every bolt we drive is as good as a rifle shot against the Germans."

AFTER THE WAR

Elephants May Be Tamed to Reconstruct France

Pittsburg, Aug. 31—John Ringling, circus owner, has determined to propose to the Allied governments that African elephants be tamed and used in the reconstruction of France after the war.

Because gun and shell fire at the battle front are slaughtering mules and horses by the tens of thousands, Mr. Ringling and Edmond Lapie, of the University of Louvain, Belgium, met in conference here the other day and discussed plans for using the heretofore African elephant in reconstruction work in Europe.

The men agreed that the loss of horses and mules could not be replaced for many years, and, since African elephants may be found in vast numbers, and be tamed easily, both felt positive that the Allies would assist in the shipment of the big beasts.

"One elephant will do the work of 26 horses," said Mr. Lapie, who has charge of the Belgian government's business in the Congo. "Europe must be reconstructed and there will be no horses. We are using the African elephant in carrying timber from the forest, in plowing and in all kinds of farm work. He carries and lifts beams and girders for the construction of buildings."

WEST WATERFORD

The friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Sunburg met at their home, August 29, to give them a farewell reception before they went away. About 40 were present. TRANSFER BEES

Use of Movable Frame Hives Will Increase Owners' Profits

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31—Hundreds of thousands of bee colonies, representing about one-third of the number kept in the United States, are housed in log "gangs" and in box hives, and produce for their owners an insignificant amount of honey compared with what they might do if they were transferred to movable-frame hives and handled by improved methods. If all the beekeepers now using box hives would adopt the modern type of movable frame hive they would not only secure more profit from their bees for themselves, but would add many millions of pounds of honey to the Nation's supply, according to Farmers' Bulletin 961, "Transferring Bees to Modern Hives," by E. L. Sechrist, recently published by the United States Department of Agriculture. The bulletin describes a number of the best methods of transferring from old to new hives. Much of the honey produced by colonies in box hives is wasted by crude methods of securing the crop, the bulletin states, and these colonies are reduced in earning value by uncontrolled swarming, and by the annual loss of bees which die in winter because of lack of protection and sufficient food stores.

"36" Let's Make Vermont One of Them. "36"

Tuesday, Sept. 10, 12 m. to 8 p. m.

IS PRIMARY ELECTION DAY

On that day every Vermont voter is urged to go to the Polls and vote for the nomination of county Senators and town Representatives who it elected will vote to ratify the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes.

BECAUSE

Vermont has a right to ask for Constitutional protection from the lawless liquor traffic of other states.

We have tried both State and town prohibition and have found them only partially effective. The liquor dealers of Massachusetts, New York and other neighboring States have insolently persisted in flooding Vermont with intoxicating liquor in spite of our desire to keep it out expressed in our statutes, and we have had no redress.

The only effective remedy is to put the whole law-defying traffic under the ban of the Constitution as we did human slavery fifty years ago.

Vermont has a right to help make the United States, of which it is a part, a cleaner and a better country.

No one puts forth the claim that the manufacture, sale and consequent drinking of alcoholic beverages tend to make our people stronger, more progressive, more moral. All experience proves that the liquor traffic causes a vast amount of poverty, disease, crime and misery. This is as true in California or Arizona as in Vermont. We as citizens of the United States who happen to live in Vermont have a vital interest in the prosperity and welfare of our fellow-citizens who happen to live in other States. As citizens of the United States we have the same right to seek the suppression of an injurious traffic in the whole country that we have as citizens of our own town to vote against license in that town.

It is our right as loyal citizens by orderly and constitutional means to seek to promote the welfare of the whole Country.

The new times in which we are living and shall live for generations to come require the destruction of the beverage liquor traffic.

Before we entered the great war, over 100,000,000 bushels of grain a year were consumed in this Country in the manufacture of intoxicating beverages. Our yearly expenditure for these beverages was over $2,000,000. It was a tremendous drain upon our resources, but in those flush times we did not feel it so much.

Since we entered the War, we have been denying ourselves wheat and sugar and meat in order that our armies and our allies might be fed, but the brewers have still used over 30,000,000 bushels of grain a year, many thousands of tons of sugar and much other food material.

After the War closes, the reconstruction of the world's ruined civilization will demand such a conservation of every resource as we have not yet conceived of. Never again can the world tolerate such waste of its wealth as the liquor traffic has caused in the past century.

"A Saloonless Nation" is a necessity of the years to come.

The objection that a minority might force prohibition upon an unwilling majority by means of a constitutional amendment is unpatriotic and groundless.

1. It is unpatriotic because it is not so much a criticism of this government as it is an attack upon our system of government. The State is the unit in our Federal government, and Vermont is one of those units. She has the same right to speak that her neighbor New York has. If a minority could never have its way, Abraham Lincoln would never have been President of the United States.

2. But in fact there is not the slightest danger that a minority will force its will on a majority in this case. The opponents of ratification have named fourteen States which they hope to hold against the amendment. If they should hold every one of the fourteen—which they will not—by the last census those States contained only forty-one million of our ninety-one million population.
