

MILK FEVER IN COWS.

Possible Causes Discussed and Remedies Suggested.

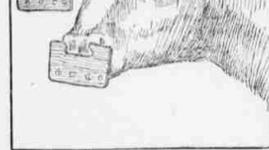

There are many cows lost each year from milk fever, and the worst feature about it is that it is very apt to be the best cows in the herd—that is, those best for milk production.

It is not profitable to have a cow or a breed of cows which runs dry for three or four months.

It will pay to give extra feed and extra care in every respect, keep off the flies, see to shade in the pasture and plenty of good water, save from all possible worry.

In purchasing a dairy cow of course this habit is an important consideration. It makes simply the difference between a profitable and an unprofitable cow.

Buttermilk Wheys. One of our southern readers who has a market for all the buttermilk he can produce at 10 cents per gallon writes that in the summer time the buttermilk after settling awhile will separate, the curd rising to the top and the whey settling at the bottom.

The only way known to us to accomplish what our correspondent desires is in the first place not to let the cream get too sour before churning and to keep the buttermilk as cool as possible.

Water For Dairy Cows. Good water and plenty of it, untainted by any manure heap, barnyard or any other source, must be given to the cows.

Thunder and Milk. The unusual number of thunderstorms this summer should be accompanied by the unusual amount of sour milk if the old belief that thunderstorms sour milk is true.

Showing Off. "What big words your sister uses, Harry!" "Yes; she does when she's first introduced. She'll be all right after awhile."

It usually begins about the second or third day after the calf is born, and the first symptoms are usually a chill and a nervous twitching of the head or ears.

It Satisfied Lincoln. Among Lincoln's callers one morning in 1862 was a stranger seeking both personal and official assistance from the president and who brought with him some letters lauding his loyalty that bore the signature of a former governor of Maryland.

The treatment by cold water cure has been recommended by some—that is, wrapping her body in a wet sheet, then covering with two or three woolen blankets and a rubber blanket if at hand.

Another remedy recommended by some veterinarians, especially if the animal is so nearly paralyzed as to have difficulty in swallowing, is a hypodermic injection of esorine or ergotine, the esorine at one to two grains in water enough to dissolve, the ergotine twenty to thirty grains in as much water as will dissolve or two and a half ounces fluid extract, which may be repeated in twelve hours.

While by this treatment those cases that are detected in the early stages can usually be cured, it is almost hopeless when the animals have reached that condition of paralysis where they cannot stand on their feet when lifted up.

WHAT WISDOM DENIED US.

The Most Fatal Gift That Could Be Conferred on Mankind.

Granted the power to do it, which would be the most fatal gift that could be conferred on mankind?

Omnipotence without omniscience. An omnipotent man, with the best of intentions toward his kind, could easily wreck the universe and probably would, since, unless he knew everything, he would infallibly make some mistake which could not fail to have very terrible consequences.

Equally terrible would be the power of prolonging life at will, since no man or woman would willingly die so long as life remained even tolerable.

A SOLEMN QUESTION.

One of the Pranks Artemus Ward Played Upon His Brother.

In the days when Cyrus Browne and his brother, Charles Farrar Browne, better known as "Artemus Ward," lived in Waterford, "the little Maine village that nestled among the hills and never did anything else but nestle," Charles delighted to play practical jokes on Cyrus.

One of the pranks Artemus Ward played upon his brother, Charles, was to freeze him one freezing night, says the narrator of the following prank in the Boston Herald, at an hour that would be thought early in a metropolis, but was not so considered in Waterford.

The family were sleeping soundly in the warm comfort of their beds when the future showman halted under the window of Cyrus, and raised an alarm. "Cy! Oh, Cy! Come out here, Cy!"

After a time Cyrus appeared at the window. "What do you want?" he demanded through the crack he had opened.

"I want you to come down" with great earnestness. "I want to ask you a question, Cy."

"Oh, go 'way!" said Cyrus, his teeth chattering in the awful cold. "It's only one of your jokes."

"Really, Cy, it's a very important question," persisted Charles with increased earnestness. "It's a solemn thing, and I want you to come down, Cy; I want you bad."

Finally, after grumbling and expostulating, Cyrus slipped on some clothes and came reluctantly downstairs and out into the arctic cold. "Now what in the world is it that you want?" he asked.

Charles came up close, laid his hands on his brother's shivering shoulders, and in that voice of plaintive solemnity which in after years moved so many people to mirth said:

"I want to ask you, Cy, if you think slavery is wrong?"
