RULES FOR FEEDING CALVES

Desired Nutrients Furnished by Giving Young Animal Variety—Avoid Sudden Changes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Feeding is an important factor in developing a good breeding animal, or a favorite in the show ring. There are many points to be remembered. These points may be called rules of feeding, among which specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture give the following:

- 1. Provide a variety of feeds at all times, if possible. It is easier to supply the proper amounts of the desired nutrients which the calf needs if several different feeds are used. The ration will also be more palatable. 2. Do not make sudden changes in the feeds used or in the amounts given. If it becomes necessary to change feeds from, say, clover to alfalfa hay,

Grain in Medium Amount, Fresh Water and Pasture Are Necessary for Success With Calves.

- 3. Do not overfeed the calf. Feed as much grain as it will clean up in 30 minutes and wish it had just a little more. Feed left in the trough to be breathed over is worse than wasted. If any remains it should be removed and less given the next time. Digestive disorders occur from feeding too much rather than too little. 4. Do not underfeed the calf. It should make a continuous gain. If it does not grow each day the feed given it is about the same as wasted. It never pays to starve a calf. In fact, the calf does not begin to pay for feed until it is given more than enough to make some gain.

5. Do not annoy or disturb the calf unnecessarily. It requires more feed to keep it growing while standing or moving about than while lying down at rest.

6. Do not feed moldy, musty, or spoiled feeds. To do so may cause serious digestive disorders. All hays should be bright, well cured, and free from mustiness, dirt, and coarse weeds. The grain also should be free from dirt, mold, and mustiness. If ground feeds get wet they are likely to mold. This is especially true of cottonseed meal and ground corn.

7. Do not waste time in feeding the calf, or in preparing feed, since wasted time needlessly increases the cost of gains. Grain should be fed whole except when teaching the calf to eat and possibly also near the end of the fitting or finishing period. Whole grain as a rule is more palatable than ground feeds. Ear corn may be shelled, broken, or chopped up in the feed box rather than ground. Husks on snapped corn need not be removed for this purpose. It rarely pays to shred stover or to cut or chaff hay for the calf. It need not be fed three times a day when twice a day will do as well, although the former may be practiced when fitting the animal for show or sale. Do not go to the expense of buying prepared "stock feeds" or "remedies." Home-mixed feeds are cheaper and equally, if not more, satisfactory. A healthy calf does not need condition powders.

RELATIVITY.

"What are your views regarding relativity?" "I'm for it," replied Mr. Groucher, "if anybody can show me a scientific method for getting along with all my relations, I'll pension him for life."

PAPER FROM BAMBOO.

The Indian government is investigating the possibilities of manufacturing paper from bamboo in Burma.

Boxing Gloves on Fighting Cocks. An English farmer was recently haled into court and fined on the charge of keeping a place for the purpose of cock fighting, but he made the defense that the sport as indulged in at his place was not an offense within the law, as the birds fought with boxing gloves instead of spurs.

TOOK ITS NAME FROM BEECH

First Books Were Made From Boards of That Tree, and the Appellation Has Stuck.

In highly civilized communities the word "book" is as frequently used as the word "bread." In fact, the state of civilization to which a community or an individual has attained may be fairly measured by the number of times the word and the object "book" are used by that community or individual.

When books were first invented, they were made of beechen boards, both among the Anglo-Saxons and the Germans. The Anglo-Saxon word for "beech" was "boe," and its German equivalent was "buch."

The name "boe" stuck to the object after the stage of beechen production, and the spelling was changed to its present form in the course of the development of the English language. In German it retains its original form, "buch."

It is well to remember that the continued use of the name of a tree to designate a book is not so inappropriate as it seems; for books are still made of wood—sometimes in more senses than one.—Chicago Journal.

ACCOUNTED FOR GOLF BALLS

Bobby Links Had Put Little Spheres to Uses for Which They Were Not Intended.

"My gracious," exclaimed Mr. Links as he looked in the pocket of his golf bag, "where are my golf balls? I bought six new ones only two weeks ago and now I can't find one."

"I can't imagine where they are," replied Mrs. Links, "unless Bobby has taken them."

"Do you know anything about my golf balls?" Mr. Links asked his son.

Bobby grew a trifle red and then replied:

"When you got them I thought that I would try one out for stoop-ball on the street. Gosh, it bounced great. We had some great games with that golf ball until it fell down a grating and we lost it."

"What about the five others?" asked Bobby's father.

"Oh, two of them wuz run over by trolley cars, one went through a window, one a feller swiped on me and the other an old man took away from us 'cause we knocked his hat off with it," Bobby replied.

UNKIND SURMISE.

Two comedians, who have joined forces for the presentation of a musical show, attended a rehearsal the other afternoon. The chorus was lining up for a number. One member on the end was rather stout and had seen more summers than is usual with the average Broadway coryphee.

"Where in the world did she come from?" asked one comedian.

"She's a newspaper man's friend," was the reply.

"Whose? Horace Greeley's?"—New York Sun.

THE NEW ART.

Vallie Belasco Martin, niece of David Belasco, occasionally entertains at clubs as well as on the stage. Recently she appeared at a sorority, where she was to represent "one of the four arts."

"What are the four arts?" inquired Miss Martin.

"Don't you know?" said the chairman. "Music, drama, art and current events."

EXCELLENT RESULTS.

"What do you do when you find a poker chip in the collection basket?"

"Sometimes I get excellent results."

"As to how?"

"Last Sunday I found one, announced the fact and seven gentlemen sent up money to redeem it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Helpful Rubber Bands.

Small elastic rubbers like those used around rolls of paper in offices are more convenient for placing around rolls of patches or cloth left over from making a garment than using pins or strings for tying around them and presents a neater appearance in storing away. Catalogs, magazines, bunches of papers may be rolled with a rubber band and stored in smaller space.

TOUCHED ON TENDER SPOT

Business Man Either Extremely Sensitive, or Perhaps He Did Not Want to Back Note.

Into the office of the president of a downtown bank came a man who wished to borrow $1,000 for 30 days. The president said: "Yes, we will be very glad to lend you the money, but can you get anybody to go on your note for that much?"

After a bit of deep thinking the man replied: "Would Mr. — do?" The president was quick to answer that Mr. — would do. So the note was made out and the man went over to get Mr. — to sign it.

The man told his story to Mr. —; how he needed the money for 30 days and by that time he would be on his feet again. Mr. — said: "Now, why didn't you come to me in the first place? You know that I was always one of your very best friends and I have the money and would have been glad to let you have it. You could have let the president of the bank do this little favor of going on your note. I feel very much hurt about this and I don't see how I can do this favor when you did not come to me in the first place." And he refused to sign.—Indianapolis News.

BEASTLY REPARTEE

Miss Bunny—I think there's a great deal in the saying that people become what they eat.

Mr. Funny—Well, if that's true, you must have eaten venison. You are such a little deer.

Miss Bunny—Are you making game of me?

HER STRONG POINT.

Mr. S. is built along athletic lines, while Mrs. S. is dainty and small and rather delicate. He is quiet, while she is an inveterate talker. Sometimes even he gets tired of her chattering. The other night he was worn out from listening to the neighborhood happenings and he tried to change the subject by telling about some gymnasium work he was doing. He displayed his muscles in his arm. After viewing it his wife looked at her own soft, little arm. "I haven't a bit of muscle in my arm," she pouted.

A slight smile played over his face. "No, dear, but you make up for it by the one in your tongue," he comforted.—Exchange.

BACK TO OLD STYLES.

There are fashions in flowers and now there is a revival of the older fashions in flowers. New houses are built, in the style of houses of 200 and 300 years ago, and older styles than those. Furniture is made in patterns of chairs and tables and sofas of the long ago. And more men and women are talking today of grandma's favorite flower and grandma's flower garden, than have touched on such themes for many years.

TODDLE CENTERS.

"Our sawdust evangelist is going after the dancing places with hammer and tongs."

"Yes."

"He says they are way stations on the road to ruin."

"Well, they're always crowded. A great many people seem to be clamoring for stop-over privileges."—Birmingham Age-Herald.
