SUPERFLUOUS ACTIVITY.

Women Speak of "The Complex Duties of the Moment."

The fact that the world—the world of women, at least—is too busy is now put forward so often that its utterance amounts to a truism. The most common phrase in our language seems to be that which proclaims the want of leisure. "I am so busy," "If I can ever get the time," "Life is such a pressure these days," "The complex duties of the moment," "The busy modern public"—these are, all of them, most familiar sentences to us, and are on our lips time and again in explanation of business, social, and even moral shortcomings. It is not putting it too strongly to say that in the present rush of living we are losing some of our best characteristics and painfully dwarfing our lives. We are too busy to be neighborly, hospitable, to be sympathetic—a good many, indeed, of the finer traits of humanity are finding less expression among us.

The question of better control of the leisure which the old century gave to women, and which the new will increase, is a large one, and admits of elaborate presentation. It is only intended in this brief paragraph to emphasize a single point, which is, the value of a quick weighing of every effort in which one is about to engage, or is now absorbed, to be sure of its necessity to yourself, or yourself to it. —Harper's Bazar.

TURNED THE FAUCET.

And Then This Girl Had Her Curiosity Satisfied.

A daughter of Eve who is visiting in New York learned a valuable lesson the other day, but whether she profits by it remains to be seen. She is visiting at the house of a friend, and with her hat on was about to go out one afternoon. But first she went to a big set bowl in the dressing room to wash her hands. The house is a large one, and the bowl sets in a big slab of marble, with a formidable array of faucets above it. There was one strange feature about two of these faucets. They were those at the extreme ends on each side of the bowl, and they were tied with strings as if to warn the unwary against touching them. But of course there could be no reason, when there was a faucet over a set bowl, for not using it, so the young woman, with her curiosity well aroused, turned on the water from the extreme right-hand faucet. Probably Eve herself had not her curiosity so quickly rewarded. As the young woman reached for the faucet she leaned well over the bowl, when whist! from the center of the bowl there came straight up in her face, in her eyes, her nose, her mouth, over her hat, and over her collar a strong, fine spray which soaked everything it touched. It did not take long to get out of it, but it was a very wet young woman who sat down to gasp and rose up again to recurl her hair, dry her bedraggled feathers and put on a fresh collar. These are delightful sprays and do the complexion no end of good, but they must be taken in homeopathic doses and without hat or collar. —New York Times.
