MAKING THE EVIDENCE TO FIT.
 Chinaman Was Willing to Leave It All to the Lawyer.
 When John J. Barrett was new at the San Francisco bar two Chinamen entered his office and retained him to help prosecute "one velly bad man, Jim Hing."
 Having locked the retainer in the safe, Mr. Barrett inquired what Jim Hing had done.
 "Him velly bad man," the spokesman replied. "Jim Hing kill he wife. He live same alleyway, 'close the street. Me—my brother—both look out window 'close alleyway, see Jim Hing stabbee wife. She die light away. Ho lun. You hang Jim Hing?"
 "Certainly," said Mr. Barrett. "But you must tell the police just what you saw."
 "Jim Hing kill wife—" they began, when the lawyer interrupted.
 "Yes, yes, I know; but when you first saw Jim was the knife high up or drawn low?"
 "Hoong yoh goyamen zoon fah goon quooing gey yoola—" the Chinamen began, when Mr. Barrett again interrupted.
 "Answer me truthfully. Stop consulting. Was the knife up high or down low?"
 The elder Chinaman looked puzzled. Restraining the impulse to consult his brother again, he turned a guileless stare on Mr. Barrett.
 "Which you think best?" he replied. —Harper's Weekly.

PRETTY IDEA FOR A WEDDING.
 Child Attendants All Attired in Picturesque Costumes.
 It is rare that an attempt is made to convert a small boy who takes part in a wedding procession into something picturesque. But it has just been done at a smart wedding in London, so brides-to-be take notice!
 The costumes of all the children preceding the bride were copied from a picture by Hoppner.
 The costumes of the girls were not remarkable, although they were quaint and charming. They wore thin white frocks in the Kate Greenaway style, with very short waists, long, scanty skirts, blue sashes under the arm and blue ribbon wound in the hair.
 The boys wore the little old-fashioned picture suits, with high-waisted trousers that went to the ankles, made of white nankeen, and pale blue shirts. The effect was said to be very pretty.

Kept, But Not Used.
 George Kayes, clerk at the Fairmont, who is English but is ambitious to outgrow it, was discussing the endurance contest in Judge Lawlor's court. "Of course, I know you got your jury system from England," he said, "and so I suppose I ought not to criticize it. But this is a country of progress and you ought to try to make some improvement."
 "Suggest one," interposed Attorney General Lauck, who was passing.
 "Well, you might allow more leeway in the matter of having opinions. Now, if I were a talesman I should not consider it a bar to jury service if I had an opinion. I could lay it aside while the trial was on."
 "And what would you do with the opinion while it was laid aside?"
 "I would keep it." —San Francisco Chronicle.

The First New Women.
 In the Colony club, at tea time, an old new woman, lighting a cigarette, said:
 "We new women are really not so new as we think we are. In the thirteenth century there were lots of us. Can anything 700 years old be new?"
 "The University of Bologna had for professor of Jurisprudence Movella d'Andria. She was no more new than beautiful—her charms were so overpowering that the trustees made her lecture behind a curtain. When she lectured openly, the students, their minds wholly occupied with her beauty, could not attend to what she said."
 "Madonna Manzolina was professor of anatomy, Matilda Tromboni taught languages, and Marie Magnesi held the chair of mathematics.
 "This university was by no means a second rate one. On the contrary, it was perhaps the leading university of Europe. It had 10,000 students."
