

STATE NEWS NOTES

Joseph Kennedy, formerly a resident of Alpena, was killed in blasting operations at Kewatin, Ont., Wednesday. He was struck on the head by a rock. Kennedy moved from here last year.

The beautiful $20,000 home of W. B. Webb of Jackson was damaged to the extent of $5,000 Thursday morning by fire. The building was fired by painters using flames from a small gas engine to scrape paint from the house.

Henry Newberry of Flint has been arrested on a charge of arson. He occupied a room over a store and was ordered to vacate. Fire broke out in his quarters Sept. 10 and he is thought to have started it out of revenge.

Gov. Warner, at the request of Judge Alfred Murphy of Detroit, has written a letter of inquiry to the governor of North Dakota, asking him to investigate the shooting of Herman Wandrel of Detroit by an officer at Welliston, N. D., last June.

An application for a receiver has been made for the Central Implement Co., Limited, the large stock company composed of Lansing and Standish capitalists. The firm's embarrassment is only temporary, it is hoped, as they have a fine plant and are capitalized at $50,000.

Fred Schmit, aged 12, of Port Huron, was run down by an automobile driven by an unknown person Thursday. His shoulder was broken and his legs and arms injured. He is in a serious condition. The driver of the auto kept going and people in the vicinity were unable to ascertain who he was.

Because of the alleged misconduct of Frank Henderson's curly-haired dog, "Brownie," suit for $100 damages has been commenced at Lansing against his owner by Solomon E. Oviatt. Oviatt claims that he warned Henderson that he was harboring a vicious dog. Finally "Brownie" is said to have inserted his teeth in Oviatt's leg.

The Michigan School for the Deaf at Flint opened Friday with an enrollment of 415, which is a slight increase over that of last year. There are forty-eight new pupils.

Circuit courts in western Michigan will have a busy time at the fall terms handling divorce cases. Returns from thirteen counties show that 207 married couples have applied for dissolution of the bonds of matrimony.

George A. Ruseberry, president of the Mt. Pleasant Exchange Savings bank, dropped dead Friday morning. He left home in his usual health and had spent an hour fishing in the mill race with John Landon. On the way home he expired.

Clarence, the 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spring of Owosso, ate a weed called henbane which he found growing on the city's streets. Despite medical attendance, he died within a few hours. A postmortem revealed the cause of death.

Albert Fenton, an inmate at the Michigan reformatory at Ionia, was nearly stabbed to death by John Cook, a 5-year man from Eaton county. Fenton is cut in six places, but has a chance to recover. Cook will be charged with attempted murder and sent to Marquette. Notes written about the assailant caused the trouble.

Because Sheriff Joseph Tennant detained Miss Gladys Gillette in Niles a few weeks ago on request of her mother, Mrs. H. P. Boehm, preventing the young woman from accompanying her father, Mayor Raymond B. Gillette, to Rochester, N. Y., the mayor of Benton Harbor has brought suit for damages against the sheriff.

The thirteenth annual convention of the Michigan Gas association ended Friday forenoon at Detroit with an excursion to Lakeside. The next convention will be held at Grand Rapids. The following officers were elected: President, William H. Barthold, Saginaw; vice-president, V. F. Dewey, Detroit; secretary-treasurer, A. P. Ewing, Detroit.

Two pioneers of the Huron shore were married at Hillman, the contracting parties being James Hunt, aged 72, of Hillman, and Mrs. Melissa Johnson of Alpena, who has seen seventy-one summers. Both bride and groom had been married twice before.

Patrick Moran of Erie, Pa., has identified the body marked "No. 6" at Calumet as that of his son, Thomas Moran, a sailor on the wrecked steamer Iosco. This is the third of the eight bodies recovered that have been identified and shipped to their former homes.

Thornton Leroy Westenhaver, aged 5 years, of Kalamazoo, died suddenly of cerebral spinal meningitis. The boy attended school last week and was sick two days before a consultation of physicians determined the disease. However, physicians do not fear an epidemic.

Frank Revard and Fred Malache of Mt. Clemens, sailors on the barge Godfrey, fell from the mast which they were scraping to the deck, 65 feet below. Malache fell 25 feet farther into the hold. Revard died while being taken to a Houghton hospital, while Malache lingered in great agony several hours.

The badly decomposed body of Fred Crum, who attempted to kill his former sweetheart, Leona Leblanc, and her escort, Denny Brennan two weeks ago, was found in the woods north of Alpena. He had shot himself, the revolver being found under the body. He had apparently been dead about ten days.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by J. W. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y., Press Correspondent New York State Grange

HON. W. F. HILL.

Grange Representative at International Conference.

The international agricultural conference called by the king of Italy was recognized by forty-two governments in the sending of 120 delegates. This government was represented by its ambassador to Italy, Hon. Henry V. White; Professor A. F. Woods, department of agriculture, Washington, and W. F. Hill, master of Pennsylvania state grange.

In addition to his appointment by President Roosevelt, Mr. Hill was commissioned by the executive committee to speak for the state grange of Pennsylvania.

HON. W. F. HILL.

In this respect he had plenty of company, as the leading agricultural societies of the world were represented. One delegate in addressing the congress stated that he was commissioned to speak for the more than 1,500,000 members of organized farmers in his country. Agricultural organization is highly developed in some countries of the old world.

This class of delegates secured from the congress that recognition which may be accorded to the various farm organizations in the future. It is gratifying to know that the conference made provision for a permanent international agricultural institute. Out of courtesy to the initiating government its seat will be at Rome. While the expense to each government adhering will be in proportion to the choice of the government, yet it cannot be heavy for any one. It is proposed that in the future international agricultural conferences shall be held at stated intervals. They are given power to direct and control the working force of the institute, which remains at work all the year round.

It is not intended that this institute shall in any way concern itself with the internal relations of any country, nor with tariff or any other regulations which might be construed as trespassing upon governmental functions. It will, however, collect, collate and disseminate information upon production, contagious plant diseases, the markets of the world, agricultural labor, etc.

Problems that affect agriculture in its international relations will be treated, and in a broad sense it is believed that the establishment of this agency and its consequent bringing about of a better understanding between governments is a great achievement in behalf of universal peace.

This worldwide recognition of agriculture is placing this foundation industry upon a higher plane than it has ever before occupied. Farmers have long realized that the problems affecting their interests were no longer confined to state limits or even to national boundaries, but that they are international. Their solution therefore is to be accomplished only through international action.

The foundation for this agricultural betterment has been laid at Rome. The three United States delegates had the honor of signing the protocol on behalf of this government, and now the granges of the United States and the national grange can do a grand work in carrying forward the movement. The opportunity of the age is open to the Order for co-operating with powerful international agencies for improving conditions affecting agriculture everywhere, and it is believed that the friends of the grange will yet have reason to feel proud of what the grange will do in behalf of the farmers of the United States.

W. F. HILL, Master Pennsylvania State Grange.

Eager For Farm Knowledge.

The number of city boys now attending agricultural colleges is a good criterion of the increased interest that is being taken in the "new agriculture." This change of front is to be accounted for as a result of a number of causes. One potent cause is the better advertising of actual present conditions which now obtain on a modern, well conducted farm. The brightest and best mentally balanced city youth cannot now fail but to perceive that the day of the stock joke which has long caricatured the farmer as a hayseed and out of touch with the foremost interests of the times has passed, never to return.

The Cold Brook (Me.) grange received fifty-six applications for membership at one meeting held recently.

DOING THEIR DUTY.

Scores of Owosso Readers Are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty.

When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick.

Backache and many kidney ills follow;

Urinary trouble, diabetes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure them all.

Owosso people endorse our claim.

Mrs. J. M. Purdy, of 305 Shawassaw street, says: "For a number of years I suffered from rheumatic pains through my limbs and in my muscles and from severe soreness and lameness in my back just over the kidneys. My limbs became numb, ached and were much swollen. Some friends advised me to get Doan's Kidney Pills at Johnson's drug store and give them a trial. I did so and after using them faithfully a short time I was relieved and continued the treatment until the trouble was entirely removed."

Colorado Letter.

Below is a letter from Comrade O. F. Webster, of this city, who is now enjoying himself in the west:

Colorado City, Sept. 20, 1905.

I agreed to write you and if you will excuse pencil, (for time is too precious out here to be dipping into an ink bottle.) I will try and keep my promise.

This is a great country. With Pike's Peak on our right and old Chyenne on our left and Squaw Mountain in our front we stand at bay and gaze up the Rockies and wonder. Say, this would be a picnic for Company H, for it could get a 1,000 yard range with a background that a "freshy" could not shoot over if he tried.

There are but a few things that flourish out here without irrigation. Gardens do fairly well except corn. Cabbages grow good, but the worm is in evidence. Potatoes are no good. Living is about 10 per cent higher than at home, except fruit which is out of sight in price. Apples 24 cents a pound; peaches 10 cents per pound, and so on.

There is an electric line that connects Colorado Springs and Manitou and all the parks that gives the best service I ever met with and the electric light service is stretched for miles. Incandescent lights cost 50 cents a month. The inhabitants here are from all points of the globe—Japs, Chinamen, Mexicans, "Gerassers" with a fair sprinkling of Afro-Americans.

There are two large plants that are called reduction plants, which are supplied with ore from Cripple Creek. Trains come daily with ore from there. Business is very dull here; they have not recovered from the strike that paralyzed everything hereabouts a year ago. Before the strike everything was booming and all had good wages. Now there are hundreds of empty houses, as many have had to move away to find a living.

The cog road up Pike's Peak is to me the most wonderful thing I have seen. It goes from base to top, 14,147 feet, with cars that seat fifty persons and they only charge 85 for the round trip. They have six engines and have given service to hundreds each day for a long time.

There have been two good, sharp frosts, but the days of late have been perfect. Today has been a real stay day in our experience in the west. The sun rose beautifully clear and there has not been a cloud to be seen in the sky. Pike has a slight sprinkling of snow down to the timber line, but the snow has not melted from the top this summer.

A party of five of us started at 8:30 a. m. and took the car for Stratton park, where we commenced a trip up North Cheyenne canyon. We took the burro road on foot and landed at the top of Cutler's mountain where we could look down on the beautiful Seven Falls at the head of South Cheyenne canyon, just above and to the east is Helen Hunt's grave on the side of the mountain.

I will not try to describe the beauties of the scenery that we pass in getting there. The rocks towered hundreds of feet above us on our way, the gulch lay hundreds of feet below us, where the mountain stream goes bounding over its rocky bed making hundreds of beautiful waterfalls on its way to the plains below. A day's tramp like this is a feast never to be forgotten.

The great rush of tourists has passed for this season but on the way we met many in carriages and mounted on burros. The horses looked jaded and make one think that the drivers out here think that the poor horses have no souls and the poor burros no livers. All who mount animals here ride on both sides of the beast and some of the riders out a fine figure.

The views one gets in climbing the mountains are beyond description. An occasional glimpse is had out through the Rocky peaks to the plains below. South Cheyenne canyon is one mile deep and ends against a wall 300 feet high which is only accessible except by a narrow flight of stairs to the head of Seven Falls, which viewed from Cutler's Mountain with a glass as it dashes from rock to rock reminding one of the butter milk that flows from Dudley's plant into the Shawassaw.

North Cheyenne canyon is four miles long. This has an outlet at top and you can come back down through Bear Creek canyon. There is a man known here to every one as Gen. Palmer, who owned the land where Colorado Springs is located. He plotted the city and has done much to beautify it. He has been very generous in his donations of parks.

North Cheyenne canyon belongs to Colorado Springs and is a free park. The mountain sides are traversed for miles with roads. Gen. Palmer has built and all are free to the public. The name of Gen. Palmer will last here while the mountains stand. He has a castle in Glen Eyre, just over among the mountains that cost a million of dollars. He gave a party to 200 guests and entertained them for the night with plenty of room to spare. Yours truly, O. F. WEBSTER.

WORKING WOMEN

Their Hard Struggle Made Easier—Interesting Statements by a Young Lady in Boston and One in Nashville, Tenn.

All women work; some in their homes, some in church, and some in the whirl of society. And in stores, mills and shops tens of thousands are on the never-ceasing treadmill, earning their daily bread.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbance, and the nature of their duties, in many cases, quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints, ovarian troubles, ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, leucorrhoea, or perhaps irregularity or suppression of "monthly periods," causing backache, nervousness, irritability and lassitude.

Women who stand on their feet all day are more susceptible to these troubles than others.

They especially require an invigorating, sustaining medicine which will strengthen the female organism and enable them to bear easily the fatigues of the day, to sleep well at night, and to rise refreshed and cheerful.

How distressing to see a woman struggling to earn a livelihood or perform her household duties when her back and head are aching, she is so tired she can hardly drag about or stand up, and every movement causes pain, the origin of which is due to some derangement of the female organism.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for all these troubles. It strengthens the proper muscles, and displacement with all its horrors will no more crush you.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, bearing down pains, disordered stomach, moodiness, dislike of friends and society—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled, and it will make you strong and well.

You can tell the story of your sufferings to a woman, and receive helpful advice free of cost. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Are you looking for some kind of power that you can use in your barn today, down in the woods tomorrow, over in your neighbors' woods next day? Something that costs nothing until started and all expense stops the instant the power stops? An engine that always goes no matter what the weather conditions may be? If so, let us tell you more about ideal engines, which are guaranteed for one year, and sent out to responsible farmers on a 10 days' trial. We make a specialty of a 5 H. P. engine that is adapted to farm use. It costs but little more for gasoline to pump water with this engine than it does with a smaller one, which is of no practical use except for pumping. This engine will grind feed, buzz wood and do any work requiring power on the farm. Ideal engine will be on exhibition at the Fairs this fall.
