

A FRAGMENT.

An old man was leaning upon his staff, gazing at the setting sun, as it gradually sunk behind the western hills, tinged the barren rocks and lofty pines, with its soft radiance, and reflecting with its last expiring rays, the beautiful colors of the rainbow, upon a cluster of fleecy clouds that lay along the edge of the horizon, picturing to the imagination of the beholder, the happy home of departed spirits. His feeble form was trembling with age; the frost of eighty winters had silvered the dark locks that had shaded his youthful brow, and the deep furrows in his pale cheek gave evidence that his life had been one of weary toil and heartfelt sorrow. His eye, though dim, bespoke intelligence, and the calm and heavenly expression of his countenance told that he felt the spirit of resignation to his Father's will. He was alone in a world that hardly knew him. He had been the honored sire of a numerous and promising family, and fondly hoped that they would be the solace of his declining years. But alas! all died in the morning of life, save one—the youngest—a promising lad of sixteen. The wife of his youth, the once happy mother of his children, sunk beneath the weight of accumulated sorrow, and soon followed her offspring to the grave, and was numbered with the dead.

The old man took up his abode in a deserted dwelling, (for he had none of his own), and by means of a small pension which he had earned in the service of his country, he endeavored to live without being an expense to society at large, to which he felt that he could no longer be of any service.

The son took an affectionate leave of his aged father—and sought, in foreign climes, to obtain that wealth which would enable him to provide a home for his only parent. Five years had passed away since they parted, and the old man had heard no tidings of his darling boy. Disease preyed upon his frame, and conscious that his days were nearly ended, he had left his humble dwelling, to gaze, as he thought, for the last time upon the setting sun. He stood apparently lost in thought, and forgetful that his feeble frame was exposed to the chill dews of evening, when his attention became suddenly arrested by the appearance of a graceful youth advancing towards him. His dark eyes glanced with the genius of intellect, and the healthy flush upon his fair cheek faded for a moment as he gazed at the pallid brow of the veteran before him—and discovered that he had met with his own father; but the old man seemed not to know him.

"A pleasant evening," said the youth, addressing the aged man, and bowing with reverence; "can you inform me who lives in your lone cottage?"

"No one but myself," was the answer; "it is a crazy old thing, but it answers my purpose very well, and I shall not want even that long."

"Will you have the kindness to give me your name," said the youth.

The old man smiled, and replied, "the children call me 'poor Robert,' but my name is James Hathaway."

"Have you no friends living, which occasions your living alone?"

"I had one child, a son, left; but I do not know that he is now living; he went to sea about five years ago, and I have not heard from him since. If he lives, perhaps he has forgot his old father ere this, but it would be a comfort to me, in my last moments to see him once more, even if he were a prodigal."

The youth could no longer conceal himself. "Your son is not a prodigal," said he, and clasping his arms around the old man's neck, embraced him with an affectionate kiss. The father wept like a child, and exclaimed, "O! Lord, now lettest thy servant depart in peace!"

"Not yet," said the youth; "a better home than this shall shelter thee before thou leavest this lower world. I have been fortunate in worldly gain, and to-morrow shall see thee in a comfortable house of my own, and a nurse to provide for thy wants."

The morrow came, and the son fulfilled his promise; a neat and convenient house was provided for himself and father, and a young woman to take charge of it, and wait upon the old man.

"Who is this lovely girl that you have employed?" said the father.

"It is my own dear wife," was the answer.

"Blessings on her!" exclaimed the old man, and heaven bless thee, my son, with those who shall prove as faithful as thou hast."

Putney, Vt.

"As you were."—During the late war with Great Britain, a dashing belle, who is now an affectionate mother, found her progress arrested as she passed down Court street, in Boston, by a flood, which prevented her passage to the opposite walk. She paused to consider her situation, and anxiously looking towards the desired haven, when an honest tar, with a canvass hat and blue ribbon, inscribed "U. S. Frigate Constitution," bore up and reconnoitered her position. Without any apology or ceremony, he encircled her waist with his muscular arm, and wading knee deep through the water, landed lady sensitive on the opposite shore. More vexed than grateful, our belle curled her pretty lip, and said, "you are an impudent fellow, sir." "Belay that, my dear," said Jack, "I'll make you fast again." Suiting the action to the word, he lifted her the second time, and re-forming the stream, placed her safely again where he first found her, observing, with a good natured laugh, "An you love your moorings so well, hearty, smoke my binnacle, but you may lay at anchor there." The above is true. The lady has grown wiser and less sensitive since this lecture on squeamishness was read to her, and she frequently amuses her friends by relating the anecdote.

Accustom yourself to strict observance of your duty in all respects, and it will in time be as troublesome to omit or violate it, as it is to many people to practice it.

All orders and communications addressed to Corbin, Hayward & Co. Newport, N. H., who are the sole proprietors for the States of Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

Subjoined are a few of the many certificates which have been procured from some of the most respectable citizens in Vermont and New Hampshire who have had a personal acquaintance with the article.

From Edward E. Phelps, M. D. at Windsor, Vt.

Messrs. Corbin, Hayward & Co.—Gentlemen: Within the last year I have had a little experience in the use of I. Newton's Panacea, and am happy to bear testimony in favor of the article. It is my opinion that the article deserves nearly if not quite all the confidence which has so justly been placed in the far-famed Panacea of Swain. I shall be willing to give the result of any further trials with the article. Yours, respectfully,

EDWARD E. PHELPS.

Windsor, Vt. Dec. 24, 1836.

From Reverend Lyman Culver, Norwich Vt. Dr. Newton, Sir: For ten years past I have been afflicted with a violent trembling at my stomach and limbs at times so as to produce great faintness. It so effected my limbs that it was with difficulty I could attend to my ordinary business. The most respectable physicians in this vicinity having failed to afford me any relief, I was persuaded to take a bottle of your Panacea, which soon gave relief. I have since realized no inconvenience from my former complaint.

I most cordially recommend your Panacea to the public as a most valuable medicine.

LYMAN CULVER

From Thomas B. Kittredge, M. D. of Claremont, N. H.

Gentlemen: Knowing the several ingredients of which your Panacea is composed, and having had a slight opportunity of witnessing the effect of it, I am disposed to think that in many cases it will have a good effect. The result of my future experience I shall be happy to give.

Respectfully yours,

THOMAS B. KITTREDGE.

Claremont, Jan. 6th, 1837.

From John B. McGregory, M. D. of Newport, N. H.

Dr I. Newton's Panacea the last six months has had a widely extended circulation in this vicinity, many have been cured of obstinate diseases, and some possessing feeble and delicate health, have become so much improved as to be persuaded to keep the medicine constantly on hand.

It is a farrago of Vegetables ingeniously put together, some of which alone in the hands of the regular and scientific physician have cured the most inveterate disease. I have for a few months past been a constant observer of its use, and have made inquiries into the effects produced, and can recommend it to the public as a safe and valuable restorative in many diseases.

BALM OF GILEAD,

Or Reid's Vegetable Liment & Electuary.

AMONG the many specifics now offered to the public, it will perhaps be hardly considered or admitted that another can be added with propriety. The subscriber having procured the above medicine solely for his own use, and never intended to have it circulated beyond his own family circle or neighborhood; but his experience of its salutary effects in innumerable instances and the daily numerous calls from the Public, and the advice of his friends, render an apology scarcely necessary for offering it to the public, believing that they will find in it an invaluable friend, as a remedy for almost all external complaints, not only for the human species, but also for the brute creation. The immediate action and effect of it in many instances are perhaps unparalleled in the history of medicines. It will be found an invaluable medicine to be kept in every family as a ready remedy for almost all external complaints that families are subject to; such as burns, scalds, bruises, cuts, sprains, sores, of almost every description, swellings, women's sore breasts, scrofula, ringworms, erysipelas, chills, crick in the back and all rheumatic affections, inflammations generally, and wounds on horses, cattle, &c. &c. and last but not least, it has been applied with extraordinary success to many badly inflamed eyes, and the effects in many instances have been so sudden and extraordinary that the subjects have for a while been in doubt whether to attribute the cure to the medicine or supernatural causes. It will be found an invaluable remedy to be kept by all persons who are liable to burns or scalds by their connection with smith-shops, foundries, steamboats and steam engines generally.

Many certificates of the superior efficacy of this Liment and Electuary might be procured by asking for, but we shall offer only a few, preferring that the public should prove the efficacy of it by actual experience, which is the best evidence.

Halifax, Jan. 16th, 1837.

I hereby certify that for three months past, ever since August last, I have been much afflicted with a lameness in the back; it at length became so severe that I could not walk. I made use of an Ointment prepared by John Reid, Esq. which effected a cure by three times applying it. I also applied it to the knee of a lad which was badly bruised and cut by a fall on the sharp and frozen ground or stone; he could walk with great difficulty a few steps. After an application 24 hours I heard no more complaint from the lad. I have known a number of similar cases.

Attest, RES. THOS. H. WOOD.

P. S. I cannot but believe that it would be very useful to be kept in every family—I do think that it is one of the most sovereign remedies for burns, scalds, &c. I would recommend to families always to keep it, and especially all persons who are exposed to burns from their peculiar situations.

T. H. W.

Mr. John Reid, Esq.—

Sir:—About the first of May last, I had the misfortune to be kicked by a horse on my right ankle, and after suffering the most severe pain for several days, my foot and ankle being badly swollen so that I was unable to walk or touch my foot to the ground. I tried many applications that were recommended, without effect. I then procured a bottle of your highly valuable Vegetable Balm of Gilead or Liment, and applied it, and in the course of about two days the pain left me, the swelling entirely subsided, and I was enabled to pursue my regular business, and on the third day I walked several miles without difficulty; and I do not hesitate to say, that so far as I have become acquainted with the Liment, that it is highly valuable for all wounds, swellings and bruises, and finally for all external complaints.

EMERY COLE.

Brattleboro, Vt. Jan. 7, 1837.

To John Reid, Esq.—

Sir:—Some time in April last I had the misfortune to receive a severe blow (accidentally) from a heavy club, across the back of my hand, which caused my hand to swell in a few minutes to almost twice the ordinary size, and the pain was almost insupportable. By the application of a few drops of your Balm of Gilead or Vegetable Liment in the evening, I found to my astonishment in the morning, my hand was well, the swelling having entirely subsided. I went about my business as usual and had no further trouble with it. I have since that time known many similar cures by the same medicine.

HOLLIS COLE.

Brattleboro, Feb. 13, 1837.

Mr. Reid, Sir—The Balm of Gilead you left with me is almost sold. We wish you to send us some more of the above medicine as soon as possible. The demand for the medicine is much greater than we expected—it gives universal satisfaction wherever we have sold it.

Yours respectfully,

DUTTON & CLARK.

In conclusion, we say that whoever shall purchase a bottle of this Liment, and after a fair trial, finds it not to answer the purpose for which it is recommended, may return it and receive his money. It will be put up in two ounce bottles, and warranted to keep any length of time.

Price 25 cts. per bottle. JOHN REID.

American Truss.

JAQUITH'S PATENT.

THE favorable notice of Physicians, together with the repeated instances in which it has cured cases, by using this Truss, have come to the knowledge of the proprietors, warrant them in repeating the assertion that its superiority over all other instruments for curing the dangerous complaint of Hernia, is fully proved. The instrument is, in every important particular, NEW, and embracing the true modification of the CONICAL PAD, which must shortly change the whole treatment of Hernia, and entirely set aside the absurd method heretofore practised.

Recommendation by Dr. Hyde, of Brattleboro, Vt.

After several months investigation, and having seen many cases under treatment with this and other instruments of the same kind, the undersigned unhesitatingly pronounces JAQUITH'S TRUSS, in his opinion, superior—in mechanical construction, retentive power, manner of giving pressure, and especially in ease to the wearer—to any instrument of the kind now before the public. The principle is a just one—founded on the principle of adhesive inflammation, and the anatomy of the tissues implicated. And a still more cogent reason for this opinion is—Hernia has been cured by the application of Jaquith's Truss in repeated instances.

DANA HYDE, M. D.

Being afflicted with Hernia (double inguinal Hernia) I procured one of JAQUITH'S TRUSSES and wore it about eight or nine weeks, when I laid it aside, considering myself cured. After a few weeks, feeling a little tenderness on one side, I resumed the Truss as a security against the recurrence of the Hernia, although no herniary tumor has ever made its appearance since I first laid it aside. I consider myself cured. ERASTUS BEMIS.
