cher." A large and migraficent granite chapel is now being erected on the ground usar the entrance-gate, by the proprieture. It is to be used for fineral services. It is open to all denominations. It is a fine special continuous this place during the summer months. We lingreed a leading time so this enchanting spot, holding communion with the silent dead, and coold hardly tear correlection. We sdome the growing taste of our chizmon, which leads them to demorate such delightful places as Mount Anborn and Springfield Cemeterus, as repositories for the remains of their friends. A few years ago our burying grounds were the most desolate places known. But, as Irsing has well remarked, why should we thus seek to clothe death with nuncessary terrore, and is appead horrors around the tomb of those we have? The grave should be surrunned by every thing that might isospice benderates and seneration for the dead, or that might isospice benderates and seneration for the dead, or that might isospice benderates and seneration for the dead, or that might win the living to virtue.
