The first approached the elephant,
And happening to full,
Against his broad and sturdy side,
At once began to haw!:
"God bless ma!—but the elephant
Is very like a wall!"

The second, feeling of the task,

Cried, "Ho!—what have we here
So very round, and smooth and sharp?

To me 'its very queer;
The wonder of an elephant
Is very like a spear!"

The third approached the animal,
And happening to take
The squirming trank within his hands,
Thus up and boilly spoke:
"I see," quoth he, "the clophant
Is very like a snake!"

The fourth reached out his eager hand, And felt about the kneet "What meet this wonderful beast is like Is mighty plain," quoth be; "Tis clear snough the elephant Is very like a tree!"

The fifth who chanced to touch the ear, Said, "E'en the blindest man Can tell what this resembles most— Deny the fact who can, This marvel of an elephant Is very like a fan?

The sixth pe sconer had begun About the beast to grope, Than seiging on the swinging tail That fell within his scope, "I see," queth he, "the elephant Is very like a rope!"

And so these men of Indoestan Disputed lond and long, Each in his own opinion Exceeding stiff and strong, Though each was partly in the right, And all were in the wrong!

MORAL. So, oft in the theologic wars The disputants, I ween, Rail on in atter ignorance Of what the others mean, And prate about so elephant Not one of them has seen!

THE RAGGED SOLDIER.

Just at the close of the revolutionary war, there was seen somewhere in one of the small towns of central Massachusetts, a ragged and forlorn looking soldier coming up the dusty street. He looked about on the corn fields tasseling for the barvest, on the rich, bright patches of wheat for the sickle, and on the green pe tato field, with curious eyes-so at least thought Mr. Towne, who was walking leisurely behind him, going home from the reaping to his supper. The latter was a stout farmer, dressed in home-made linen trowsers, without suspenders, vest or coat. The ragged soldier stopped un-der the shade of a great sugar maple, and Mr. Towne overtook him, and stopped also. "Home from the wars?" he asked.

"Home from the wars?" he asked,
"Just out of the British clutches," replied the man, 'I've been a prisoner for years.' He rejoined suddenly, 'Can you tell me who lives in the next house, is it yours?"
'No,' replied Towne, 'Tompkins lives there.
That house and farm too belong to a comrade of yours, as I suppose, his name was Jones, but he was shot at Bunker Hill, and his widow married again.'

bone. He is a terrible surly neighbor, and he leads her a dog's life. She missed it marrying the fellow, but you see she had a hard time of the fellow, but you see she had a hard time of it with the farm after Jones went off soldiering, and when my son came back and said he was dead—he saw him bleeding to death on the battle field—she broke right down, and this Tompkins came along and got into work for her, and he laid himself out to do first rate.—He somehow got on the blind side of all of us, and when he offered himself to her, I advised her to have him, and I am sorry I did it. You had better ted by Mrs. Tompkins. 'Some old sweetheart of hers, may be,' said Mr. Towne, nodding to himself. 'He comes too late; poor woman, she has a hard row to hoe Then Mr. Towne went home to supper, and we will go with the soldier.

*Could you give a poor soldier a mouthful to eat?' he asked of the pale, nervous woman who opened the door.

'My husband does not allow me to give any thing to travelers, she said, but I always feel for the soldiers coming back, and I'll give you some supper if you won't be long eating it,' and she wiped her eyes with her white and blue checked apron, and set with alacrity about providing refreshments for the poor man, who had thrown himself in the nearest chair, and with his head leaning on his breast, seemed too tired even to remove his hat from his face. 'I am glad to have you cat, and I would not hurry you for anything, she said in a frightened way, but you will eat quick, won't you? for I expect every moment he will be in."

The man drew his chair to the table, keeping his hat on his head, as though he belonged to the society of Friends, but that could not be, for the 'frier ds' do not go to the wars. He ate heartily of the bread and butter and cold meat, and how long he was about it?

Mrs. Tompkins fidgeted. 'Dear Me!' she said to herse!f, 'if he only knew, he would not be so cruel as to let Tompkins come in and catch him here.' She went and looked from the window, uneasily; but the soldier gave no token of his meal coming to an end. Now he is pouring vinegar on the cold cabbage and potatoes. I can't ask him to take those away in his hand. Oh, dear, how slow he is! has not the man any teeth? At last she said, mildly, 'I am very sorry to harry you, sir, but couldn't you let me spread some bread and butter, and cut some slices of meat, to take away with you. My husband will use abusive language to you, if he finds you here.'

Before the soldier could reply, footsteps were heard on the door-stone at the back door, and a man entered. He stopped short, and looked at the soldier as a savage dog might look. Then he broke out in a roar between a growl

Then he broke out in a roar between a growl and a roar:

"Hey-day, Melly, a pretty piece of business! What have I told you, time and again, mulam? You'll find you had better mind your master. And you, you lazy, thieving vagahond, let me see you clear out of my house and cut off of my land a good deal quicker than you came on the premises!"

"Four house! and your land!" exclaimed the soldier, starting suddenly up, erect and tall, and dashing off his hat with a quick, fiery gesture. His eyes flashed like lightning, and his lips quivered with indignation, as he confronted the

You haint any business to interfere between and my wife, said Tompkins, sulkily, cowed by the attitude of the soldier. "Your wife! exclaimed the soldier, with the very concentration of contempt expressed in his roice, and pointing to him with an indignant finger. -Who are you? asked Tompkins, with an air of effrontery 'I am Harry Jones, since you ask,' replied the soldier, 'the owner of this house and this land, which you will leave this very hour! As for Molly,' softening his tone as he turned to the woman, now sobhing hysterically, 'she shall choose between us.' 'O Harry!' sobbed she, while Thompson stood dumb with astonishment, 'take me, save, With one step he was at her side, holding her in his arms. 'What did you mean, treating this poor child so? Did you think, because she had no earthly projector, that there was not a God in heaven against you?" No man who is cruel to a woman is ever tru-

"ALL FOOLS OUT WEST".

Many years ago "all fools out West" was a cant phrase to indicate a blunder which green hands right out of the heart of the East, fre-quently made in imagining that because the sun was behind them as they set their faces westward, that luminary must needs be in the knap-sack on their own shoulders—that they were bringing all the light with them.

They had read Bishop Berkely's prophetic line about 'the star of empire' going West, until they fancied themselves the star—'bright particular.' They had heard that Indians yet roam the prairies of Illinois; that the inhabitants are lightly light for charges however. divided into four classes: hunters, trappers, savages, and human beings; that wampum is 'legal tender,' and that children affectionately kill their grandmothers.

And the most curious thing about the whole business is, that they believed it all; and believed, too, that the lamp they carried was borrowed of Diogenes, and revealed the man the cynic vainly looked for, in the person of the bear-

We confess that fifteen years ago, see should-ered the sun, caught up the lantern, and came to the West with just these notions. It did not take us long to find out that they had a day hereaway every day. At last, some ill-natured fellow asked us with a Winnebagoish leer, how many people over fifteen years of age, there were in Connecticut in 1845, who could neither read nor write.

Now you may judge how unkind this was, when you know that our ancestors came from the State aforesaid, and that to us, 'brought up' in the wilderness of Northern New York, the sun seemed to rise from the bosom of that State every morning; when you know, too, that we found the happy people he was inquiring after, made a regiment of Dogberrys six hundred strong! He could not have done an unkinder thing, without asking us about their cousins in Northern New York, where we were born, and where, thanks to the woods and hollow logs, the census taker couldn't catch the ignorant. sun seemed to rise from the bosom of that State census taker couldn't catch the ignorant catechumens.

You may believe we left off swearing by the East—concluded to 'swear not at all,' and to make ourself worthy to live in the West, if we could, and to let the prarie winds blow our silly airs away. We have often wondered since, that anybody forgave us for thinking we had entered upon 'missionary ground,' and for being absurd enough to tell of it; because by looking in a mirror and about us, we discovered that several of the 'fools out West,' had not been here a great while. catechumens.

'No,' replied Towne, 'Tompkins lives there.'

That house and farm too belong to a comrade of yours, as I suppose. his name was Jones, but he was shot at Bunker Hill, and his widow married again.'

The soldier leaned against the tree. 'What kind of people live there? Would they be likely to let a poor soldier have something to eat?'

'If Tompkins is out, you'd be treated first-rate there. Mrs. Tompkins is a nice woman, but he is the snarliest cur that ever gnawed a bone. He is a terrible surly neighbor, and he

'Thank you,' kindly returned the soldier, but Mrs Tompkins is a distant—a sort of old acquaintance. The fact is I used to know her first husband, and I guess I will call there.'

Mr. Towne watched him as he went up to the door and knocked, and saw that he was admitted by Mrs. Tompkins.

'And where was the man stabbed!' asked an excited lawyer of a physician. 'The man was stabbed about an inch and a half to the left of the medium line, and about an inch above the umbilicus,' was the reply. O, yes, I understand now; but I thought it was near the town hall.

"A lass I am no more," as the girl said when she got married.
