

ESTEY

THE ESTEY POLICY.

The numerous pianos designated as "stencils" are pianos which cannot be traced to the factory in which they were made. Such pianos have no standing, and no firm can be held responsible for them. The Estey Company takes pride in the fact that it does not carry in stock an instrument of such a "caste." Every instrument it handles is of known origin, either an Estey or some other reputable make.

Judge Start was comparatively a young man when elected to the bench, and not widely known in the state, but his record has justified the wisdom of his choice by the legislature. He had presided at four or five sessions of the Windham county court and enjoyed the respect and good will of the bar no less for the tact and even temper which he displayed than for his judicial fairness. His last assignment here was at the September term, 1904.

Gov. Douglas of Massachusetts went into office last year largely as the result of advertising. The Democrats attempted to follow similar tactics this year with Bartlett, but they failed to recognize the fact that Douglas was well advertised before he started in the campaign, while Bartlett was an unknown to the rank and file of the party. Gen. Bartlett may be a very estimable man, but his publicity was a part of the full-page advertisements made him look like an old sport, and was the kind of an illustration which didn't help a bit.

Francis Hendricks, state superintendent of insurance in New York, figures a shrinkage of $18,785,645 in the surplus of the Equitable Life Assurance association as compared with the amount computed by the officials of that company in their reports. He finds that the company's valuation of its real estate is excessive by $5,000,000; that advances made to agents amounting to $5,812,154.87 must not be counted as an asset; that the total assets of the society are $406,073,063.68; that the total liabilities are $244,962,429, leaving a reserve or surplus of $161,098,624.68.

Ever hear of Shedd, John G.? His name has not been emphasized in the public prints very often, but he is one of the silent captains of industry who fills an important place in the world. He did not go from Brattleboro, strange as this may seem, but from Rutland, where 30 years ago he worked a year in B. H. Burt's general store for $50 and his board and clothes. Shedd then went to Chicago where he obtained work—he didn't "accept a situation"—in the big department store of Marshall, Field & Co. Shedd proved to have the right qualities and today he is a member of the firm, drawing a salary of $100,000 a year as manager, and has the distinction of being president of the Chicago Commercial association, perhaps the most influential organization of business men in the world.

Charles E. Littlefield of the second Maine Congressional district, is reported to be planning to resign his seat in the House of Representatives so that he may practice law in New York city. Mr. Littlefield succeeded the late Nelson Dingley in Congress only six years ago, but within a few months he was one of the widely known men of Congress, owing to his skill in debate, in which he backs up sound reasoning with a magnetic presence and genuine oratorical delivery. He is easily the strongest man of the present Maine delegation in the House, and his retirement will be a distinct public loss. Mr. Littlefield is not a wealthy man, however, and like the late Thomas B. Reed, believes that the metropolis is the place for a lawyer who wishes to gather some of the world's goods for himself. Mr. Littlefield was recently elected a director of the Equitable Life Assurance society, and his desire to leave the scene of his duties in that position is said to have hastened his decision to go to New York.

Despatches have been sent this week from Burlington to the Boston and New York papers claiming that the Vermont Anti-Saloon league was preparing to carry on a red hot campaign for the overthrow of license in the state, and that the legislature would probably be asked for a referendum. The league, in answer to these reports, sent out Tuesday the following: "In view of several unauthorized and incorrect published statements as to its proposed policy, the headquarters committee of the Vermont Anti-Saloon league, at its regular session today, unanimously passed the following resolution: 'Resolved, That the chief stress in league work for the present be laid on an effort to reduce the number of license towns in the state at the next March meeting.' The league is to be commended for its attitude. It can accomplish more good in efforts to reduce licenses and in promoting temperance along educational lines than by any fierce attack for a repeal of the present law. With only 34 'saloon towns' at the present time the conditions and prospects ought to be hopeful and cheerful to every believer in temperance.

Tammany's Desperate Strata.

It is evident that, in spite of Mayor McClellan's apparent re-election by a small plurality, the power of Tammany was shaken to its foundation by Tuesday's election in New York city and the canvass which preceded it. W. R. Hearst, the candidate for mayor on the municipal ownership issue, claims that he was elected by the votes actually and honestly cast and that Tammany officials and workers resorted to flagrant frauds to make the return show McClellan's re-election. Mr. Hearst, with a mint of money to pay the bills, has promptly begun a contest to oust McClellan from the mayor's chair. As the first move in the game Justice Gaynor of the supreme court has issued an order directing the removal of every ballot box from the police precincts of Greater New York to the bureau of elections, preparatory to a recount. The granting of this order was a surprise, and Tammany Hall was evidently badly jarred by Justice Gaynor's declaration that the police have no control over the ballot boxes, and "no right even to touch them." What kind of a fight is on is indicated by the fact that William M. Ivins, the Republican candidate for mayor, has agreed to act as advisory counsel for Hearst. He will accept no pay for his services, but will work in behalf of clean politics and a free ballot. No man in New York knows the political game from the inside better than Mr. Ivins does, and he is concededly the most dangerous opponent that Tammany Hall could have. The New York Tribune says that while it detests Mr. Hearst's political character and distrusts his "vague and impracticable political principles," he has the right to make this fight as the people have a right to vote for whom they please and have their votes counted as cast—and that if this investigation proves Mr. Hearst's rightful election he ought to be put in the mayor's chair.

Watch for interesting times in New York city the next few weeks.

The Christmas Tree Fiend.

In a letter to the Londonderry Sifter, reprinted elsewhere in this paper, M. J. Haggood of Peru writes in his usual vigorous way of the "Christmas Tree Fiend"—in other words, of the work of the men who at this season of the year come into the New-England hill towns to buy evergreen trees for the Christmas market of the large cities. These men have left their vandals marks in various towns in Windham county, but, if we mistake not, the owners of lands which are growing up to evergreens have taken warning by experience and by newspaper discussion and the trade has not prospered hereabouts for the last year or two. The farmers do not like the looks of their pastures after these men have been through them, cutting out the best of the young spruces and fir, cutting them at any height from the ground they choose, and leaving the ragged, worthless stumps to stand. The timber growth is ruined and the land is made worthless for a generation to come.

If the Christmas tree dealers paid to the land owners anything like a fair share of the market value of the young trees there would be a partial excuse for this wasteful desecration; but in point of fact the land owners do not receive, on an average, so much as one per cent of the value of the trees after they are landed in the city markets, for it is only the smaller ones that sell for less than a dollar each, and the large, well-developed ones sell for any price that rich men will pay. It is high time that our farmers who own land which nature is once more making valuable stopped allowing themselves to be uncoined by the "Christmas Tree Fiend."

The Fall of Russian Autocracy.

No more rhetoric can magnify the significance of the imperial ukase of Nicholas II, in which he has at last been brought to grant to Russia powers of self-government and of liberty that make the autocracy a dead and withered landmark in the march of civilization. This marvelous movement of the Russian people, which has been a blow for national freedom memorable in the annals of mankind, has forced the autocrat to surrender a prerogative which has been the cornerstone of Russian absolutism for three centuries. How great and vital the act of the czar may be we can hardly realize at this hour, but in Russian history it must rank in importance with such events elsewhere as the Magna Charta of the English King John and the final expulsion of the Bourbons absolutism, and in America the Declaration of Independence by the 13 colonies. Thus far there has been in Russia no civil war, and for the monarch no flight to Varennes. And it is to be hoped that the Russian people, chaotic though their present position may be, will live through this great transition in their national life without the terrible birth pangs which so often accompany the advent of revolution. It is a peaceful revolution as yet, speaking with other times and scenes as a standard, and so may it continue to the end.

Man Who Was Killed Not Insane.

An East Middlebury man makes the following important contribution to the Waterbury manufacturer case: "Mr. Dunsy is a peaceful and unoffending man, rather heavy in stature. He was neither insane nor a pauper. His mind showed the effects of age, and if he had room, the witness said Mrs. Rogers and Miss Kimball appeared to think as much of each other as sisters naturally would. Mrs. Cross Lyford gave similar testimony.

Among the other witnesses heard were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barry. Barry at one time was a prisoner at the Windsor institution, and his wife was an employe. Their testimony dealt with alleged improper proposals said to have been made to Mrs. Barry by Warden Harpin.

Harpin took the stand before adjournment and denied that he had ever had improper relations with or made improper proposals to Mrs. Barry.

Good Cheer From Will Shakapere.

To be cheerful
Or not to be cheerful?
That is the question.
Whether it is wiser in the mind to suffer
The cares and worries of this dull existence
Or to make fun of all our troubles,
And by so doing end them.
To smile, to laugh and by a laugh
To say we end the heartache
And the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to. 'Tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished.

—[Ward Macaulay.]

THE NEW SPIRIT IN POLITICS.

(New York Tribune.)

One of the most significant facts during the recent mayoral campaign in this city was that wherever and whenever President Roosevelt's name was mentioned, whether in McClellan, Hearst or Ivins meetings, it was the signal for tumultuous applause. Perhaps not since the Monroe "era of good feeling" has there ever been a period in American history when a living President was thus acclaimed by representatives of all parties, especially at campaign meetings.

This popularity of Theodore Roosevelt is made up of many elements, some personal, some partisan; but for the most part it rests upon the general belief of the people in the President's possession of certain virtues which they admire, and among those, and one of the chief, in his known readiness and courage in denouncing wrong, whether in his own party or among his political opponents, and in standing for what he believes to be the right, even though it contravenes party precedent.

This independence of the old bitter partisan spirit, with its evasive and apologetic attitude for its own acquiescence and righteous indignation at the acquiescence of other parties, is something unfortunately rather novel in American politics; but nothing in recent years has done more to purify our political atmosphere and to strike at the power of selfish and sinister leadership than the spirit of which President Roosevelt may be regarded as a personification. It effects are seen today in Maryland, Ohio, Philadelphia, New York and New Jersey, and not there alone. The most popular American, in short, is the man who is strong enough, honest enough, brave enough, and wise enough to stand for political integrity, to how to the line of honest and good government and let the chips—both in the shape of elections—fall as they may. In other words, the President is himself the hero of the new revolt against blind partisanship, which is the most distinctive and hopeful feature and political indication of our time. Jerome in New York had but to follow along that line for a county office in order to make himself a national figure. If this brief and partial analysis of the spirit which is at work in the country, a spirit broader than party and rising to the heights of patriotism and Americanism, be correct, it would be wise for local political leaders to take close heed of it.

STATE PRISON INVESTIGATION.

Mary Rogers Has Been Out of Her Cell Recently—Another Charge Made Against Harpin Denied by Him.

The investigation of conditions in the state prison was resumed at Windsor yesterday, several prisoners being among those placed on the witness stand.

Contrary to the general expectation, Mrs. Mary Rogers was not brought before the committee, but it developed that both the committee and Attorney General Fitts have examined her in private, and the material facts were made public.

She retraced that portion of her testimony which implicated Warden Harpin, saying that the testimony was put in at the instigation of Matron Durkee, presumably to get back at Warden Harpin, and to aid former Superintendent Oakes.

A decided pension was caused when it appeared that within a week Mrs. Rogers has sent a letter outside the prison without the knowledge of the prison officials, this apparent laxity being the feature of yesterday's session. As a result of this affair, Mrs. Rogers is now closely confined to her cell, her meals being served there.

Evidence was introduced which showed that many nights Miss Kimball, who was discharged only a few days ago, had gone to Mrs. Rogers's cell, released her and taken her to her own room, from which access to the guards' quarters was but a few steps.

Miss S. J. Durkee, the matron, testified to being present when Mary Rogers wrote her first alleged confession. She admitted having told her that she ought to change it in some respects, but denied using any improper influence or inducing her to tell what was untrue.

Mrs. Carrie Foster, a prisoner, testified to rooming with Mary Rogers. She said since Mrs. Rogers had worked in the kitchen she had been out of her cell often in the company of Gertrude Kimball, the assistant matron. She was out every two or three evenings and would stay late. She supposed she went to Miss Kimball's room. The witness said Mrs. Rogers and Miss Kimball appeared to think as much of each other as sisters naturally would. Mrs. Cross Lyford gave similar testimony.

BRATTLEBORO LOCAL

REBEKAH'S DISTRICT MEETING.

250 Members of the Order Present in Brattleboro—Work by Columbia Lodge of Springfield.

The annual meeting of the Rebekah lodge in district No. 10 was held with Dennis lodge of Brattleboro Wednesday evening and was attended by about 250 members of the order. A banquet was served in Odd Fellows' hall at 5 o'clock, which was a delightful preparatory feature. The hall was decorated handsomely with festoons of crepe paper in pink and green, the colors of Dennis lodge. The other rooms were decorated with cut flowers. Mrs. Sara Sturges, noble grand of Dennis lodge, called the meeting to order at 6:30, and the opening work was done by Dennis lodge. The Rebekah degrees were conferred on two candidates by Columbia lodge of Springfield, whose work was highly satisfactory and was applauded with enthusiasm. The unfinished work was exemplified by Mrs. Cornelia F. Bond, president of the Rebekah assembly. Remarks were made by various members and the meeting was closed by Dennis lodge after which refreshments were served. Pleasing musical numbers were rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Maynard.

The eight lodges in the district, all of which were represented, are: Dennis of Brattleboro, Myrtle of Proctorville, Amity of Bellows Falls, Crystal of Saxtons River, Columbia of Springfield, Mishap of Ludlow, Hope of Chester Depot, and Dorcas of Weston. Prominent members of the order who were present included Mrs. Cornelia F. Bond of St. Johnsbury, president of the Rebekah assembly; Mrs. Eva Hazen of Windsor, Mrs. Minnie S. Haven of Chester and Mrs. Alice Landry of Brattleboro, past president; Mrs. Louise L. Boyce of Barre, assembly secretary; Mrs. Frances Stone of Springfield, assembly chaplain, and Mrs. Edie M. Hour of Springfield, district deputy president.

The reception committee consisted of Mrs. Alice Landry, Mrs. Susie Keach, Mrs. Louise Perry, Mrs. Louise Maynard, Mrs. Helen Newman, Mrs. A. Currier, Mrs. Della Haigh and Mrs. Sara Sturges.

ASKS ACTION BY BOARD OF HEALTH.

Communication from Brattleboro Selectmen Regarding Conditions in the Railroad Yard.

The condition of the yard at the Central Vermont railroad station, which long has been a source of annoyance and inconvenience to every person having to pass through the yard, has been brought to the attention of the state board of health in a letter written yesterday by the selectmen of Brattleboro, by James F. Hooker, chairman, to Dr. Henry D. Holton, secretary of the state board. The text of the letter is as follows:

"The selectmen of the town of Brattleboro enter complaint with your board in regard to the condition of the yard of the Central Vermont Railway company at Brattleboro. The mass of mud and accumulating there is a menace to the health of the community. The Railway company, at a moderate outlay, could fill in the yard, and the freight depot, keep it clean and wholesome. We request that the board take action in this matter."

It is the intention of the railroad company to build a new freight depot, perhaps a new passenger station, within a year or two, on the opposite side of the tracks, moving the tracks out into the yard. General Manager G. C. Jones and a surveyor have looked the ground over within a few weeks with that end in view. The company does not wish to expend much money in bettering the condition of the yard and have it go for naught, nevertheless the public will welcome any effort which may be put forth to make the yard passable, and particularly any effort to abate any menace to public health.
