Senator William P. Dillingham, chairman of the national immigration commission, sailed from Boston Wednesday for Naples, accompanied by Senator Lattimer of South Carolina, Representatives Bennett of New York, Howell of New Jersey and Burnett of Alabama. Other members of the commission will join them in Europe and their investigations will cover a period of three months, including visits to Italy, Austria-Hungary, Russia, France and England. Particular attention will be paid to the Jewish section of Poland. The mental, moral and political conditions of the people will be studied and the commissioners will look into the methods adopted at ports of embarkation for the examination and classification of emigrants.

The tax assessors in New Hampshire towns and cities are receiving applications for exemptions daily under the new veterans' exemption law. Some of these come from unexpected sources and the selectmen are confronted with all sorts of arguments and conditions. The assessors in Claremont and Nashua, by advice of counsel, have refused to recognize mortgaged property as entitled to exemption. It is already apparent that in a town the size of Claremont the reduction in the town treasury will amount to many thousands of dollars. The Claremont Eagle says: "Whatever the beneficent intent of the law as regards the veteran soldiers, some surprising and unfortunate results are developing, and the statute appears to be destined to raise particular objections with the tax system of the entire state."

Additional statistics on the increased cost of living were made public last week by the department of commerce. The investigation shows that wholesale prices reached a higher level in 1906 than in any other year during the seventeen-year period covered. The average was 24.5 per cent. higher than for 1897, the year of lowest prices, and 24.4 higher than the average for the ten years from 1897 to 1906. Of 255 representative articles, 178 showed an increase in price in 1906 over the figures for the previous year. The average was 4.5 per cent. higher, and prices reached their highest point in December. The increased cost of most articles in common use during the year was general in some instances extraordinary. Thus, the price of metals and implements rose nearly 100 per cent.; building material nearly 50 per cent.; food, 3.4, and clothing 7.1. The rise in wholesale prices was reflected, of course, in the retail, so that householders were made aware of the increased cost of living without the official announcement.

Norwich, a Vermont town which gave a majority for license, will not have legalized sale of liquor the coming year. The situation at Norwich was regarded as unfortunate, the town being directly across the river from Hanover, which is the seat of Dartmouth college. A saloon in Norwich, aside from the usual objectionable features, would be a temptation to 2500 and more young men who are students in Dartmouth. One of the college professors, who is a resident of Norwich, to avoid having a saloon opened, applied for the license, paid the fee, secured and then pocketed the license. His intent was unquestionably praiseworthy, but there is a very debatable question as to whether he acted on a sound principle in defeating the expressed wishes of a majority of the people of the town under the provisions of a state law. If the proposition were reversed and by some trick a saloon keeper was able to circumvent a non-license vote and open a saloon we can imagine the storm of righteous indignation which would pour in from all sides.

Judge Wendell P. Stafford, formerly of St. Johnsbury, comes into the limelight in Washington, D. C., through an address which he delivered before the Vermont association, in which he condemned the pleas based on the unwritten law and temporary insanity. The trial of Mrs. Anna M. Bradley, under indictment for shooting former United States Senator Arthur Brown of Utah, would naturally come before Judge Stafford in criminal court No. 1 in Washington. Mrs. Bradley's counsel, having heard of Judge Stafford's expressed opinion on the unwritten law, may ask for a transfer of the case to criminal court No. 2, presided over by Judge Barnard. In the address in question Judge Stafford is alleged to have said: "The unwritten law gives the man killed no trial. It is that a manly thing to do—silence a man's lips in death and then plead the unwritten law, refuse the dead man a trial, but demand a trial and justification for himself. Next to the unwritten law among barbaric customs is that of pleading temporary insanity. I have a great respect for the man who, for the sake of a great principle and to uphold a great cause, goes out and defies the law."

Presidential Talk from Washington.

The summer action which filters over the wires into metropolitan newspapers as Washington correspondence, in taking up the Taft boom for the presidency, says the secretary of war's supporters are getting ready to do some work in New England and that Henry C. Ide of Br. Johnsbury, who succeeded the secretary as governor general of the Philippines, hopes to deliver the four delegates from Vermont to his good friend. It is further stated that Judge Ide, who has lived in Washington most of the winter, has been in frequent conference with Mr. Taft, and other members of the House. It is also added that the fact that the secretary's father, Alphonso Taft, secretary of war and afterward attorney-general in Grant's first administration, was a native Vermonter, will be used as a sentimental argument. It is intimated that the interests of Winston Churchill will be enlisted in an incursion into New Hampshire and that Representative Gilbert, dean of the Massachusetts delegation, and other members of the House from the Bay state, are friendly to Mr. Taft.

Judge Ide, with all his qualifications, is hardly the man to be depended upon for regular political work. In spite of his pre-eminence ability it has been intimated that he lacked sufficient popularity in his own town to gain an election to the Vermont legislature and he carries too much dignity and austerity to succeed as a political boomer. The argument that Secretary Taft's daddy was a Vermonter is pretty far-fetched. It would be a curious case of history repeating itself, however, if Mr. Taft was chosen to the presidency. Hayes, who was elected President from Ohio, like Taft of Ohio, was of Windham county parentage.

But the interesting thing about the whole story is the intimation that any one man can "swing" Vermont. The state will send its delegates to the next Republican national convention in accordance with the sentiment of the people, and there is plenty of time for this sentiment to crystallize between now and June, 1908. The remembrance of McKinley's first nomination is sufficient argument to flummox any talk about any man or set of men delivering the vote of the state to any particular candidate.

Boy Drowned in West Chesterfield.

Guy, 12, son of Mrs. Cornelia Howe of West Chesterfield village, was drowned about 6 o'clock last night in the brook just below W. W. Ford's mill. He jumped in to save Richard Amidon, 7, son of G. P. Amidon, from drowning. The two boys were fishing when Amidon fell in where the current was swift and deep. Mr. Amidon was told by one of his employees that his son had gone to the brook followed after him. When he arrived he found the boy just crawling up over the bank and crying that his companion was in the brook. Mr. Amidon jumped in and after a hard struggle with the current reached the body. It was thought that it had been in the water about 30 minutes. Dr. C. S. Pratt of Brattleboro was sent for and made a record broken trip to West Chesterfield. Although he worked over the body for two hours he was unable to restore the least sign of life. The boy's mother and father attended school where he was a general student.

FATAL RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

Mrs. Luke O. Morse Sustained Injuries in Brattleboro Sunday from Which She Never Recovered Consciousness.

The first fatal runaway accident in many years in Brattleboro occurred Sunday afternoon at about 4 o'clock on Grove street. Mrs. Luke O. Morse of Williamsville died in Memorial hospital about 11 o'clock that night as the result of her injuries and Mr. Morse received severe but not dangerous injuries. The horse became frightened by the breaking of a holdback near the top of the hill and ran down the street at high speed, throwing the occupants of the carriage out with terrific force against the fence at the Main street corner. They were both taken to the hospital and Mrs. Morse died without regaining consciousness.

Mr. and Mrs. Morse had been spending the day with their only daughter, Mabel, who was recently married to Charles Frenschmeyer of Williamsville. The young couple came to Brattleboro a short time ago and lived at 19 Grove street in the house formerly occupied by Dr. Lane. About 4 o'clock Mr. Morse harnessed his horse and drove back to Williamsville. After saying good-bye to their daughter they drove down Grove street, but they hardly started to descend the hill when the holdback broke, letting the carriage forward against the horse. The horse ran and Mr. Morse was unable to check it. They were going at such speed when they reached Main street that they could not turn and dashed into the fence of the F. D. Harris place now owned by G. W. Averill. The horse continued its run and was caught on Harris place. The carriage was completely demolished. The wheels collapsed when it struck the curb and the spokes and other pieces were scattered over the highway between the car track and the sidewalk.

A large crowd collected quickly at the scene of the accident and willing hands did all that was possible to make the sufferers comfortable. The ambulance was summoned hastily and Mrs. Morse was taken to the hospital where an examination showed that there was a fracture near the base of the skull, a fracture of the collar bone and internal injuries. Central hemorrhage resulted from the fracture of the skull, causing death. Mr. Morse was taken to the hospital shortly after. He sustained a broken collar bone, a dislocated shoulder and bruises.

Mr. Morse's physician said yesterday that he was doing as well as could be expected and was on the road to complete recovery. He is still in the hospital and will not be able to leave for some time. Mrs. Morse was a lifelong resident of Newfane and for many years had filed a farm place in the heart of the Williamsville people. She had been active in the Universalist church, of which Mr. Morse is a member, and had been one to whom the people came for friendly help in great and small things. Her maiden name was Ella M. Rice and she was born in Newfane March 13, 1855, daughter of Nelson and Mary Rice. She lived in Newfane until she was married to Mr. Morse and came to Williamsville to live. She leaves beside her husband and daughter, three sisters, Mrs. George Pierce of Walpole, N. H., Mrs. C. L. Piper of this town and Miss Laura Rice of Newfane, and two brothers, Fred Rice of Newfane and Charles Rice of Brattleboro.

The funeral was held in the home of the daughter on Grove street Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Rev. A. H. Webb, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated and a male quartet from the Methodist church sang. The bearers were friends and neighbors from Williamsville, George Williams, C. K. Steadman, Alfred Morse and Leslie Stratton. The body was taken to Williamsville for burial, where many of the townspeople gathered at the grave for the brief service.

At the time of the appointment of Judge James L. Martin as United States judge for the district of Vermont there were several cases pending for trial upon which Mr. Martin's appointment to the bench debarred him from sitting because he had prosecuted the respondents in them as United States district attorney. It was planned to have Judge Holt of New York state, which is in this circuit, come to Vermont and try these cases early in the May term of the federal court which convenes at Windsor. Owing to important engagements the New York judge will not be able to visit Vermont during the first part of the May term. It is expected that he will, however, try the cases sometime during the summer.
