Wilkins of Weston and sued to collect $5 for six weeks' rental. The Weston man on the other hand claimed that the cow was stolen and he had sued Mr. Sprague for $5 for taking care of her. Judge Gibson reserved his decision which will probably be given today.

A request of the trustees of the Brooks library building, 30 Pellet street, has drawn a plan for the conversion of the space under the roof of the building into a room 23 by 21 feet in size, to be used for housing the Phelps collection and also a large number of other reference books which are consulted only occasionally. It is found that a commodious and well lighted room can be provided there which will serve admirably for the purpose. The removal to this room of the Phelps collection and these reference works will make available a large section of stock room in the library building which is needed for the accommodations of other books. It is expected that the work upon this room will begin within a few days.

Brattleboro people gave a cordial welcome to the Atlanta quartet, Sunday, turning out in large numbers to the meetings in which the quartet sang and giving tribute to the fund which supports Atlanta university, which they represent.
