Buffalo Match for a Lion.

Kermit also shot three buffalo bu Pariton helping him to finish them off, for they are tough animals, tenacious of life and among the most dangerous of African game. One turned to charge. African game. One turned to charge, but was disabled by the bullets of both of them before he could come on. Tariton, whose experience in the hunting field against dangerous game had been large, always maintained that, although lion hunting was the most dangerous sport, because a hunted lion was far more and to charge than any other animal, vet sport, because a hunted hon was far more apt to charge than any other animal, yet that when a buffalo bull did charge he was more dangerous than a lion, because harder to kill or turn. Where zebra and other game are abundant, as on the Athiplains, llons do not meddle with such formidable quarry as buffalo; on Heatley's farm llons sometimes made their lairs in the same resources aware with the buffalor. farm lions sometimes made their lairs in the same papyrus swamp with the buffalo, but never molested them. In many places, however, the lion preys largely, and in some places chiefly, on the buffalo. The hunters of wide experience with whom I conversed, men like Tarlton, Cunninghame and Horne, were a unit in stating that where a single lion killed a buffalo they had always found that the buffalo was a cow or immature buil, and that whenever they had found a full-grown buil thus killed, several lions had been engaged in the job. Horne had once found the carcass of a big buil which had been killed and eaten by lions, and near by a dead lioness with a great and near by a dead lioness with a great rip in her side, made by the buffalo's horn in the fight in which he succumbed. Even a buffalo cow, if pitted against a Even a buffato cow, if pitted against a single lion, would probably stand an even chance; but of course the fight never is fair, the lion's aim being to take his prey unawares and get a death grip at the outset; and then, unless his hold is broken, he cannot be seriously injured.—[Theodore Roosevelt in Scribner's Magnatice

JAPAN ALONE REDUCES WAR COSTS. Marquis Katsura, speaking to the World, calls attention to the $100.000.000 a year Japan is spending for war. Even with the interest on war debt added, her milltary bill for each family of five is less than $20. If Chairman Tawney's estimate s right, our own must be nearer $40 per family.

Of all the great Christian powers not one is cutting down war expenditure. It has been left for Japan, the only non-Christian nation that soldiers consider, to set this honorable example.

Japan has not dared reduce her army. It spells defense. She will not cut pen-sions, for honor and gratitude forbid. But for the pavy, the favorite arm of war-shouters and the chief tool of aggression. her 1909-1910 estimate was some $3,900,000 less than in the proceding year and her dreams of ambitious expansion are dispelled. Knowing, as Marquis Katsura says, the cruelty of war: appalled at the sacrifices of the tax-ridden people; sadeacrifices of the tax-ridden people; and-dened that a race loving art and peace should be "civilized" by shedding blood, the Edder Statesmen of Nippon have led the way in war retrenchment. Their "great navy" program is abandoned. In the same year that saw this hopeful precedent in reduction Britain and Ger-many made fresh exertions in their wasteful war for naval supremacy. And the United States—with no glant Russia planning revence; with no China waking planning revenge; with no China waking at her door; with no fee on earth to fear—raised its naval appropriation alone by $\frac{\text{Mrs.}}{\text{state}}$ of Wo great as Japan spends upon army and navy together.—[New York World.

MASSACHUSETTS NOTES.

Nicholas Cassavetes, a Greek, Honor Graduate at Mount Hermon Graduate at Mount Hermon.

Commencement day exercises of Mount Hermon school were held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The principal speaker of the day was Rev. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan of London, who delivered the graduation address. The school chapel, with a seating capacity of 1000, was taxed to the utmost with guests of the graduates and visitors from the Northfield conference. Twenty-four graduates received diplomas. This number is the largest class ever graduated in the summer term. The Cambridge prize for general excellence, amounting to $25, was awarded to the best all-around man. Immediately after the exercises the principal's recepthe best all-around man. Immediately after the exercises the principal's reception was held in Mr. Cutler's parlors. The gathering of graduates, alumni and guests was greater than in previous terms. An alumni prize debate between the Forensic and Athean literary societies was held Saturday evening on the question: "Resolved, that each separate state ahould have general supervision over the forests within its limits." Nicholas J. Cassavetes, a native of Greece, honor graduate, worked his way through school. Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Derby, who have been spending the summer in Dublin, came

A Regrettable Incident. A Harvard professor was called on for a speech at his wedding supper. He was a man of deeds, not words, and entirely unused to making speeches, but he finally succumbed, and, rising nervously, laid his hand on the bride's shoulder and said:
"My friends, this thing has been forced upon me." Which would have been well enough, except for the unfortunate circumstance that the bride was very homely and had literally been "matched"
with the professor by her masterful mother.
