

PROGRESSIVE BRATTLEBORO.

Complimentary Editorial Reference in Springfield Board of Trade Publication, Western New England.

Public notice of the right sort, and plenty of it, is given this town in the current issue, June, of Western New England, a monthly publication issued by the Springfield board of trade. A column is devoted to the Brattleboro board of trade, and three pages are given up to an account of the Better Brattleboro campaign, including half-tone pictures of Frank Dyer, Clarke C. Flitt, Rev. Roy M. Houghton, Col. J. Gray Essey, George L. Dunham and the Auditorium stage, where the meetings were held. In a circular letter soliciting subscriptions of the members of the local board of trade the editor of Western New England says: "We will gladly give Brattleboro a page in each issue of the magazine if the board of trade will furnish the material for it and if the citizens are with us."

In an editorial preface to the article, by Rev. Roy M. Houghton, secretary of the campaign committee, on the Better Brattleboro campaign, the editor says: "Brattleboro is one of the most progressive towns in Western New England; its board of trade can furnish an inspiration and a model to other communities, both large and small. The 'Better Brattleboro' campaign has been widely noted and so favorably that several other places, among them Springfield, are already contemplating similar campaigns. This sketch of the plan and results by one prominently associated with it gives an excellent idea of the campaign."

Following is the text of the article entitled "What One Board Has Done": "The Brattleboro board of trade holds some records. There is reason to believe that it is the largest board of trade in any community of Brattleboro's size in New England, and it is which is more important—one of the most successful in accomplishment. Through its instrumentality new industries have been secured for the town and business conditions and civic spirit improved."

"The board of trade is not un mindful of the moral and social interests of the community. They united enthusiastically with the churches in carrying on the no-license campaign which resulted in an overwhelming majority for no-license. It has an inducement to offer individuals and individuals who wish to be in a town where there are 12 churches and no saloons. The new industrial developments now under way are sure to bring one thousand men to Brattleboro within a few months. The board of trade fully appreciates the importance of furnishing houses for these new citizens and a definite movement is under way for building beautiful and sanitary tenement houses."

"The board of trade's activities have been diverse. The organization has spent hundreds of dollars in advertising. Some of its most important work has been in the building of the dam across the Connecticut river which is an attraction for new industries and greatly beautifies the town by forming a lake about 25 miles long where boating is enjoyed in summer and skating in winter; it contributed a large bonus toward securing the Pelch & Pier chair factory, and it is intensely interested and active in the local railroad situation. The largest monument to its endeavors is the Fort Dunham Cotton Mills, which are now in the process of construction. These mills are to be capitalized at $450,000 and $250,000 of the stock was raised in Brattleboro, $90,000 of which was subscribed by members of the board of trade."

"Older industrial enterprises have given Brattleboro a world-wide reputation. The most noteworthy of these is the Essey Organ company, which employs about 400 men; the Hooker, Corser & Mitchell Overall company employs about 225; the S. A. Smith company employs 125; the White River Chair company employs 200; the Hillier, Hillier & Co. printers, eighty; and the Vermont Print ing company, 60; the Carpenter Organ company employs 50 men; the Dunham Brothers, wholesale boot and shoe merchants, have an office force of 60 and 20 agents in the field. Five strong banks are a testimony to the standing of the town as a commercial center. To these older enterprises the board of trade, under the leadership of its energetic president, Dennison Cowles, is continually adding new enterprises."

"Towns and small cities may well look to Brattleboro for example and encouragement. Success of this sort is, first of all, the result of 'the spirit behind.' Such a spirit is coming to be recognized throughout the country as a great civic asset."

Contractors employed by the New England Telephone and Telegraph company have finished laying conduits from Elliot street up Church and Green streets to Cedar street and from the Elliot street to Main street to the Wells fountain. The cables in both places, containing 180 pairs of wires, will be placed under ground. Wooden pipes are used in the conduits. They are soaked in creosote which will preserve them for many years, and as there are four lines of pipes the future growth of the telephone business in those sections of the town is provided for. Cement is now used in constructing the manholes, instead of brick as formerly.

Company I returned Wednesday night from the rifle range at Northfield, where the annual camp of instruction in rifle practice is being held. Three sharpshooters and 21 marksmen were qualified, which is the best showing made by any company in the state.

The camp will continue through the month and the regimental competition for the centennial trophy will be held, beginning July 15. It is expected that teams of eight men from each company will participate. The state team for the national competition at Camp Perry, Ind., will be made up from those having the best average scores made during the camp of instruction and the regimental competition. Last year in the regimental competition Company I of New England was first and Company M of Burlington second. When it is considered that Company I has no range upon which to shoot, the record made by the team was very creditable.

Hawkins-Weatherhead Wedding. The marriage of Miss Olive Weatherhead of West Brattleboro to Royal Deane Hawkins of Greenfield, N. H., took place in the home of the bride's parents on Western avenue at 7.30 o'clock Wednesday evening, July 12. Only relatives and intimate friends of the two families were present, but the wedding was very pretty and happy. Rev. E. J. Lewis, pastor of the West Brattleboro Congregational church, of which both are members, performed the ceremony, using a double ring service.

As the bridal march from Lohengrin was played as a solo with piano accompaniment by Mrs. D. M. Stockwell, preceded by a little Evelyne W. M. who carried the bride, marched into the room and announced an affair of evergreen in the bay window.

Leitinger and Dugan played during the ceremony and reception. The reception took place in the parlors of the bride's home, where refreshments were served by the bridesmaids.

The bride's gown, decorated with crepe de chine, her veil was caught up with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and garden hair.

After the ceremony the parents of both bride and bridegroom assisted Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins in receiving the guests. The bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Stockwell, gave, including silver, cut glass and an upright piano.

Mrs. Hawkins is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Weatherhead of West Brattleboro. She is a graduate of the West Brattleboro academy, the Brattleboro high school and the Worcester Domestic Science school. She taught Domestic Science in the academy and in Philadelphia and afterwards in the agricultural school in Montague. Mr. Hawkins is son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hawkins, now of Belmont, Mass.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hawkins of Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. Williams and daughter of Long Beach, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. Bush of Newfane, Mr. and Mrs. Gibson and son, Theodore, of Canton, N. Y., and Miss Ruth Sprague of Wilmington, Mass.

Large Order for Unadilla Silos. The Borden Condensed Milk Company, one of the largest milk companies in the United States, has placed an order with the Unadilla Silo Company for a number of silos to be used on their upstate farms throughout the country. Prior to 1910 the Borden company refused milk from cows that had been fed on ensilage, for the reason that in almost every instance the ensilage was in a semi-decayed condition when fed to the cows.

During the past year the Unadilla Silo Company has been kept in the forefront of the Borden Company, and these silos have proved so satisfactory that the company took up the line of experiments and found that the ensilage kept in the silos was not affected as in many other cases. The result was that they have now placed a large order with the Unadilla Silo Company for a number of silos to be used on their upstate farms throughout the country. The feature of the Unadilla Silos is the continuous, airtight, adjustable door-front, which prevents decay of the ensilage.

The small number of Borden milk stations in this vicinity is attributed to the fact that the company had refused to take milk from patrons using silos, but now that the Borden Company have themselves adopted the silo, their factories will no doubt become more common in this section. C. C. Burnham of Vernon is the local agent for the Unadilla Silo Company.
