BELLOWS FALLS NEWS

Surfited With Cake.

Taken as a whole, Bellovs Falls is something like the man who attempted to eat a quail a day for 30 days. It was all right for a few days, but now even some of the most enthusiastic a short time ago are beginning to quit. It was all caused by cake. Cake in itself is usually a mighty tempting delicacy, but when the whole town is baking and trying to eat the same kind, that's another story, as a former resident of Brattleboro would say.

The cake which has caused cancellations of dinner engagements, and which has caused a village of youngsters to eye their mothers with suspicion when they announce that a cake is about to be baked, is known as "Canada's War Cake." Mere man might not pay any particular attention to the recipe, but when Bellovs Falls women learned that it could be baked without eggs and other things hitherto usually considered essential to the welfare and toothsome-ness of a cake, they grasped the opportunity to try it out.

A prominent member of the Woman's club first got hold of the recipe and made a Canada war cake. She liked it and the others in her family did also, so she had a few copies (of the recipe) typewritten and handed them to friends. The friends liked it and continued the introduction of the cake. Then one afternoon in a meeting a whole batch of typewritten copies were handed around and in order that those outside the club's membership might be in on a good thing the club correspondent sent a copy to the local paper. It was under the caption of "Canada's War Cake" and apparently every woman in town read it.

Then came a surfeit of Canada's war cake. It began to be served at every meal, including breakfasts, in many homes. Whenever a church supper was held a few women were sure to practice a little economy and Canada's war cake was sure to be found in sufficient quantities to supply the demand. But the climax came a few nights ago when at a church supper every woman who sent or brought cake sent a loaf of the Canadian war variety.

The cake is all right in itself, but when an entire community makes too much of one thing, it is bound to lose its favor. Canada war cake retains its flavor, but without doubt its popularity has sadly waned within the past week or 10 days. In order that other communities may benefit by this wonderful eggless, and other- less, recipe here it is:

CANADA'S WAR CAKE.

Eggless, butterless, milkless.

Two cups brown sugar, two cups hot water, two tablespoons lard, one package seeded raisins, cut once, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon clove. Boil all these ingredients five minutes after they begin to bubble. When cold add one teaspoon soda dissolved in one teaspoon hot water, three cups flour. Bake in two loaves 45 minutes in a slow oven. This cake is better at the end of a week, or even longer. It ripens, as do all fruit cakes.

Kinds of Kerosene.

For the protection of the public as well as to identify distinctly its own product, the Standard Oil company of New York is conducting an extensive advertising campaign to direct attention to Socony kerosene, which is claimed to be as much superior to ordinary kerosene as dairy butter is to the "processed" article.

This special distillation of crude petroleum has been trademarked so that it may be distinguished from the inferior grades of kerosene. The popular error still exists to some extent that all kerosene is alike, when, as a matter of fact, there is as much difference between them as between grades of milk. Socony kerosene gives a brilliant illuminating light without smoke or odor, and in the oil stove or heater its heat units are greater than any other kerosene on the market.

Remember, too, the use of kerosene means a large saving of coal.

R. F. Landis of Mr. Hermon and Putney thinks the people of Dummerston were easily pleased by the poor roads of the past week, when they postponed the Christian Endeavor social which was to take place last Thursday. But not so with Mr. Landis; with a friend he feared neither the elements of nature nor the bad roads but bravely ventured forth, only to find to his sorrow that the social was not to take place. Mr. Landis says, however, that even if there was no social he enjoyed the ride very much and his companion was of the same opinion.
