PROMPT POLICE ACTION SAVES ALCOHOL DRINKER

Man Giving Name of "Jack" O'Brien Found With Two Bottles of Poison

A middle-aged man who gave his name as Jack O'Brien, and who claimed to have been employed by the Swan Construction Company at Montpelier was taken into the custody of the St. Johnsbury police on Monday morning in a helpless condition. He was picked up besides the river in back of the St. Johnsbury Laundry shortly before noon and taken to the police station where he was locked in one of the cells until medical aid could be summoned. On his person were found a nearly empty pint bottle smelling strongly of wood alcohol, and a bottle bearing the label of a local pharmacy, which indicated that the contents were denatured alcohol. In the afternoon, he was taken to the Brightlook hospital, where he lived through the night, and seemed to be gaining, in spite of the fact that he had disposed of nearly a pint of the poisonous stuff.

O'Brien had been seen earlier in the day somewhat intoxicated, and a resident of Concord had been in his company. The Concord man was seen later and said that O'Brien called the stuff "Canadian High Wines," and had offered him some. Since this information was given, this man seems to have disappeared, and it is possible that he is the poisoned. The police are investigating the affair, and it is quite evident that except for the prompt action of Officer Wallace O'Brien might now be dead.
