PIERRE, SOUTH DAKOTA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1892.

NO. 26.

ELECTION RETURNS

Every Republican on the County Ticket Elected Except Williams and Leggett.

The Vote on Auditor Uncomfortably Close Between Conniff and Moulton.

A Sweeping Democratic Victory in Almost Every State Except South Dakota.

As the county returns are not perfect enough yet to enable us to give the vote in full, we will next week try to give the official vote in tabulated form.

In this issue we will give the vote on the principal county officers, members of the legislature and only the totals on the electoral, congressional and state tickets.

Respecting the Dead.
Mrs. Granpere—Why, Bridget, I heard of the death of poor Tim, your husband, and that you were married again; and now, poor girl is it possible your second husband too?
Bridget (in deep mourning)—Oh, no, mum. He's all right. But I always promised meself, whiniver I could afford it, I wud put on mornin for poor dear Tim, and it's very well off I am mum, since I'm married this time, mum.—Harper's Bazar.
Economy in Rapid Freight Trains.
A German engineer concludes that if the speed instead of the load of freight trains be increased from fourteen to twenty-eight miles per hour the expenses per car mile at the higher speed would be one-fourth less for repairs and only one-fifth more for fuel.—New York Times.

IF I COULD KNOW!

If I could know, ah, me! If I could know That for the space Of one brief moment, in the long ago, You gave me place Above all other women in your heart, It would not be so hard from you to part.

If I could know you hold me dearer yet Than any one, And that you nevermore would quite forget The bright days gone, I would be more content, and courage gain In time, perhaps, to live down all the pain.

If I could know you feel regret today To see me turn Away from you and go my weary way, Then I would learn To find, perhaps, some comfort in the thought, So full of saddest consolation fraught.

If I could know that at some future tide We two should meet, And linger for a moment side by side In converse sweet, I would not dread this parting as I do, For hope would trim the light of love for you.

If I could know that when this life is o'er, In that bright land Where all is peace, our souls should meet once more, And understand Each other better than in days gone by, I would be more than satisfied to die.

—E. C. Longmire in New Orleans Picayune.

It Stopped the Fainting.

A story of "fainting beauties" is told in the memoirs of the Rev. Julian Young, subchaplain of Hampton Court palace. One very hot Sunday a young lady, not a resident of the palace, but living in the vicinity, fainted in the chapel during the service. Sir Horace Seymour, a widower, a Waterloo hero, of commanding presence and striking good looks, raised the prostrate lady in his arms, carried her to his apartments, deposited her on a sofa, left her to the charge of his housekeeper and returned to his seat. Strange to say, on the following Sundays a young lady, each time a different one, fainted; and on each occasion the same gallant knight performed the same kind office for the sufferer and then returned to his post.

On the last of these three fainting Sundays Lady Seymour, the aunt of Sir Horace, said to the chaplain after service: "I say, Mr. Young, this fashion of fainting will degenerate into an epidemic if it is not put a stop to. With your permission, I will affix before next Sunday this notice in the cloister, at the door of entrance: 'Whereas, a tendency to faint is becoming a prevalent infirmity among young ladies frequenting this chapel, notice is hereby given that, for the future, ladies so affected will not be carried out by Sir Horace Seymour, but by Branscombe, the dustman.' This warning produced the desired effect, and the plague of fainting beauties was staid.

The Married Belle's Influence.

A woman who has great influence over young men is the young married woman who has been a belle among them and who still has them calling at her home. She is the one who knows what they really are, and if she is a good woman she can do a wonderful amount of good to these young men who admire her and prize her friendship, knowing they cannot keep it unless worthy of it. Her happiness and her husband's prove the best of object lessons. And what sweet praise it is to her to hear that one of these young men has remarked, "Mrs. Youngwife is a superb woman, she keeps us straight and does us ever so much good." It is the sweetest bit of compliment a woman could desire; just as it is the keenest anguish to know that some one we love has done wrong for our sake; or that we have led him to wrongdoing. And from that, dear women, let us all pray to be saved.—Philadelphia Music and Drama.

The Oregon Boot.

A decided novelty in footwear is the "Oregon boot," so called, with one of which a train robber who arrived in St. Louis was manacled. The boot weighed 18½ pounds, and a detective spent fifteen minutes in opening the combination by which it was secured to the prisoner's foot. Thus hobbled there would seem to be a small chance for a malefactor to effect his flight from custody unless he should somehow learn the combination. Practically he might as well be anchored to a fireproof safe.—Philadelphia Ledger.

WHY "No. 9" HEELER & WILSON'S No. 9 SEWING MACHINES POPULAR? BECAUSE LADIES BUY THEM LIKE THEM AND TELL THEIR FRIENDS.

Many ladies have used our machines twenty to thirty years in their family work, and are still using the original machines we furnished them a generation ago. Many of our machines have run more than twenty years without repairs, other than needles. With proper care they never wear out, and seldom need repair.

We have built sewing machines for more than forty years and have constantly improved them. We build our machines on honor, and they are recognized everywhere as the most accurately fitted and finely finished sewing machines in the world. Our latest, the "No. 9," is the result of our long experience. In competition with the leading machines of the world, it received the Grand Prize at the Paris Exposition of 1889, as the best of other machines receiving only complimentary medals of gold, silver and bronze. The Grand Prize was what all sought for, and our machine was awarded it.

Send for our illustrated catalogue. We want dealers in all unoccupied territory.
