The opinion is rapidly gaining ground that a remedy which has proved efficient in the hands of the skillful practitioner, a remedy prepared by him as the result of years of observation and experience, for the treatment of disease in individual cases, may be placed by the same practitioner within the reach of the reading public, be instrumental in curing many who otherwise have remained ignorant of it.

WINTER EVENINGS.

Those engaged in literary or desk work in the daytime are apt to be too tired to use their eyes at night. For these music, whist or some semi-active game is the best preparation for sound sleep.

But the majority of persons do not sit at a desk and write or add up figures all day, fortunately for themselves. They are actively employed; consequently intellectual work for two hours in the evening will be real play to them. For such there is the invaluable debating and literary society, blessed inheritance from the fathers of this republic. The walls of log cabins have many a time echoed to the eloquence of young men who were there trained to fill the highest places in this republic. The town and village literary and debating society has lost none of its power of culture and enlightenment. May it continue to shine forever! It reaches its highest point of interest and excellence when persons of both sexes are members of it.

Every village, however small and poor, can have a reading club. The members may lend one another the periodicals each can afford to take, and so each will receive all. But the happiest results can be reached when members assemble together and take turns reading aloud the late magazines or interesting books. Two readers might be chosen for each evening. The American voice would thus get what it sadly needs—practice in speaking distinctly, in opening the mouth and forming the words with the tip of the tongue instead of back in the throat. Thus would come refined cultivated tones. There should be a critic for each evening, who in a would wholly good natured way point out mispronunciations or jumbled words and sentences. Did it ever occur to you that not one American in a hundred can read well aloud? So form your club, now that the long evenings have closed around us with their darkness.

There is something else every village, however poor and small, ought to have, too, and that is an evening school. Most of the larger towns have one now, but the system should be extended. The evening school will bring to working young men and women the opportunity of their lives to perfect themselves in arithmetic, book-keeping and penmanship and a knowledge of their own country. It is easy to start such evening classes anywhere.

The Republican convention which will probably meet next February will nominate a Justice of the Supreme Court. We know of no one better fitted for the office than Philip T. Van Zile, a prominent Detroit lawyer. Taking the two facts that Mr. Van Zile stands high in the rank of his profession as a lawyer and also that for twenty-five years he has faithfully and zealously worked for the success of the Republican party, sacrificing oftentimes business, time and money in the campaigns of that party it would seem no more than right to give him the nomination, which he certainly deserves as a favor from the party and also as a recognition of his ability to fill ably this position as Justice of the Supreme Court.

Teachers' Association Postponed.

As the State Superintendent of Public Instruction has informed us that he will be unable to attend the meetings if held on the 21st and 22d of December, and as several of the teachers who have been invited to take part have written us that they were so busy just before the close of their terms they feared they would hardly have time to prepare for it as thoroughly as they would like; and again, as we are informed that many wish to spend the holidays with friends living outside of the county and would find it inconvenient to attend the meetings on the dates named, we therefore deem it advisable to postpone the meetings for one month. The Rally will be held in the city of Port Huron on the evening of January 23rd and the Association on January 24th. We hope that this will not only give all an opportunity to attend, but that all will embrace the opportunity.
