VILLAGE CAUCUS.

A Lively Interest Manifested in the Meeting held at Village Hall Wednesday Evening.

A Caucus of the Electors of Yale Village was held Wednesday evening in the Town Hall. There was a large attendance, and the most lively interest manifested in the business of the meeting. The contest for positions on the ticket was quite warm in all the nominations made, except Treasurer and Assessor, these being placed on the ticket by acclamation. Another caucus is called by electors to put in nomination a Citizens' Ticket, the notice of which will be found elsewhere in this issue.

The officers that presided at Wednesday night's caucus are James Wallace, chairman; E. F. Fead, secretary; D. A. McKeith and Will H. Wear, tellers.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sample bottles at Grant Holden's drug store.

Would It Pay?

Has any one ever investigated the question of cheap feed barns—ten cent ones, in which farmers could for a small fee shelter their teams when they come to town? What leads us to think of this is the vast number of teams found unsheltered on busy days. Such a barn would mean humane treatment for man's noblest friend. Would it be patronized by farmers? Would many who take the train to Port Huron, so shelter their team until their return? And there is that other all important question, would such a place pay its owner and keeper? We confess our almost utter ignorance on this topic; but it can do no harm for some one to think about it, and if need be, make all needful investigations.

Dissolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership of Wharton & Holden is hereby mutually dissolved; that the business of the firm will be continued by Wharton & Co.; that all bills and accounts due from the firm will be paid by Wharton & Co., and that all bills, accounts, and notes given to the firm or due them are to be paid to the said Wharton & Co. John Holden 43-4 Thos. U. Wharton Dated this 20th day of Feb., 1900.

An Editor's Life Saved by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

During the early part of October, 1896 I contracted a bad cold which settled on my lungs and was neglected until I feared that consumption had appeared in an incipient state. I was constantly coughing and trying to expel something which I could not. I became alarmed and after giving the local doctor a trial bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the result was immediate improvement, and after I had used three bottles my lungs were restored to their healthy state.—B. S. Edwards, publisher of the Review, Wyant, Ill. For sale by Staley & McKeith.

A Business Change.

By formal notice elsewhere found in this issue, the dissolution of partnership heretofore existing between Thos. Wharton and John Holden is announced, the latter retiring from the firm. These two gentlemen have been associated in the grain, hay, coal, implements and other lines of trade for a period of nine years. In that long period an immense volume of business has been done, and their patrons are numbered by the thousands, scattered over a wide circle of territory. There will be sorry to miss the face of either proprietor from the old stand.

And the old stand! What a history it has! If we could have a detail account of the tons of hay, the bushels of grain, the amount of farm produce bought by the firm in all these years, how it would astonish us by its immensity. Add to these the vast amount of material and machinery sold, and what a sum it would make. Think, again, of the enormous sum of money that has been paid out and in this same triangle shaped office. This plant has been among the principal financial arteries through which has come the blood of business.

This dissolution will not, however, lessen the volume of trade or its benefits to the community. The business will be carried on by Mr. Wharton and the firm name will be Wharton & Co. This will not mean a new proprietor, but one long known by all, and whose experience will enable him to meet the demands of the trade, in all ways that his patrons needs may suggest. The public will not have to learn a new man, or become reconciled to seeing a new face. The thousands know "Tom," know him as tested by all these years of business deal, and upon that knowledge they base their trust.

But while all this is unqualifiedly true, and the business will in nowise change, yet there will be a lack and loss by Mr. Holden's retirement. We cannot live by a man, meet him almost hourly, have business relations with him in countless ways, and not miss him on retirement. The public will miss John from his place on the triangle; and we should not be surprised if John would miss the public. We would be a little surprised if at least twice a day he does not seek the old haunts, swap stories with the farmers, and sort beans to keep up a good appetite. One thing John will have, and take with him over and above the stock he carries out, the respect, confidence and friendship gained. This will be the very best item; and one not measured by dollars; that he will have to enter on the profit page of the ledger.

A Dog-goned Shame.

There are many stories with morals attached, but the stories are not always true or the morals plain. Here is one which is known to be unvarnished truth, and it has a moral in it large enough to go around the whole crowd—a kind of moral that is self cooking, self priming, and self acting; in fact so automatic that it needs no pointing; no fuse attachment, and no touching off. The records show that a recent vendue was held in South Brockway, and a vast crowd of persons anxious to buy themselves rich and get trusted for the entire sum, hid themselves thither. Among them, with his eye cocked on a sharp bargain and a good backer in his mind, came one T. H. P., late of Yale, but now of Sunnyside Ranch. It seems that his fervent desires had all gone to the bow-wows, and to have them good and fresh, night or day, the year round, he must needs have a dog of his own. Hearing that a dog would be sold at this auction, he, too, hid himself thither, with his bid made up to the not-a-cent-more-will-I-give notch. In due time the dog was put up and the bidding began. But, oh! horrors! a kid was there with his mouth all fixed for dog, and armed with the cash—a whole quarter and T. H. was out-bid and the dog knocked down to the kid. But he had come all the way for that pup and the pup he would have. So, doubling the price to the boy, he closed the bargain, and started home with the dog tied behind his buggy. All went well, the dog taking to his new master, and it seemed to be a case of love at first sight. Doubts must have come to the dog; and he rued the bargain. As the new master neared his home a neighbor hailed him wanting to know what ailed the dog? It was then that our granger cast his eye behind him, and lo! the dog was dead. The tie-strap noose had slipped, and his wind shut off. Then came the weeping and wailing in Ireland. The dog was dead, his hide ruined, the fifty cents clean cash gone, a whole day's time lost, and a dog funeral on his hands.

To the Poor House at Last.

By the advice of Dr. Mills, the physician for St. Clair county, J. S. Kennelick has been sent to the County house for care. While this announcement may not occasion surprise to those who knew him best, yet there are none who will not feel inexpressible sad. With such superior natural talent, supplemented with the best education attainable at Ireland's first university, it is indeed a sad ending to what might have been a brilliant career. Strong drink, that worst enemy of noble and generous souls, found in him a shining mark.

A CARD.

We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a 50-cent bottle of Greene's Warranted Syrup of Tar if it fails to cure your cough or cold. We also guarantee a 25-cent bottle to prove satisfactory or money refunded. Grant Holden, Yale. J. C. Regan, Melvin.
