WILLIAM V. ANDREAE

One of Yale's Prominent Citizens Starts a Bank at Avoca.

Feeling that the business movements and doings of so public spirited a man as William V. Andrae will be of more than passing interest to our townspeople, among whom the best part of his life has been spent, pushing forward every effort for the progress and upbuilding of the town, we have gathered a few materials together concerning his life and his own business interests and present them to our readers, knowing that no eulogisms of ours can change the facts or produce other than the good opinion of our citizens in which he has always been held.

William V. Andrae owes his birth place to Ashland, Ohio, his coming being celebrated on February 24, 1850 by his parents, Charles and Louisa Andrae. From Ohio the family after wards moved to Essex county, Ont., and from there to Chatham. In 1869 Michigan became the objective point and Lexington their home, the father's business in both latter places being concerned in woolen mills.

In 1878 the subject of our sketch was married to Sophia Rickerman, of Paris, Ontario, and they were blessed with three children, Charles, Louisa and Lloyd.

In 1881 the father with his two sons, Rudolph and William came to Yale and built the woolen mills, the firm name being C. Andrae & Sons. The mills became at once a source of revenue to the firm and a big starter in the advancement of the village. But in November of the year 1885 the scourge of fire razed the buildings to the ground. Nothing daunted the mills were rebuilt the same winter, on a much larger scale and with many additions and improvements. Prosperity attended the efforts, many hands are kept busy in the different departments and the fame of the Yale Woolen Mills long since has gone abroad.

In 1892 C. Andrae, the elder of the firm died, and two years ago his oldest son, Rudolph followed, the business being carried on by Wm. V. and Rudolph's sons. In April last the former concluded to sever his connection with the business and did so, but the old firm name still holds good.

In 1889 Wm. was elected to the presidency of the village, showing the trust the people placed in him, in which they were in no wise mistaken. He ruled public affairs well. He was also called upon to fill the position again, the year the water works and electric lights were established and when so numerous were the extra calls for sharp-sightedness, wisdom and shrewdness, but he passed through the ordeal nobly and no one can say that as well as man could do, he did. Mr. Andrae has also been a member of the council several times. He is a stockholder in the Yale flour mills, canning factory and First National bank, and has every interest of the place at heart.

Last summer he decided to start a bank in Avoca, a village eight miles to the east of us. The new building is finished and furnished complete, and his son Charles has been placed in the responsible position of cashier of the establishment, a position which he certainly will fill with credit. Mr. Andrae will not leave Yale, only to oversee his new business. He has a handsome residence on First street, where our people will hope to see him and his family residing for many years.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

Mrs. Henry Phillips departed this life at her home near Roseburg on Saturday, Nov. 29, at the age of 45 years. The funeral was held from the house on Tuesday afternoon and was largely attended by friends and neighbors. Interment at cemetery north of Roseburg. Rev. Eymor, of Crosswell, conducted the ceremony. A husband and three children are left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother.

Carrie M. Ferguson, aged 25 years, died at her home in Greenwood township, on Saturday, November 29, and was buried at Elmwood cemetery on Monday afternoon. The funeral was held from the M. P. church, Yale, Rev. J. H. Reilly preaching the sermon.

Elmo, the one year old twin son of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. McDonald, died at Brown City Sunday, Nov. 29, after a fifteen days' sickness from pneumonia. The remains were brought to Yale and interred in the family lot at Elmwood cemetery. The parents have the sympathy of a large number of friends in their sad affliction.

The death of M. A. Sargent, which has been expected for some time, occurred at his home in Yale, on Friday, November 28, 1902. Deceased was sick a number of months, his trouble being Bright's disease, and he was wasted away to a shadow, having suffered much. Four children survive him, his wife dying several years ago, Mrs. C. J. Holcomb, of Yale, Mrs. N. L. Kneeland, of Ymir, British Columbia, Emma and George Sargent, of Moorland, Iowa. The funeral services were held on Sunday from the M. E. church, Rev. C. D. Ellis preaching the sermon.

Mr. Sargent came to Yale about 15 years ago and started a small grocery store. His stock of groceries was enlarged and added to until his sickness confined him much to his room, and death released him as stated above.

Enjoys Climate of California.

In a letter this week from James Brown to his relatives he speaks of the weather as being very delightful at present in Los Angeles, where he and Mrs. Brown and others of the Yale party are located for the winter, and that that day, November 25, they lay out on the grass for two hours taking a sun bath. The nights are quite cool, but there has been no sign of frost yet. There are no twilights in that region, when the sun sets at night it is dark, which seems queer to Michigan people, accustomed to the gradual coming of darkness. Mr. Brown speaks of the lavish abundance of flowers, great hedges of calla lilies and roses, and wishes his friends might see them. His health is much better in California than in Michigan, and gives proof by saying that one day he had walked four miles.

He was with Wm. McKenna one day upon a high hill and looking below remarked, "See the chickens down there." The joke was on our friend Mr. Brown as his companion dryly told him "those are cows."

Sitting upon the porch of his brother's house they can see the wonderful snow capped peaks and the grandeur of the whole scene fill them with admiration and awe. Mr. Brown says if he had gone to that country ten years ago, he would have been more than satisfied to have spent the rest of his days amidst those delightful scenes, but with the ties of a life time in Michigan he feels free to admit that he misses old associates.

Grange Insurance.

To the editor Yale Expressor:—
In a recent issue of your paper there appeared an item copied from the Western Underwriter, no doubt handed in by a local agent, with regard to Grange Insurance, headed "Grange Insurance Not a Success," and that the Grange Insurance Co., of Cass and Van Buren counties, located at Paw Paw, had an assessment of $1900 a thousand. I wrote to the secretary, Geo. T. Rieh, of Paw Paw, to get the facts and found a very different state of affairs. Their assessment for this year is only 11 cents a thousand. They have been doing business for three years, and the average assessment has only been $2.20 a thousand.
JOHN SHEEHY,
Director of St. Clair and Macomb Grange Insurance Co.

The 20th Century Laurels.

Burns slack and all grades of soft coal without smoke or soot.

THE COMMON STOVE.—In the common stove, with the draft through the grate, all the coal in the fire pot is on fire and throwing off the smoke, soot and gases that have always made soft coal objectionable for house use, besides wasting the large amount of heat they contain.

NOT A SMOKE CONSUMER.—There have been and are being placed on the market many so-called smoke consumers that consume it to a more or less extent. The 20th Century Laurel is not a smoke consumer, for the manner in which it causes the fuel to burn does not produce either smoke or soot.

THE WAY IT BURNS.—If you place soft coal in an oven heating it to a certain temperature, the gases will be liberated and coke formed. In the 20th Century Laurel the draft enters the fire chamber through the slots in the fire pot, causing the coal to burn entirely and only around its outside, thus enclosing the green coal in a circle of intense heat, the same as if in an oven, and the result is that as the fuel burns from the outside toward the center it scarp throwing off gas and cooking the coal ahead of it. The hot air from the air-blast ring and soot uniting with the gases causes them to burn, producing a continuous gas and coke fire, from which there is not any smoke or soot, comparatively few ashes, and never any cinders.

HEATS THE FLOOR.—The indirect rays of the fire being always against the fire pot, the greater part of the heat is radiated from it downward, heating the floor as well as a base burner does.

ECONOMY.—Two things that are not true of the ordinary size stove, giving as continuous and uniform a heat as herebefore could only be obtained with hard coal.

DURABILITY.—This is the only construction where air is admitted over the fire that will stand for any length of time. Our fire pot is practically indestructible. We guarantee it for five years.
