

If You are Subject to Colds

This Editorial will Interest You.

A Great Majority of People Get One or More Colds Every Season and It is of Vital Interest to All to Learn How to Avoid and Relieve Colds Quickly, Since Colds are Said to be Contagious.

Some people think colds are only caught through exposure. This in return is contradicted by the fact that Arctic explorers are peculiarly free from colds. It is more generally accepted that colds are the result of civilized life, due to super-heated rooms and a very rapid change in temperature which causes the nerve centers to be depressed, and still more largely due to contagion—one member of a family imparting a cold to another by sneezing or coughing.

A cold means nothing if relieved quickly. That such a purpose may be accomplished, a quick aid to a cold is an essential. A remedy especially devised to relieve colds quickly is PERUNA.

PERUNA contains such ingredients that have an especially beneficial influence upon the inflamed mucous membranes and the quicker these mucous membranes are given the benefit of a remedy like PERUNA, the quicker the relief and the less contagion.

A neglected cold may become a serious menace to one's own life, and far worse, may endanger one's family.

We insure our homes against fire, our lives against death. Why should we not insure ourselves against colds if possible by having a medicine in the family chest that can be used at once?

PERUNA is a reliable household remedy for colds and should be in every home, for there should be a desire to combat a cold as quickly as possible. This is enlightened hygiene.

People who are feeble and run down are more subject to colds than persons in normal health. Such persons need outdoor life and PERUNA to help build up a strong constitution. If you have a poor appetite that is often a warning that you probably need a tonic like Peruna for Peruna aids the digestive organs. When your appetite is fair and work and exercise do not quickly tire you, your susceptibility to colds diminishes very much.

Persons who object to liquid medicines can now obtain PERUNA TABLETS.

MOTHER TURK VERSUS THE CLUCK.

Nature fake hatching and rearing turks with chicken stepmothers have been big factors in putting this country in the turkey graveyard class.

We have seen many fail by this method, and here are reasons for it.

A chicken's hatching temperature is lower and her eggs smaller than Mother Turkey's. Thus while turkey eggs hatch under a cluck they are not so strong, the mortality is greater, and as breeders they do not give so hardy a poult as those hatched in nature's way.

Clucks are generally set in a dry, dusty nest in barn or henhouse, the turkey nests on the ground, where natural moisture aids incubation and stronger poult result. The nest is clean, but the chicken's nest is frequently dirty and full of bugs. Thus eggs are infected and poult brooded.

A chicken is too small to brood turks. They soon outgrow accommodations, and some chill. A poult requires longer brooding than a chick and takes longer to feather, but in three or four weeks the stepmother starts to lay and quits them, but big Mother Turkey is roomy, warmer and sticks to them until they go to roost in the trees and there often covers them with her wings.

The cluck knows not how nor what to feed poult. She is a scavenger and drags them to the cozy manure pile, dirty henhouse and filthy hopen and fills them up with rot and microbes. She stuffs them with indigestibles and they die. Mother Turkey trills them away from filth and unfit feed into the beautiful green fields, where natural protein, the turkey grower, abounds, and there feeds them little bits of food.

When a hen refuses food try her on raw beef or milk bread. These are seldom refused, and raw beef especially is a good tonic for a weak fowl, but must be given sparingly. Meat foods and fresh, raw cut bones are necessities to the welfare of poultry, help to keep them in health and increase profits, but some feed their fowls none the year round.

The agricultural societies should employ men skilled in feeding and poultry diseases to care for the poultry exhibits. Many of our best fanciers have ceased to exhibit at fall fairs, not because they have no interest in the poultry exhibit or consider themselves too high up to exhibit there, but because they will not expose their birds to unskilled management.

There is an advance in the business of canoping all over the country, and why not change surplus cockerels into birds that sell for more than turkeys and are easier to raise. Try it and be convinced.

New Jersey is well blessed with poultry associations, and every association is on the hunt for chicken thieves, and in that state chicken thieves get the limit.

A young girl was recently sent to a York (Pa.) market to buy a dressed fowl. Her mother at once detected that the purchased fowl was dressed after it had died of disease. That girl kept the carcass for a week until the seller came to market and then slammed the fowl down on her stand, explained and threatened to inform the marketmaster if the price wasn't at once returned. The seller quickly handed over the cash, but should have been jailed, as all others who do a putrid business.

OH, WHAT A CINCHI!

When grandpa needed a new suit He caught an old black ram. Quick clipped the wool off of his hide And gave it to grandmam.

She spun it on her spinning wheel. She worked it out by hand, And soon your granddad cut a swell In a black suit so grand.

And if he wanted summer pants She made them out of flax, And soon your granddad cut a swell In a black suit so grand.

And went into his barnyard And knocked a big steer down And yanked the hide right off of him And took it down to town.

That hide was tanned in double quick, The cobbler lit his feet, And there he had a pair of boots The present day can't beat.

And if your granddad sported socks The women knit him some. His flannels, mitts and pulse warmers— They, too, were made "to hum."

And when your granddad wanted hats He didn't go to the shop; He simply went into the woods And let his rifle pop.

And down he brought a big fat coon Or skinned a handsome skunk, And soon he sported the best cap of all dudes in Squeadunk.

No wonder granddaddy got rich. He couldn't help but do it. He didn't spend for this or that; He shot it or he grew it.

TRAP NEST YOUR HENS.

The Oregon experiment station after long and thorough experiments with trap nests declares that from 25 to 50 per cent of hens in average flocks do not lay enough eggs to pay their board.

We often blame the weather, the feed or our human bungling when hens don't lay, but it's sometimes the hen.

She can't lay. It's not in her. The Missouri and Storms egg competitions show up the hen and the practical value of the trap nest.

The hens at these contests are entered in competition by poultrymen who think they know a layer when they see her. But the revelation of the trap nest has shown that mighty few humans can pick a layer and that "there is no particular shape or type that indicates good laying qualities, so far as our present knowledge goes."

That's what the Missouri bulletin says, and results seem to prove it.

We have before us photographs of thirty-two of the hens that competed at the Missouri contest.

There is little difference in their appearance, but their trap nest egg records show a difference of from 281 eggs clear down to seven.

One hen didn't lay all year. The hen that laid only twenty eggs looks just as good as the one that won the individual egg record with a 281 egg record.

Here appearances are certainly deceptive, and really the only way to catch the drones is to trap nest them, and the time to trap nest them is from the time they start to lay in October or November to April, for then is the time that a hen shows whether she's profitable or not.

Trap nests pay. Better buy or make one.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

At the American Feed association session in Chicago it was reported that $300,000,000 was expended for chicken feed in the United States in 1912. Of course this does not represent all that was bought or used, but it's enough to show that the hen business is going some and furnishing sources of employment for many people.

Those who see the large exhibits of the various breeds and varieties of poultry at fairs and shows seldom think of the vast amount of toll, expense and thought that bringing poultry to such perfection has required. A comparison of modern poultry with the old drug hill hen and a study of their product should lead us to appreciate the thoroughbred more and more.

When a hen refuses food try her on raw beef or milk bread. These are seldom refused, and raw beef especially is a good tonic for a weak fowl, but must be given sparingly. Meat foods and fresh, raw cut bones are necessities to the welfare of poultry, help to keep them in health and increase profits, but some feed their fowls none the year round.
