Eusel Bartley has been absent from the first grade this week.

Thomas Sweeney has entered the third grade.

The drills in addition in the upper grades are beginning to show effect.

Mrs. St. Clair spent Saturday and Sunday in Marine City.

Mary Robbins has entered the 7th grade.

Mrs. John Sheehy visited the 7th and 8th grades this week.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Report cards Wednesday.

Class foot ball game Friday.

Rhetorical program Friday p. m.

Thirty-six pupils took part in the migration Tuesday morning.

The Seniors will give their first party at Kathryn McMahon's home Thursday evening.

The English X class has begun the study of George Elliott's "Silas Marner." The pupils will dramatize some parts in class.

The girls' basket ball has arrived and out-door practice will soon start.

A large picture of Wilson has been placed in a prominent place in the English room by some of the ardent admirers of the president in the American History class. It is rumored that a picture of Hughes will be forthcoming.

The English IX class is studying Scott's "Lady of the Lake."

Miss Buck will spend the week end in Detroit.

The Ancient History people journey to Greece daily. They are learning the places of historic interest and the Greek myths associated with them.

The juniors are planning on a social evening next week. It is evident that the Juniors do not intend to be behind the Seniors in social life in High school.

The Seniors have NO faults, The Freshmen have but two, Everything they say, and everything they do.

Not OUR Freshmen!
The football boys expect to go to Richmond Friday. Good luck to them.

MY HERO

By Dorothy Drouyer

I was swinging lazily on a twig of the old willow tree, whose drooping branches almost touched the muddy waters of the old mill stream. My dinner, which consisted of a nice juicy worm and a big fat beetle made me feel sleepy and growing tired of watching the rushing, turbulent flood beneath me, I had nearly dozed off when I heard the pleading bark of a dog and the cross protests of a child.

Opening one eye and cocking my head at an angle, I saw coming across the field from the big white house on the hill, a little curly-haired girl, whose pretty face was distorted with scowls; and behind her a massive St. Bernard dog, who held the hem of her dainty dress in his teeth and was gently pulling, although not hard enough to tear the lacy fabric. She kept scolding her hinderer and saying "go back, doggie, go back."

They advanced slowly, the dog pulling one way, the child the other, but as there was no immediate danger, the beast did not hold her back altogether.

When they reached the bank of the stream the child clasped her hands in glee and cried, "Me go wade; oh, ho! me go wade."

By this time I was wide awake and I grew almost frantic when I saw the little girl sit down in the mud and begin to pull off her little white button boots and light stockings. Oh! how I wished that I were one of those murderous bird-killing boys, for then I might rescue that sweet baby below me. But, alas, I was nothing but a fed song-sparrow and could lift no more than one of the child's soft brown curls.

Just as she was pulling off the second shoe and stocking, a woman appeared on the veranda of the big white house, and I could hear her calling, "Amy, Amy," and could see her looking anxiously about.

My feathers stood up all over, I was so excited for fear that she would not catch sight of her little girl. But after a moment she did see her, and as she ran down the steps and across the field toward us, her feet seemed scarcely to touch the ground.

Amy happened to look up and see her coming. Laughing with delight as if this was a new game the child sprang up and away from her mother. But the bank was covered with slippery mud and the little girl fell, rolling and sliding into the dark waters of the flooded pond.

My heart seemed to stop beating and the mother's face was white as death. But I, and I think the mother too, had forgotten that the dog came with the child, and before the water covered the tiny girl, the great beast had sprung into the water and they both sank together. The poor little mother was by this time nearly wild and I heard her moan, "Oh! Amy, my baby, my baby."

It seemed ages before they finally re-appeared, although it could not have been more than a few moments. When they at last arose to the surface, he had her safely, her dress gripped vice-like in his great jaws. He scrambled, dripping and panting up the bank and laid the little one at her mother's feet.

As for the mother, she stooped and gathered her darling into her arms and covered her face with kisses. The little thing was weak from fright, but she was conscious and she drew from her mother and patted the dog with her little dimpled hand, saying, "Good doggie, to fish Amy out." Her mother gave a tremble laugh and putting both arms about the huge intelligent animal she cried, "Oh! my brave dog; my hero, my hero." And I heard the little one, as she nestled to her mother, softly whisper, "My hero, too."

W. D. Stoner Killed.

Carried into a pulley when he became entangled in a motor belt which he was adjusting this morning at Buick factory No. 1, William D. Stoner, aged 40, a millwright, who lives at 319 East Fifth street, was fatally injured. His right arm was crushed off at the shoulder and his skull and jaw were fractured. He was taken to Hurley hospital where his injuries resulted in his death shortly after noon.

The accident happened just after the work was started in the shops. In some manner Stoner's clothing became caught in the belt he was fixing. The victim was carried rapidly into the pulley on a line shaft and terribly mangled before workmen nearby had a chance to realize what had happened and render assistance.

William D. Stoner was born in Whitely, Ont., February 14, 1876. Was married to Miss Anna McDonald, of Owenton, Mich., in July 1905. A widow and one son, Lefe, 8 years old survive.

Funeral was held in Flint on Wednesday, Oct. 4. Interment at A vondale cemetery.

Wedding Anniversaries

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Mitchell celebrated their fifty-second wedding anniversary at the home of their son George in Speaker township, on Friday, Sept. 29, 1916. Those present were: John and wife, of Atlanta, Mich.; William Jones, wife and daughter Hazel, of Adair; Mrs. Roland Jones and daughters Lucile and Mary, of St. Clair; Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Beadle, Mrs. Grant Welch and children, of Yale; Mrs. Albert Annacher and daughter Delcie, of Detroit. Mrs. Harry Lutz, of Jackson, was absent. A very happy day was spent and the occasion was a pleasant one.

Tuesday evening, Sept. 26, was the scene of a very merry party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Middleton when about 125 neighbors and friends with well filled baskets pleasantly surprised them, the occasion being the 30th anniversary of their marriage. Games and music was the order of the evening. In behalf of the assembly Joseph Vincent, in a very pleasant way, presented Mr. and Mrs. Middleton with a beautiful Spanish leather rocker, and at midnight a buffet lunch was served, after which every one left for their respective homes, reporting a very pleasant time.

Teachers Entertain.

The Misses Buck, Ritchie and McCall entertained in a royal manner the other lady teachers of Yale school at a course dinner, served Monday evening at the home of Mrs. A. V. Parmlee.

The occasion was a most pleasurable one.

WARNING

An Agreeable Surprise.

Members of Georgia Beavis' class in the Presbyterian Sunday school conceived the splendid idea of taking the makin' of a good meal, go to her house on Tuesday and altogether enjoy one more happy occasion with her before her removal to Lansing.

The ten young ladies carried out the idea and arrived at the house laden with parcels, only to find no one at home. Then there was a scampering to the neighbors and their telephones and all the small boys nearby were sent on a hunt to find the would-be hostess of this auspicious occasion. At last she was found and dragged away from the supper table at Mrs. Spencer's where she was just sitting down as an invited guest.

After that with big sighs of relief at the narrow escape from having a party with the honored one left out, all went to work and the pot-luck supper created much fun.

As a little token of remembrance the class gave Georgia a pretty cut glass vase.

L. B. S. Gathering.

Twenty-four members of the L. B. S. of the Presbyterian church held a social afternoon at the home of Mrs. Helen Reid on Monday. The occasion was made in honor of Mrs. Harrington, president of the society, who is moving to Detroit this week.

Sewing and conversation occupied the time until the supper hour when a bounteous pot-luck meal was served.

An engraved sterling silver teaspoon was presented to Mrs. Harrington as a memory token, and showing in a slight manner, the appreciation of the members of her faithful work among them.

Entre Nous Club.

Members of the Entre Nous club held a pot luck supper and business meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Taylor on Tuesday evening this week. A good time was had. Officers for the year are: Mrs. Clyde Richards, president; Mrs. J. A. Menzies, vice-president; Mrs. George McIntyre, sec-treas.

Piano Pupils Wanted.

Ruth Menzies will receive pupils in piano instruction and voice culture. Call at house or phone 82.

PREPARE THE CHILDREN FOR LATER YEARS

THERE is no more serious question for you to decide, Mr. and Mrs. Parent, than the kind of training your children are to have. In many homes education and training depend upon how much the parents can afford to spend.

What about Your Boy and Girl?

Will Willie have to forego his dreams of being a civil engineer, or will Mary be deprived of the musical training she has been looking forward to? Will they be compelled after school years are passed to take their places with the underpaid men and women, untrained, without a vocation?

Plan now, when they are young. Bank your money—or better still, deposit a little to their credit in this bank regularly, and when the time comes there will be no necessary "skipping" to start them off right.
