DAIRY and CREAMERY

AGE TO BREED HEIFERS.

When Bred Too Young They Fail to Develop Into Profitable Cows.

The present high price and the scarcity of good dairy cows are a great temptation for the cattleman who has a large herd of yielding heifers of a milking breed to breed them at the earliest possible period and get into milk in order to get high prices for them for dairy purposes, writes a correspondent of the Farm and Fireside.

This, however, is a great mistake, as many a young cow has been weeded out of the herd as a cull and found her way to the butcher's block, when if she had been kept a few months longer before breeding she would have made a profitable milker for the dairy herd. I have seen year old calves bred when they were no more fit to become mothers than a six months old calf. This forced them to become mothers before they were two years old, placing them in a weak and nervous condition with not enough vitality to support the calf. They were expected to give as much milk and the milk as rich in butter fat and milk solids as the heifer that brought her first calf when a three-year-old.

A good cow born is usually proof that the owner is doing his share to make his cows profitable. An expensive stable is not necessary, but the better the accommodation provided for the animals the more profit they return. The picture shows interior of an up to date cow stable.

A year old calf is growing so fast that it takes about all the feed she can consume to supply her with the proper elements of bone and muscle making. If she is bred at this stage her work of bone, muscle and hair making is doubly increased, which is too much for her constitution. And as nature forces her to divide a certain portion of the food consumed by her with her calf (or rather the substance of the food) her own body does not receive sufficient nourishment to keep it in a growing and healthy condition; hence some part of her body must cease to grow, and after her calf has come she is much smaller than she would have been had she not been bred.

The calves of such heifers are not generally of much account—they are small, weakly, peevish things which are often not worth the trouble of raising.

I always try to breed my heifers at the age of two years, never before that age, and after I have bred them I am particular about their welfare.

While pregnant a little dry feed mixed along with what they get on the pasture during the summer season, with plenty of pure fresh water, goes a long way toward bringing the cow out in good shape after her calf has come and insures a profitable dairy cow and a robust, healthy and valuable calf.

BARLEY AS A COW FEED.

Experiments Indicate That It Is Not So Good as Mixed Grain Ration.

In order to determine whether barley has a tendency to dry up milk cows, as is sometimes claimed, five cows in the university farm dairy herd have been fed rolled barley as exclusive grain feed for varying periods during the past two years.

Woll reports that the production of one cow during the past two lactation periods was considerably increased over that during the first lactation period when mixed grain was fed, while the other cows produced somewhat less milk or butter fat on barley than during the corresponding periods when fed mixed grain.

The results do not indicate that the feeding of barley tends to dry up milk cows, but they suggest that most cows do not do as well on barley alone as on mixed grain rations. Three of the cows had heavier average body weights when on barley than when fed mixed grain, while the opposite was true in the case of one cow.—Annual Report of Director of California Experiment Station.

When Cow Holds Up Milk.

When a cow holds up her milk massage the udder gently for a few minutes before starting to milk, and let the cow have some relaxed feed to eat at milking times. Possibly she may let down her milk if a calf is placed near her.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. # To the Expositor Subscribers

We have found it necessary, owing to the constantly increasing cost of everything used in the make-up of a newspaper, to raise our subscription price to

$1.50 per year After Oct. 1st, 1917

Up to that date subscribers have the privilege of paying up arrearages and as many years in advance as they wish at the $1.00 rate, but after October 1st, the price will be $1.50 to all our subscribers in the United States and $2.00 from Canadian subscribers. Other papers are raising their rates, and in order to make a living and just a little more, we must do the same thing.

But in establishing this new rate, we believe that we know the minds of our subscribers well enough to feel that they would rather have us give them the same quality of a newspaper, with a chance to better it as years go by, than to lower our standard of excellence in the slightest degree.

We are forced also to raise our advertising rates. No one knows better than the merchant how prices have gone up on all commodities and we know they will be with us in the matter. As soon as possible we will print a rate card and the price printed thereon will be strictly adhered to.
