CHURCH REVIEWS AID TO NATION

Catholic War Work of the Past Promises Future Usefulness to Uncle Sam.

MILLION WORKERS ENLISTED.

From the War Front to Every Corner of This Country Catholic War Council Helps Our Cause.

Washington.—Reporting to the conference of the entire hierarchy of the Catholic Church in this country, that has been called in Washington to consider the past and future work of the National Catholic War Council, the leaders of this nation-wide welfare organization have outlined a record of war work that extends from the front lines in France to the furthest corners of this country. They have also indicated comprehensive lines along which the full force of the millions of workers enlisted in their various activities at home and overseas may be turned to the aid of the government in the trying times of reconstruction ahead.

In summarizing the war work of its Committee on Special War Activities, in a recent report to the Administrative Committee of the National Catholic War Council, the following resume of some of the things undertaken and carried out by this organization has just been presented:

"We have co-ordinated and brought into a common service 10,000 Catholic men's organizations throughout the country. This co-operation insures our ability, which has been tested more than once, to meet the great opportunities that present and will present themselves. These men's organizations are used to conduct service clubs for men, to supply workers in many fields of endeavor, to co-operate with governmental agencies.

"Conditions at the beginning of the war revealed the fact that the activity of Catholic women had no national expression, no recognition. The Committee on Special War Activities has within the ten months of its existence co-ordinated into national activity the thousands of Catholic women's organizations of the country; it has established women's clubs throughout the country; it is sending Catholic women into every field of social work; it is giving them the opportunity of service in the visitors' houses.

"In like manner we secured recognition for Catholic women in overseas work. That we might train them, we established a training school for women with its own faculty. There is ready to receive them a home in Paris and two representatives of the National Catholic War Council, Mr. Denechoud and Mrs. Stocks Millar. The work of women abroad will continue for at least eighteen months to come, and we are in a position to extend it to other countries. The Catholic women of the country have responded to this opportunity in a wonderful way. The resources at our command are rich. All that is needed is training and leadership.

"As early as April 13, 1918, the sub-committee on Reconstruction was appointed. This committee gave diligent attention for months and anticipated in a surprisingly accurate way the problems of reconstruction. We have assisted in shaping the Government conduct of the problem of relief and of vocational training. Our workers are placed in the reconstruction hospitals throughout the country. Dependent upon these men is the future education of the wounded men and the college to which he is sent and in what he is to be educated at the expense of the Government. We are officially co-operating with the Federal Board of Vocational Training and with the United States Employment Service. Through the Committee on Special War Activities is published a series of pamphlets on Reconstruction, the first of which was an official pronouncement of the Administrative Committee of Bishops.

"The Committee has likewise taken up the work of supplying through our Catholic hospitals free clinical services for soldiers and sailors and their families and is extending this in co-operation with the Red Cross Home Service to all the larger cities of the country. The same extension has provided us with an opportunity to have and employ the clinical woman social worker. It is not too much to say that our work in Reconstruction plays a leading part, and the heads of Government Departments have told us explicitly that they have been aided more by the advice and help of the National Catholic War Council than by any other organization.

"Born of the emergency that necessitated the full co-operation and corporate service of the entire Catholic body of America, the National Catholic War Council has been officially recognized by the Government and has made enduring the great record of Catholic patriotic service. It has developed in a special way on the Committee on Special War Activities to do the pioneer work of co-ordinating the men's organizations and of practically creating a national woman's organization that would give the Catholic women of the country rightful place in war welfare work. The record of achievement that this report shows, slight as it may be, is nevertheless sure evidence of what the entire Catholic body of the country under the leadership of the Bishops can do in time of peace."

PROVIDING COWS WITH SALT

One of Things Easily Forgotten While Animals Are on Pasture in Summer Months.

One of the things so easily forgotten in the summer months while the cows are on pasture is to provide them regularly with salt. The easy way not to forget it is to place rock salt where they can get at it every day, either in the stall while they are being milked or in a trough or box in the pasture where they can lick it whenever they have the desire to.

Studies made at the Wisconsin station by Professors Babcock and Carlyle showed that cows actually require salt to thrive properly. The amount required depending upon the character of the feed which they receive.

Style Certainty Demands Early Suit Choosing

The wise woman will not tarry, if she would get that suit she has planned for this fall. The late buyer is bound to be disappointed.

Instead of the better styles coming in twos and threes as is usually the required number to fill the wants of style seekers, there is but one of a kind.

Right now the showing at this store is exceptionally good.

There are plenty of new suits now, and many are seeing and choosing. We HOPE to have a steady influx of suits all season, but if you choose now, you need not worry about future scarcity or higher prices.
