The Shoplifters' Decoy
By JOHN PALMER
(S. 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Say! See that woman!" whispered the little man with the dented derby, in the jewelry department of Hutchinson's, the big department store.

It was not the part where thousand-dollar rings and twenty-thousand-dollar necklaces are displayed in glass cases and watched over by lynx-eyed attendants, but there were a number of good gold bracelet watches and rings with real stones lying handily about.

The woman was walking slowly along the store. She was coming to the jewelry. She was passing the silks. Deftly she picked up a half-dozen the silk handkerchiefs, fumbled with them, sighed, and let them go.

Then, opening her fur coat, she displayed, just for a moment, an array of hooks and pockets inside, where neither hooks nor pockets ought to have been.

All the crowd was observing her. The store detective was already on the spot. And so eager was everybody to see something happen that they all pretended not to be looking at her.

At the end of the silks she whipped up six pairs of silk stockings, made as if to thrust them under her cloak, and then replaced them.

A whisper of excitement went up from the crowd. "A kleptomaniac," muttered the little man with the dented derby. The store detective tried to look as inconspicuous as possible. The clerks at the jewelry counter were dreadfully alert.

"Funny, that impulse to take things," said the little man. "If she was a poor woman, now, it would go harder with her. She'll not be able to resist those watches, you take my word for it."

The woman in the fur cloak, quite unconscious of the interest that she was arousing, came to the jewelry counter.

"I want to see some rings," she said.

"Yes, madam," answered the clerk, watching the store detective out of the tail of his eye. "About what price, madam?"

"Oh, seventy-five to a hundred dollars," answered the woman.

The clerk showed her some rings, the other clerk drew near; the store detective pretended to be a customer; the man in the dented derby put his hands in his pockets and whistled.

The tray of rings proved dubious. The woman picked up several, examined them.

"I don't think," she began.

The store detective stepped up. "Pardon me, madam, but I must ask you to step into the office."

"What do you mean? Who are you?" the woman flared up.

"I must respectfully ask you to submit to be searched, madam. There are two rings missing from that tray."

"Three," said the clerk with the tray.

"Quite so," said the store detective.

The woman strode six paces along the counter. The detective, bland and imperturbable, stopped her by standing immediately in front of her. All about them was a gaping crowd. The clerks leaned forward intently, watching her.

"Unless you are willing to submit to a search, madam, I must call the police."

The woman struggled. Her fur coat opened, disclosing the hooks and pockets. The pockets were filled with a miscellaneous of objects.

"For heaven's sake don't arrest me. I was a fool, I know. I was tempted so badly. What right have you to expose goods of such value and tempt people to steal?"

The detective led her away. In the room of the general manager a woman detective subjected her to a rigorous examination. She was puzzled.

"I haven't found the rings you spoke of," she said to the manager and the detective. "And these goods—well, they ain't ours."

"From some other store, I expect," said the detective.

"Well, what are you going to do about it now?" sneered the woman.

"Madam, please remember you have confessed."

"Say, are you going to let me go, or am I going to bring a charge of false imprisonment?"

There was nothing to say to that. They stood aside, and the woman swept to the elevator and passed down.

"I know her face; she's an old hand," said the detective, puzzled.

The manager of the jewelry department came running up. "They've got away with five thousand dollars' worth," he stammered. "Rings—watches—it was a plant. That woman didn't take a thing. It was the little man with the dented derby."

Righthandedness.
The average man today is right-handed. Estimates differ regarding the prevalence of left-handedness. Probably not over five persons in a hundred are left-handed. Criminologists find the percentage among criminals and epileptics three to six times as great. The ancients also were right-handed. In Judges 20-16, it is stated that out of 26,700 warriors only 700 were left-handed, a percentage of 2.62. A study of the tools of cave men of the Stone Age shows them to have been right-handed in the proportion of 140 to 135. Both hands seemed to have had equal preference—a condition which changed with the ushering in of the Bronze Age, when right-handedness came to the fore.

DAIRY HINTS

FEED POINTS FOR DAIRYMAN

To Obtain Maximum Milk Production Cow Must Be Attended to at Proper Moment.

If you would get a maximum milk production from your cows, feed the right feed at the right time and in the right amounts, advises M. H. Keeney, dairy specialist of the New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

Mr. Keeney gives the following practical suggestions for dairymen in feeding for milk production:

1. Feed all the roughage a cow will eat.
2. Feed some succulent feed such as silage or roots.
3. Feed a balanced ration.
4. Feed grain in accordance to milk production: For a Holstein or Ayrshire, approximately one pound of grain for each 4 pounds of milk; for a Guernsey or Jersey, about one pound grain for each 3 pounds of milk. A variety of grains in the mixture is desirable.
5. During short pastures supplement with silage or some green feed, together with some grain.
6. Feed and milk regularly.
7. Supply an abundance of pure fresh water at all times.
8. Give access to salt daily.
9. Purchase grain feeds on the basis of their protein and energy content and not alone on just the cost per cwt.

GROWING RATIOS FOR CALF

In Feeding Young Dairy Animals Material Supplied Must Be Flesh-Building—Salt Is Needed.

"There are two things to remember in feeding dairy calves," says E. A. Hanson, dairy specialist with the agricultural extension division of the University of Minnesota. "The feed must make them grow and must supply flesh-building material so they will be in good condition."

Growing feeds, he says, consist of skim milk, clover hay, oats, bran and oil meal. The fattening feeds are corn, barley and oil meal. For calves under six months old in good condition and having a soft, mellow hids a mixture of 30 pounds ground corn, 30 pounds ground oats, 30 pounds bran and five pounds oil meal, fed three to five pounds daily, is recommended by Mr. Hanson. A mixture of 30 pounds ground corn, 20 pounds ground barley, 40 pounds ground oats and 10 pounds oil meal, also fed at the rate of from three to five pounds a day, is advised for calves in poor condition.

"Salt improves the calf's appetite, so keep a box with clean salt in sheltered place where the calf may eat of it freely," Mr. Hanson advises. "Provide all the good clover or alfalfa hay the calf will eat up clean. Never allow the calves or yearlings to run with the herd."

NEW BETTER-SIRES EMBLEMS

Certificate of Improved Design for Recognition of Good Work in Improving Stock.

A new emblem of improved design for recognition of good work in improving live stock is ready for distribution by the bureau of animal industry of the United States Department of Agriculture. The certificate, which measures 8 1/2 by 10 1/2 inches, resembles a steel engraving and is suitable for framing.

A person holding an old emblem and desiring to exchange it for a new one may do so by returning the old one to the bureau of animal industry. About 7,800 of the old emblems have been issued to breeders and others working with the department in improving the utility value of farm animals, reducing the number of runts, and in other ways benefiting the live stock of the country.

Bull Is Most Important.
Have you a ready dairy bull? If not see your county agent about getting one or forming a co-operative bull association. The bull is the most important part of the dairy herd as he is the sire of your future herd.

Make Silo Fit Herd.
In installing a silo make it fit the size of your herd. The diameter should allow you to feed your herd at least two inches off the surface to prevent surface spoilage, then make it deep enough to last as long as you expect to feed during the year.

Silo a Necessity.
The silo has come to be recognized as a necessity on farms where ten or more dairy cattle are kept. In fact it is now recognized as the most profitable building on the dairy farm.
