CITY NEWS

DRAFT COMPLETED

The drawing of the numbers for the draft army aroused intense interest, you might say excitement, all over the country. Every registered male in the United States has been given a number, and occupies a certain and fixed status among the registrants.

In forming the first draft army the registrants will be summoned before the exemption boards in the order in which their numbers were drawn. It is yet to be announced just how each state will apportion its quotas.

If in the future, the government decides to draft more men they will summon the next in order for the new army.

In apportioning the draft to the several states the federal census bureau made estimates of the population as of 1917 as compared with 1910. In Tennessee, and five other southern states, it was estimated that there had been an actual decrease of population. On the other hand large increases in population were estimated for some of the northern states. These estimates have been much criticized.

The real inequality consists in the provision of the law, to be taken. The population of military age from 31 to 45, thus are exempted. Yet many of them would make just as good soldiers.

At any rate the War Department, after three months of preparation, since the declaration of war, has at last fixed the status of the young men who are subject to draft. They now know the order in which they will be summoned before the exemption boards. Within a few weeks we should know certainly who will comprise the conscript army.

Under the rules as promulgated there are certain classes whose exemption is sure. Those who can prove that a wife, child, or parent is dependent on them will be exempted. If this number is anything like as large as was indicated by the registration cards, about 26 per cent. of those summoned for examination will thus be exempted. Then a considerable number are in county or city officers, elected by the people. Then there are the aliens and the ministers. After all these have been weeded out the physical examinations will remove another large proportion. In examination for the regular army these run as high as 30 per cent.

Perhaps not over 65 per cent. of those first called before the exemption boards will finally go into the draft army.

It is hoped to assemble this army in concentration camps about October 1. They will be put through training and be ready for service in Europe soon.

Johnson City's National Guard unit now completely in the Federal service observed Regular Army routine yesterday. The boys are at their armory in the Gray building, Main street and take their meals at a local restaurant.

The first fifty men drawn are notified to appear for physical examination at Dr. Cox's office next Tuesday at 9 a. m.

Johnson City members of battery C numbering about 15 left Tuesday for Knoxville, where the field artillery unit will be mobilized before proceeding to training camp at Charleston, S. C. The final physical examinations held in Knoxville Monday morning brought the total roster of the battery up to 190 men, only two short of the full quota.

Four new locomotives of the Santa Fe type, to be used for the operation of passenger trains on the Knoxville division of the Southern Railway, will arrive within the next few days from the Baldwin Locomotive works at Philadelphia. They will be the first of a large order of new locomotives being constructed for the local divisions of the Southern Railway.

It is stated the first engines will be placed in service drawing trains Nos. 25 and 26, the Memphis specials, and Nos. 41 and 42, Washington-Chatanooga trains.

Parcel post packages may be sent to soldiers of the American expeditionary force at the rate of 12 cents a pound but may not be registered, insured or sent C. O. D. The post-office department announced today. The wrapper should bear the name of the addressee should be followed only by the name of the unit to which he belongs, with the words "American expeditionary forces."

DEATH OF MRS. S. C. WILLIAMS

It is with genuine sorrow that we contemplate the death of Mrs. Mary Mayne Williams, wife of Judge S. C. Williams, member of the supreme court of Tennessee, following a lingering illness, at her home here Friday at 4:20 o'clock. Judge Williams and his only daughter, Miss Gertrude Williams, were with her when the end came.

Mrs. Williams was born September 9, 1864, in Basil Fairfield county, O. She was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio. She was a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma society, and has served as president of the Monday club of the city, district secretary of the Woman's Church South and a member of John Sevier Chapter, D. A. R., being active in all of them.

Not were her activities confined to club work alone. She was a trustee of the Greeneview orphanage, where with her consort she erected a building, and with her own means has aided many a boy and girl to create for themselves opportunities denied. She was also the District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church South. A few years ago, with her husband, she contributed a handsome sum of money, the nucleus, with which to erect a library, a memorial to her son, in Johnson City.

She died on her silver wedding anniversary, she having been married to Judge Williams July 29, 1892. Two children were born to the union. Mayne Williams, who died at the age of four years, and Miss Gertrude Williams. Mrs. Williams' illness was contracted while on a visit to her daughter who was attending Barnard College, Columbia University, and as a delegate to the National Federation of Women's clubs in New York City in May, 1916.

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at four o'clock at Munsey Memorial Church. Interment in Montevista cemetery.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Geo. T. Wofford, James A. Summers, Amzi Smith, Frank B. St. John, Allen Harris, and Adam B. Crouch. Here for the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Irwin, of Piqua, Ohio; Mrs. Pearl Williams Kelley, of Nashville; Mrs. Carle, of Pittsboro, Tenn., and Rev. and Mrs. A. N. Jackson, of Louisville, Tennessee.

DEATH OF ROBERT SHELL

At his home in the eighth district Tuesday night Capt. Robert Shell, passed away, his death being rather unexpected, being due to heart failure. Capt. Shell was a splendid citizen. He served in the Civil War in the federal army and was more than seventy years of age. He is survived by a widow and several children.

SEPTEMBER VEGETABLES

(By C. A. Keffer, Division of Extension, University of Tennessee.)

Mature bulbs of any variety of onion planted in September will provide salad onions during the winter. Among the best kinds for this purpose are: Multiplex, Potato and Yellow Danvers. Long-standing spinach and German kale can be sown up to the middle of September.

Small quantities of radish and lettuce should be sown with the other vegetables, because they are only in an edible condition for a short time. By protection from frost, endive can be used from the garden until late December.

Kale and spinach will furnish greens from the garden throughout the winter, except in the coldest parts of the state.

Beets and carrots should be dug just before severe freezing weather and stored by covering with straw and a good layer of soil.

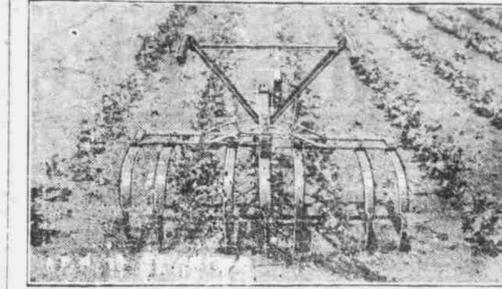

Tennessee is a leader in live stock production if the International Live Stock Exposition held at Chicago later in 1916 is any criterion. In fact, for the number of animals exhibited, Tennessee and the southeast drew down more prizes than any other one section of the country.

Some of the more notable winners were made by the Lespedeza Fann Shorthorns, and the Ames Plantation Aberdeen-Angus. The former received the senior female championship on the cow "Fair Gift," and the latter got first on aged bulls with their great "Black Poe," and the junior champion ship on their heifer "Black Bird Perfection 6th."

Each establishment won many additional prizes, all of which only goes to show that Tennessee not only equals but excels in live stock production when once she gets a chance.

There is one way for every man to determine for himself whether the world is growing better or worse. All he has to do is to ascertain whether the number of people who agree with him is increasing or diminishing.

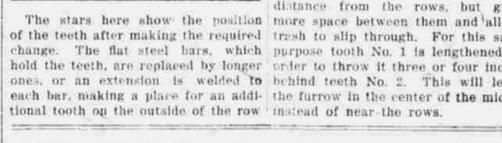

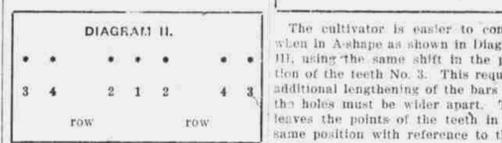

CULTIVATES SOY BEANS IN ROWS

On several Tennessee farms where soybeans were planted in rows this season, the cultivation was handled with an ordinary one-horse spring-tooth cultivator, sometimes called "Gee-whizz" or "Scratch'er." The slight changes necessary to make the "Gee-whizz" fit the new rows were made at the blacksmith's shop.

As shown in Diagram II, with this adjustment, three teeth are left in the middle and two teeth run on each side of both rows, covering one-half of the two nearest middles and allowing the horse to walk in the middle.

If it is desired to use two light horses instead of one heavy one, it is necessary only to remove tooth No. 1 and straddle the row, leaving the tooth No. 3 in original position. The distance between the teeth is about 5 1/2 inches. For 24-inch rows, holes should be drilled so that the teeth will be 6 inches apart.

The stars here show the position of the teeth after making the required change. The flat steel bars, which hold the teeth, are replaced by longer ones, or an extension is welded to each bar, making a place for an additional tooth on the outside of the row.

The cultivator is easier to control when in A-shape as shown in Diagram III, using the same shift in the position of the teeth No. 3. This requires additional lengthening of the bars and the holes must be wider apart. This leaves the points of the teeth in the same position with reference to their distance from the rows, but gives more space between them and allows trash to slip through. For this same purpose tooth No. 1 is lengthened, in order to throw it three or four inches behind tooth No. 2. This will leave the furrow in the center of the middle instead of near the rows.
